CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The wholesale business was good last week. All stock brought good prices, especially carnations, which were scarce. There were not enough red roses to go around. Practically everything was ordered up, even before it was on hand. The quality of the flowers was exceptionally good. The tremendous demand upon the market for cut ferns kept the amount on hand in a rather depleted condition. The supply of other decorative greens was sufficient.

The early part of this week shows a tendency for blooms of every kind, except sweet peas, to accumulate, and prices have shaded. Heavy orders for the middle of the week are expected to relieve prices.

The retail stores also enjoyed a profitable week. Every occasion, from the graduate recitals of the music schools to the University of Cincinnati commencement, used up flowers. At the high school exercises, June 3, every sweet girl graduate carried one or more bouquets.

Various Notes.

A deal has about been consummated whereby the firm of Weiland & Olinger dissolves partnership, the former retiring from the firm because of ill health. P. J. Olinger, who has now acquired Mr. Weiland's interest in the business and now has complete control of it, has been connected with the trade locally for the last five years. He has a pleasing personality, is popular with the florists, and these qualities, combined with his determination to give everyone a square deal, as he has in the past, should make the business a success from the start. Mr. Weiland intends to go to the Springs to complete the cure of his rheumatism. Then he expects to take a trip west to California. William Gardner has already gone to New Castle to take charge of the greenhouses. Fred Bruggeman, of Edwards & Co., has joined the force at the local sales-office.

C. E. Critchell, besides furnishing his regular trade, has been shipping many ferns to large flower centers.

George Bartholomew, of the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, O., furnished a local retail store with many red roses of excellent quality for their orders for the high school commencement. Other stock from the Miami Floral Co. was also good.

William Murphy has been filling many orders from outside the city for his carnations and other stock.

E. G. Gillett had some extra shipments of Beauties to meet the demand, but even at that he had to do some hard figuring to satisfy everyone.

J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. is receiving regular consignments of pink and white peas from Victor H. Thomas & Bros., Augusta, Ky., and peonies from Bloomhurst.

Weiland & Olinger are finding a good demand for their peonies, especially from out of town.

Saturday, June 4, about thirty-five friends of P. J. Olinger and William Gardner gave them a testimonial in the shape of a Dutch lunch, etc., at Labold & Newburg's banquet hall. The decorations were by John Jennings. Among those present were the following florists: William Murphy, C. J. Jones, R. A. Kelly, George Tromey, Harry Bowling Green, O.—Mrs. George E. Mercer, who now does business as the Mercer Floral Co., says trade all along this spring has been better than last year.

Waukesha, Wis.—Schneck & Bliese express great satisfaction with the returns from Decoration day. The demand for plants was greater than ever, making the best display at the cemetery ever seen here. The demand for cut flowers also exceeded that of last year.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23, 1910.

JUNE started cold and backward for the corn growers in Nebraska.

CANNERS in the central west are reported as having to replant much of their sweet corn acreage.

LATER advices from the Puget Sound cabbage seed section hold no better promises than did the earlier reports.

REPORTS from Denmark thus far are not unfavorable and at least a fair crop of cabbage and cauliflower is expected.

THE aster seed growers are beginning to be anxious for settled, seasonable weather. They need a good crop this year.

THE sweet peas in California are looking fine and another good crop is assured if weather conditions are ordinarily favorable.

THE Nebraska corn and vine seed growers have had unseasonably cold weather almost continuously since they began to plant.

THE condition of the cotton crop, according to the government report of June 2, is better than in 1909, and at the same time the acreage is larger.

C. R. ROOT, manager of the Barteldes Seed Co., Denver, is on the entertainment committee for the nurserymen's national convention, being held in this city this week.

THOSE English are the most peevish set of seed growers in the whole world—but nobody blames them. It has been a full year since they have had weather conditions that would give their crops a fair chance, though in the last weeks things look brighter.

OF all crops grown for seed there are few for which a good season is more essential than for garden peas. It has got to the point where practically all the peas are in the ground. The demand from canneries and gardeners has been so strong that, with light crops, supplies of stock seeds have been so encroached upon that it will take more than one really abundant crop to put the stocks back to where they should be.

one, nearly all the houses reporting showing a greater gain in March than there was falling off in the other months. Undoubtedly March of 1910 was the busiest month the American seed trade ever has experienced. Curiously enough, the complaint is of weather conditions, rather than of seed shortages, although before the selling season opened the cry of shortage was louder and more general than in any recent year.

The letters which follow confirm, in most respects, the opinions expressed in the letters published last week.

Otto Schwill & Co., Memphis, Tenn.

The general demand for seeds during the spring of 1910 shows considerable improvement over previous years. The planting of all stocks and varieties of vegetables has been heavy in this immediate section; this is also true of the planting of farm crops. The season has been rather unfavorable for most items. The cold weather during April hurt crops of all kinds very much, and even during the month of May there has been but little growth, as the weather has not been favorable. The prospects, however, are for a fair crop of everything. Prices on garden truck have been somewhat above the average this spring.

Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas.

The seed business in Texas will show up much better this year than last year. While we had an excellent trade early in the season last year, the dry spell set in about April and we did not have enough rain to amount to anything from that time until late in the fall. On this account crops were burned up badly all through Texas, and trade during the summer and fall months was poor indeed. This year, however, we have been favored with seasonable weather, trade has been a great deal better and the prospects are that it will hold up nicely during the remainder of the season, unless something unexpected should happen.

Of course, during the next two or three months our trade depends largely on the weather conditions. When we have extremes of dry and wet weather there is more replanting done than when the weather is more even and favorable to the farmer; so, from the way things appear just now, we do not expect any especial runs on seed, but look for a fairly good seed business all along.

We deal largely in both field and garden seeds. We have had a very good trade this season on seed corn, sugar cane, millet, cow peas, etc. The market on cane, however, has been weak for some time and the profit extremely small. Our garden seed business has been fine.

At present we are having an enormous demand for our poultry foods, which we manufacture ourselves. We are now handling from 10,000 to 15,000 pounds each day. We have also had a good business this season on bee-keepers' supplies, the best we have had for several years; however, we usually have a good business in this line. Our bee and poultry supplies are handled in one department and we find they work together nicely.

L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis.

In volume of business this season is thirty per cent better than in any previous year. The number of orders has not increased much, but they average larger. The month of March was an exceptionally good month, but, owing to the continued cold weather later, business fell off more rapidly than usual during the month of April. It has been a poor year for potatoes but a banner year for corn, and our garden seed business has almost doubled that of any previous year. Just at present there is a great demand for vegetable plants. The late frosts destroyed thousands of plants and wiped out the early gardens in this section.

Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis.

In addition to the unseasonable season, so to speak, the seed business in the northwest has been complicated by long continued railroad strikes, making deliveries difficult; also by the seed laws of the different states, with their varying requirements.

On the whole, the season just passed has been a most difficult one and, had not the situation been relieved by generally firm values and a brisk demand, the profits would have been meager indeed.

By the way, has the entire jobbing trade clearly in mind the fact that our duties on foreign seeds, under the new tariff, are about thirty-three per cent more than in previous years, and that almost every item in the cost of doing business is increasing each season, and that bare lofts are the rule and the crop outlook, both in this country and Europe, are not at all encouraging? Inspection of some of the prices made by travelers would indicate that some of the jobbing houses are either forgetting these things or have not noticed them.

BULBS A SECOND YEAR.

Can you give any information in regard to Dutch hyacinths, Von Sion and Empress daffodil bulbs that were left outside and bloomed in flats, as we had too many for our needs? Would these bulbs be worth saving and lifting after they are thoroughly ripened, and planting outside, as we would any bulbs we might import? These bulbs just bloomed and died down as if they were planted in the ground, except that they did not get quite so much moisture. C. N. & G.

Dutch hyacinths are not of much value a second season, but the Von Sion and Empress narcissi can be planted out in the fall and should bloom quite well next year. Do not dry them off too suddenly, or it will affect the bulbs' development. Of course, after the foliage has gone you can remove the bulbs from the soil and store them in flats in a cool shed or dry cellar. C. W.

BOSTON FLORISTS' CLUB.

Field Day at Cliftondale.

Delightful weather conditions favored the members of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club who made the journey to Cliftondale June 4 to inspect William Sim's large and well-kept place. About sixty journeyed on a special car, and there was a total attendance of nearly 150. The genial Thomas Pegler, the humorous and boisterous Mr. Hastings and other Park street salesmen kept everyone in good humor both going and returning on the special. All branches of the trade were well represented, and T. Mellstrom, of Sanders & Sons, St. Albans, England, was on hand to get pointers for his brother growers on the other side of the Atlantic.

On arrival, all passed through the office and signed their names in an autograph book, after which an inspection of the houses was in order. Passing through a melon house, the first of the numerous houses of tomatoes was entered. Of these, about 50,000 are under glass, each trained to a single stem, planted much thicker than they are ordinarily seen. At present these vary from two to five feet in height, the larger ones already carrying quantities of ripe fruit. Comet seemed to be about the only variety grown.

To prolong the tomato season until the regular outdoor crop comes in, large quantities are planted quite closely in frames. The sashes over these are now removed and the plants eighteen to thirty-six inches high are already carrying lots of fruit. Tons of fruit daily will be picked at the height of the season.

The big new 500-foot house of sweet peas was a grand sight. These are largely of the Spencer types, including such fine varieties as Countess, Asta Ohn, White Spencer, King Edward and others, with other varieties, such as Blanche Ferry and Mrs. Willmott. St. George attracted much notice from its beautiful color. These peas are now seven to eight feet high and carrying thousands of magnificent, long-stemmed flowers. Even here tomatoes are now between the sweet pea rows and seem perfectly at home.

Out in the fields an immense stock of fine single violets to fill the houses in fall were noted. Sweet peas sown in frames in late fall were also to be seen smothered with bloom. Away ahead of any of the spring-sown crops, cucumbers were coming along to replace the peas when they passed, no space being ever idle on this up-to-date establishment.

Outdoors also a block of nearly ten acres of sweet corn was advanced and will yield an early crop. Much of this had been started in pots under glass. Both outdoors and under glass everything was in most excellent order, weeds and dirt being conspicuous only by their absence.

Mr. Sim, not content with growing the handsomest of sweet peas, has chosen the most attractive spot in his grounds to plant his new dwelling, a charming, up-to-date, 13-room structure. The name given to the house is "Ben-Y-Gloe." The house stands on a southern slope, at the foot of an immense brown stone rock. The surrounding grounds are laid out and planted with fine taste, junipers, spruces and retinosporas being freely used, a hawthorn hedge making a street boundary.

Arriving at the house, the large party spread themselves out on the lawns, where, after being photographed, they were treated to an excellent luncheon by Mr. Sim, which was thoroughly appreciated. Peter M. Miller, acting president of the club, voiced the thanks of the members for generous hospitalities extended. Mr. Parsons, of the Sangers Board of Trade, being introduced, spoke of the good Mr. Sim was doing in the community and of his flourishing business. Other speakers were Michael H. Norton, E. Allan Peirce, M. A. Patten, William Nicholson and Thomas J. Grey. Mr. Sim made a few remarks, thanking all for coming, and said he hoped they would come often, as they would ever be made welcome.

Rousing cheers were given Mr. Sim before leaving, and on the way home many were the remarks heard that the speakers wished they could grow plants in the same way as seen at Cliftondale. The field day proved the most enjoyable and was the most largely attended the club has yet held. W. N. Craig.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Cold, rainy weather has prevailed most of the time since Memorial day. A chilly, drizzling rain fell all Sunday and Monday, but business was good, in spite of the weather conditions. Stock was none too plentiful, as the outdoor stock was not abundant. Peonies sold especially well, and the market was cleaned up of almost everything. Carnations sold on sight, they being the most reasonable of the better flowers. Cheap flowers were much in demand, as is always the case at this time. One of the east side florists reported the sale of 500 25-cent bouquets. A class of trade comes at this time from people who never enter a flower store on any other occasion. It is not uncommon to ask for a 10-cent or 15-cent bouquet.

The cold weather has been a decided advantage to the greenhouse men, for anyone who has spring planting and other work can appreciate the position at this time. The weather is the only thing which will delay this work, for if the sun shines everyone wishes the work finished at once, which is impossible. Window and veranda boxes are

Wheat Sheaves

Our Wheat Sheaves are made in our own factory, from best imported Italian wheat and by expert sheaf makers. If you use Wheat Sheaves in quantity, it will pay you to lay in a supply now—during June we offer special prices.

Send for quotations, stating number you can use.

GROWERS' SUPPLIES

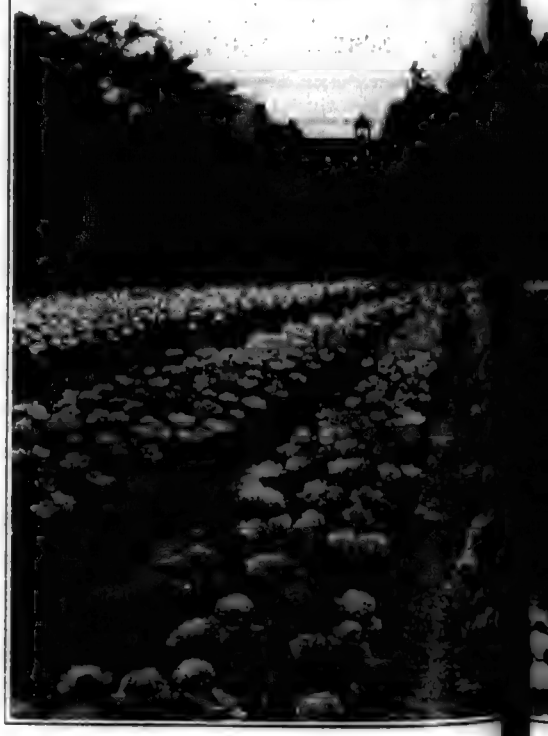
REVERO HOSE

The kind that won't kink, crack or peel, 17 cents per foot; in 500-foot reels, 16 cents per foot.

INSECTICIDES

We handle them all at manufacturers' prices. Order the one you like best, and you get it—we play no favorites, never substitute. We handle all kinds in such large quantities that you always get fresh stock when you order here—none of them ever stay long on our shelves.



Wire Work

Our wire frame factory seldom sees a slack moment—because our wire work is stiff and strong, the kind the design-maker likes to work with. In spite of the fact that our frames are better than most others.

We Will Not Be Undersold

The Finest Peonies

The home-grown Peonies are now coming in and for the rest of June we shall have the finest stock of the season. These local Peonies are not only the best cut flower varieties, but they are fresh from the fields, so handled as to reach each buyer in the best possible condition. Some cut tight for shipping, others fully expanded for immediate use. Good stock, $4.00 to $6.00 per 100; fancy, $8.00.

Butterfly Sweet Peas

There is no finer stock than these—they make a hit wherever used; long stems, large wavy flowers; exquisite in wedding bouquets or other fine work. Almost any color. $1.00 to $1.50 per 100.

Daisies, Yellow and White

If these are to be had on this market, we have them, but the demand is such at this season that frequently a whole day's receipts is ordered up in advance.

Fancy Valley

Call on us at any time; we always have it. No limit to our ability to supply —the best there is. $3.00 to $4.00 per 100.

Fancy Greens

The Fancy Greens are here: Adiantum, 75c to $1.00; Croweanum, $1.00 to $1.50 per 100, extra long fine stock.

We have large daily receipts of Asparagus Plumosus Strings and can supply any quantity on short notice, but the supply is so generally short in the market that advance orders are desirable.

ALWAYS THE BEST HARDY CUT FERNS.

Killarney Roses

We can supply your needs on Killarney—and you know you do need it—the finest, cleanest stock in the market and all lengths of stem. Nothing else will take the place of our Killarney. Good stock, $3.00 to $6.00; fancy, $8.00; special, $10.00 per 100. Can furnish Beauties and all other Roses in quantity.

Carnations

Many large buyers who have had years of experience with flowers from this market say they prefer our Carnations to all others because of the superior shipping and keeping quality of our stock. We ship great quantities to far distant points. If you are buying elsewhere and the stock is not reaching you in the best shape, try us. Try us anyway, just to compare.

Order Early

When you want special stock, or some special grade of stock, it is best to order as much in advance as possible. We make a specialty of these special advance orders—orders for anything to be had anywhere in America.

THE HOSKINS CUKES.

At Hannibal, O., Hoskins Bros. have four houses, each 20x180, devoted to cucumbers, from which they have had excellent results this season. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a snapshot made in one of their walks and shows the crop they were picking ten weeks from sowing the seed. While prices have not been especially high this season, they have had so fine a yield that it has been an exceptionally good year with them.

DISEASED CUCUMBERS.

I have been trying in vain to find out what is the matter with my cucumbers. I sowed them February 14 and they grew well until they were about seven or eight inches high; then hundreds of them rotted just on top of the ground and died away. We transplanted the ones that remained alive and they all grew like weeds. Not one died until lately, after we had picked them over twice, and they bore a remarkably heavy crop, being as healthy looking plants as one is likely to find. In the evenings they still look well, with not a blemish to be seen on them, but in the morning, as soon as the sun is up, they turn dark green and wither away, and by night they are dead. Some of the cucumbers have yellow spots, like a leopard. They died away as if a pest had struck them. In two weeks from the time the trouble started, the plants in two houses had all died.

Our ground is healthy and is full of manure and air-slaked lime. We have treated the plants with To-bak-ine. Please tell me if anything can be done for them. When we pull out the roots of the dead plants they look just as healthy as they possibly could.

M. G.

When the plants were small and commenced to die off, it was from a different cause than what is affecting them now. They were evidently attacked by the fungus that attacks all young plants in the seed beds, when they are not transplanted soon enough and get too thick and large, so that they are crowded in so tightly that the sunlight and air does not get in between them to keep the foliage dry, especially at night. The necessary precautions are: Avoid leaving them in the seed bed a day longer than is necessary; do not give them too much water, thus keeping the leaves wet, and do not plant the seed too thickly, or they are liable to get the fungous disease, which rots them off just level with the ground.

Your plants that are now dying are attacked by the most serious disease which the cucumber grower has to fight. It is called bacterial wilt disease. It is extremely contagious and spreads from one stricken plant to perfectly healthy ones in short order. The disease is a peculiar growth which stops up the tiny water tubes in the stalk of the vine and shuts them up so tightly that no moisture can be carried from the roots up to the leaves, even if the ground is soaked. It can be carried and spread over a house by the growers on their knives, by trimming a diseased vine and then going to healthy ones. It is also carried by the insects which chew on the affected plants and then go to the healthy ones and chew on them a while.

There is no way of saving the affected plants. They should be pulled out as soon as they show the disease, and carefully gathered up and burned. It usually attacks crops in fall and winter much more seriously than it does in the spring, because the disease is then carried in from the fields. It is as much to be avoided among cucumber plants as exposure to smallpox is among people.

Greenville, Ill.—David H. Zbinden says that he also, like the Maine florist recently told about in The Review, celebrated Mothers' day on two successive Sundays and "sold out slick and clean" each time. Mr. Zbinden started business here in July of last year. Previous to that time, he says, there had been no florist in the town for forty years. He is quite pleased with the trade he has so far obtained.

The Market.

We are enjoying sunshine and pleasant weather, after a week of rain. It rained nearly all of Memorial day, making it hard for pleasure seekers to get out. The florists had got in their work at the cemeteries and were glad of the fact. Trade was heavy. Everything in cut flowers and plants sold readily.

Various Notes.

Eric Thompson is on the sick list.

H. Oldham, of St. Marys, Pa., and Miss E. E. Venen, of Conneaut, O., were recent visitors in the city.

A. J. Baur and family are moving into their new home at 2605 Elmwood avenue. The Baur Floral Co. is removing from the old greenhouses to the new, handsome plant on West Twenty-first street and the city limits. Most of the spring stock has been sold out of the old place and the balance is to be transferred. The Messrs. Baur expect to be established in the new greenhouses and office about June 15.

John Kallenbach, foreman at the Baur Floral Co.'s greenhouses, met with a serious accident last week. He was driving a team with a load of vases to Trinity cemetery, when one of the horses kicked him and crushed his leg above the ankle. The injured limb was operated on at St. Vincent's hospital and three inches of bone was removed. Mr. Kallenbach is resting as comfortably as can be expected, but will remain at the hospital several months.

Mr. Wise, of the Erie Floral Co., will add the old Niemeyer place to his field of labor after June 15.

B. P.

Wilmington, O.—Geo. H. Moores, who was formerly in business here, has returned and will again take charge of his place at 429 West Locust street, which during the last two years has been leased to H. E. Mitting. Mr. Mitting has purchased a place in Indiana, to which he expects to remove soon.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds. Makes Grass Grow.

Has been used in almost every state in the Union with satisfactory results. Second and third orders now coming in rapidly from first buyers.

ORDER SOME AT ONCE FOR YOUR TRADE. WE GUARANTEE SATISFACTION OR YOU PAY US NOTHING. Send references.

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns it kills flat-leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours, and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich, green growth of lawn grasses, which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 square feet; 25 lbs. to 1000 square feet (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

PACIFIC COAST.

Pacific Grove, Cal.—The recent flower festival of the Pacific Grove Museum Association, held in the museum building and grounds, was a great success. Among the principal displays were cut flowers, potted plants and ferns from Thomas Lee, of Del Monte, and over 100 varieties of trees from the nursery of Harry A. Greene, of New Monterey.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The market has enjoyed another week of excellent business. The demand for Decoration day was satisfactory, yet not up to former records. The continued warm weather brought the outside flowers out in profusion; therefore the florists had to depend largely on the out-of-town demand, which was satisfactory. There is an immense territory of sage brush, where flowers are scarcely ever seen and where the people are dependent on this market for their supply.

Carnations are plentiful, especially white ones. Peonies, sweet peas, lilies and roses are in ample supply. The early crop of peonies was stored for Decoration day, with satisfactory results. Roses are also in good supply and demand.

With June 1 at hand, there is the usual run of June weddings, and for these lily of the valley bouquets predominate.

Various Notes.

With the arrival of Rex Oregonius, June 6, the Portland rose show opened its six days of splendor and merry-making, which bid fair to be without a precedent. New features have been introduced. The florists have all the auto decorations that they can handle. Many vehicles are decorated privately.

Max Smith's store is suggestive of Easter, as he has a lot of potted Easter lilies, which are a valuable asset and move well.

John Jensen, of Byron & Jensen, at Gladstone, Ore., committed suicide last week while in a fit of despondency, by taking cyanide. He was 28 years old and a native of Denmark.

The funeral of Postmaster J. C. Young was an occasion to turn out some first-class work, including several suggestive designs from the employees.

An injunction restraining the city from interfering with the street fakers has been dissolved and hereafter the fakers will be required to pay a $600 license. This will weed out the undesirable competition.

Sam Roake, at Clackamas, Ore., finds growing strawberries is a profitable side line. He is credited with producing the finest berries in this locality. E. R. C.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

Since Mothers' day and Memorial day, trade has settled back to its normal rate of movement. Last year marked Mothers' day as a legitimate member of the florists' red letter calendar, and as time progresses we seem to have a Memorial week rather than a Memorial day, so early does the shipping trade and the extra plant demand begin. It is the unanimous verdict here that we should not allow another Mothers' day to pass without a systematic effort being started in time to have the public correctly informed as to the wearing of colors as well as white, and other flowers as well as the carnation. Naturally, the divine flower will come in for its due share of popularity on that day, but not to the exclusion of other flowers.

Memorial day this year called for nearly all greenhouse products. A warm, early spring brought out most of the outdoor flowers weeks before, and, of course, greenhouse stock was needed, and it was easily sold at a good figure. Some iris and snowballs were about all the garden stock obtainable. Plenty of Easter lilies, spiræas, gloxinias and hydrangeas were sold in pots, as well as cut flowers, such as the usual supply of roses, carnations, Bride gladioli, columbines, peas, pansies, garden heliotropes, Shasta daisies and marguerites. Funeral work, as usual, was called for in the midst of the rush.

Green goods, except the native kinds, are scarce in this market. Huckleberry and ferns from the coast cities are used in all kinds of decorative work and funeral sprays.

The bulk of the plant trade is over; yet there will be occasional calls for hanging baskets and porch boxes all through June.

Local commencements in the high schools here do not create such a demand for flowers as they formerly did. Flowers are excluded from the stage as presents and only a certain number are allowed to be carried, on the theory that some would be given quantities of

ROSES
J. W. YOUNG
Upsal Station P.R.R., Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

Trade along all lines was quiet until Thursday, when a big change took place and the out-of-town orders became much in evidence. From then until Saturday night everyone was busy. Sunday was the hustling day for the retailers and it is hard to say which articles sold the best. Everything moved with a rush. Carnations, sweet peas, roses, gladioli, coreopsis, gaillardias, stocks, cornflowers and, in fact, all suitable flowers were eagerly bought.

During the two days preceding Memorial day we were treated to the warmest weather chronicled in San Francisco and vicinity for twenty-five years. This made it doubly difficult to keep flowers after they were exposed for sale, and the quality, for the same reason, left much to be desired. Sweet peas suffered the most and all of them were more or less withered on the edges. Since that time we have had much cooler weather, but all kinds of stock had been cut so closely that it is now rather scarce. The closing of the schools calls for quite a bit of stock of good quality and carnations are worth more at present than they have been in three months. Funeral work fills in nicely and it has been well distributed among the retailers.

Much needed remodelings are contemplated by several retailers and fresh paint and house cleaning will be in order for a few weeks.

Various Notes.

C. Kobyman will leave on a two months' trip to Europe in a few days. He will spend his time principally in Holland and Belgium.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.

FRANK KRSNAK has been appointed receiver for the Schroeder-Son Nursery Co., at Lafayette, Colo.

THE Badge Book for this year's nurserymen's convention showed 356 members, but quite a sprinkling of the names are those who have things they want to sell to nurserymen.

IT is reported that one of the stockholders of the Hyde Park Nursery Co., at Muskogee, Okla., has made application for the appointment of a receiver for the company, on the plea that it is in danger of insolvency. It is further alleged that the company has property and assets valued at about $15,000, which are not being properly handled by its officers.

IRVING ROUSE, Rochester, said a few days ago that it did not look as if he would be able to get to Denver for the convention, but that there is no need this year of a formal report from the committee on tariff. Since the passage of the tariff act of August 4, 1909, only a few points have come up, notably the collection of duty on evergreen seedlings after they were explicitly placed on the free list, and these are now in process of adjustment.

THE DENVER CONVENTION.

A Fine Meeting in Progress.

Wending their way from the east via St. Louis and a special train, the members of the American Association of Nurserymen found their confreres from beyond the Mississippi gathered at the Brown Palace hotel, Denver, to welcome them with true open-handed western hospitality. It is the first time the association has met west of Omaha and Dallas, and Denver was chosen for this year on a mail vote of reconsideration after St. Louis had been a first choice, so the western members had a double incentive to make the meeting memorable.

It is the thirty-fifth annual session. Though far from home for many, most of the old guard are present and there are many new faces—men who never before have met with the association. Anticipating, perhaps, that this would be the case, the program committee, of which J. W. Hill is chairman, arranged a specially attractive order of business, to hold the interest of the veterans, and win the allegiance of the newcomers.

The initial session was set for Wednesday morning, with the purpose of getting through in two days, and was called to order only a little late by President Stannard, who proved himself one of the ablest presiding officers the association has had. Speeches of welcome were made in the usual form by Col. J. S. Irby and J. H. Reynolds, after which President Stannard delivered the address which annually devolves upon the incumbent of his office. He reviewed the trade situation, recounted the year's work of the association and its committees and pointed out some of the lines along which, in his opinion, further work remains to be done.

F. H. Stannard.
(President American Association of Nurserymen.)

Funds for Publicity.

At the opening session reports were presented for the committee on legislation, entertainment, forestry, National Council of Horticulture, and publicity. The subject of publicity proved one of the most interesting of the lot and, after considerable discussion, it was voted to place $300 in the hands of the publicity committee to be appointed by the incoming president, to use as it sees fit for general publicity for the nursery business.

Transportation Problems.

The report on transportation matters, presented by W. P. Stark, was a strong document, making a splendid showing for the committee. It consisted of ten closely typewritten pages, yet passed over the details and discussed results only. At the Charlevoix meeting of the Western Classification Committee it was arranged that on shipments in refrigerator cars making more than a full carload, the part car should take carload rate. Steps then taken resulted in securing for westbound shipments the same rate as from the Pacific coast eastbound to Mississippi river and other eastern territory. This resulted in a saving on westbound shipments of from 20 cents to $1.15. At the request of the committee the Western Classification Committee eliminated the $5 per hundredweight clause in its classification and the report urged that all claims for lost shipments be kept on a reasonable basis as a means of preventing rate advances. During the year the troubles arising from guaranteed payment shipments being held up because the Official Classification calls for prepayment on nursery stock were pretty well obviated; shipments with freight guaranteed now go through junction points without delay. It was not found possible to get shrubbery rating for dormant roses. The committee had kept in touch with the Uniform Classification Committee and found the committee inclined to grant nursery interests anything in reason. There is fair prospect of securing a minimum weight based on cubic feet instead of length of car. This will give a minimum of 14,000 or 15,000 pounds on small cars and a correspondingly low minimum on larger cars, effecting an important saving on all carload shipments. The committee offered suggestions how to trace delayed shipments and advised that nurserymen refrain from statements to the effect that higher rates would gladly be paid for better service, it being the opinion of the committee that the railroads give at the present rates the best service of which they are capable.

John Hall.
(Secretary American Association of Nurserymen.)

Essays Read.

The afternoon program for the opening day was made up of a number of short papers, as follows:

"The Part Nurserymen Have Taken in the Growth and Development of the Nation," by J. B. Morey, Dansville, N. Y.

"Co-operation Between Nurserymen and Fruit Growers," by W. L. Howard, secretary Missouri State Board of Horticulture.

"The Commercial Side of the Nursery Business," by H. W. Marshall, Arlington, Neb.

"Effect of Tree Planting in the Middle West," by George H. Whiting, Yankton, S. D.

"Should a Young Man Choose the Nursery Business as a Vocation?" by A. Willis, Ottawa, Kans.

"Development of the Fruit Industry in Colorado," by H. G. Wolff, Denver.

"Magnifying Our Craft," by E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.

"The Influence of California's Horticultural Development on the Nursery Business," by George C. Roeding, Fresno, Cal.

Stereopticon Lecture.

Wednesday evening was set aside for a tour of Europe with Prof. John Craig, of Ithaca, N. Y. His subject was "Observations Upon European Nursery Stock and European Plant Growing Methods," illustrated with lantern slides from photographs made by the speaker on his European trip of last summer.

Thursday's Program.

The program of papers for the morning session of Thursday is:

"Crown Gall and Its Effect on Orchard Trees," by Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

"Practical Experiment with Root Gall on Apple Trees," by E. A. Smith, Lake City, Minn.

"Orchard Pests Still Unknown to the Colorado Fruit Grower," by Prof. G. P. Gillette, Fort Collins, Colo.

"Nursery Inspection as a Common Necessity of Nurseryman and Planter," by Prof. E. P. Taylor, Grand Junction, Colo.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.

FRANK KRSNAK has been appointed receiver for the Schroeder Son Nursery Co., at Lafayette, Colo.

THE Badge Book for this year's nurserymen's convention showed 356 members, but quite a sprinkling of the names are those who have things they want to sell to nurserymen.

IT is reported that one of the stockholders of the Hyde Park Nursery Co., at Muskogee, Okla., has made application for the appointment of a receiver for the company, on the plea that it is in danger of insolvency. It is further alleged that the company has property and assets valued at about $15,000, which are not being properly handled by its officers.

IRVING ROUSE, Rochester, said a few days ago that it did not look as if he would be able to get to Denver for the convention, but that there is no need this year of a formal report from the committee on tariff. Since the passage of the tariff act of August 4, 1909, only a few points have come up, notably the collection of duty on evergreen seedlings after they were explicitly placed on the free list, and these are now in process of adjustment.

F. H. Stannard.
President American Association of Nurserymen.

THE DENVER CONVENTION.

A Fine Meeting in Progress.

Wending their way from the east via St. Louis and a special train, the members of the American Association of Nurserymen found their confreres from beyond the Mississippi gathered at the Brown Palace hotel, Denver, to welcome them with true open-handed western hospitality. It is the first time the association has met west of Omaha and Dallas, and Denver was chosen for this year on a mail vote of reconsideration after St. Louis had been a first choice, so the western members had a double incentive to make the meeting memorable.

It is the thirty-fifth annual session. Though far from home for many, most of the old guard are present and there are many new faces—men who never before have met with the association. Anticipating, perhaps, that this would be the case, the program committee, of which J. W. Hill is chairman, arranged a specially attractive order of business, to hold the interest of the veterans, and win the allegiance of the newcomers.

The initial session was set for Wednesday morning, with the purpose of getting through in two days, and was called to order only a little late by President Stannard, who proved himself one of the ablest presiding officers the association has had. Speeches of welcome were made in the usual form by Col. J. S. Irby and J. H. Reynolds, after which President Stannard delivered the address which annually devolves upon the incumbent of his office. He reviewed the trade situation, recounted the year's work of the association and its committees and pointed out some of the lines along which, in his opinion, further work remains to be done.

Funds for Publicity.

At the opening session reports w presented for the committee on le lation, entertainment, forestry, tional Council of Horticulture, and p licity. The subject of publicity pro one of the most interesting of the and, after considerable discussion, was voted to place $300 in the ha of the publicity committee to be pointed by the incoming president, use as it sees fit for general public for the nursery business.

Transportation Problems.

The report on transportation matte presented by W. P. Stark, was a stro document, making a splendid showi for the committee. It consisted of closely typewritten pages, yet pas over the details and discussed resu only. At the Charlevoix meeting the Western Classification Committee it was arranged that on shipments in refrigerator cars making more than a full carload, the part car should take carload rate. Steps then taken resulted in securing for westbound shipments the same rate as from the Pacific coast eastbound to Mississippi river and other eastern territory. This resulted in a saving on westbound shipments of from 20 cents to $1.15. At the request of the committee the Western Classification Committee eliminated the $5 per hundredweight clause in its classification and the report urged that all claims for lost shipments be kept on a reasonable basis as a means of preventing rate advances. During the year troubles arising from guaranteed shipments being held up before the Official Classification calls for prepayment on nursery stock were largely well obviated; shipments with weight guaranteed now go through junction points without delay. It was found possible to get shrubbery rating for dormant roses. The committee had kept in touch with the Uniform Classification Committee and found the committee inclined to grant nursery interests anything in reason. There is a prospect of securing a minimum weight based on cubic feet instead of width of car. This will give a minimum of 14,000 or 15,000 pounds on standard cars and a correspondingly low minimum on larger cars, effecting an important saving on all carload shipments. The committee offered suggestions how to trace delayed shipments and advised that nurserymen refrain from statements to the effect that higher rates would gladly be paid for better service, it being the opinion of the committee that the railroads give at present rates the best service of which they are capable.

the pleasure part was more prominent than ever. Because of it the business program was started earlier than usual and will be crowded into two days. Appreciating that there would be more ladies present than at previous meetings, arrangements were made for their entertainment during the association's business hours. Wednesday afternoon they were taken on a sight-seeing trip through the city, in automobiles, as guests of the Denver Convention League and the western nurserymen. Thursday afternoon the same hosts will take the ladies to the matinee at the Broadway theater.

But the special entertainment by the western nurserymen is the trip over the celebrated scenic Moffat route to Corona by special train. This is to occupy the entire day of June 9, starting at 9 a. m. and reaching Denver again at about 7 p. m. Luncheon is to be served on the train.

The general entertainment committee consists of F. A. Weber, F. H. Stannard, Peter Youngers, J. W. Hill, C. G. Ferguson, A. M. Ferguson and Geo. B. Fravert.

The local entertainment committee is A. M. Ferguson, G. B. Fravert, C. R. Root, J. A. Valentine, C. G. Ferguson, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Fravert, Mrs. Root, Mrs. Valentine and Miss Fravert.

The committee on entertainment of the ladies is C. G. Ferguson, C. R. Root, J. A. Valentine, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Root and Mrs. Valentine.

The association's finance committee for the convention is Peter Youngers, J. W. Hill, F. H. Stannard, J. A. Lopeman, A. M. Ferguson, C. C. Mayhew and F. A. Weber.

MAGNIFYING OUR CRAFT.

[An extract from the paper read by E. W. Kirkpatrick before the Nurserymen's Convention at Denver, June 8, 1910.]

By the measure of discount we set upon ourselves, we are generally accepted. The work of the plant breeder, the fruit and tree grower should be valued and esteemed in accord with its nobility of purpose, its essential and indispensable service. Our duty demands services burdened with grave responsibility.

With all this the nurseryman remains his own worst enemy. The average nurseryman fails in his estimate of cost and of value of his wares. In this failure of estimate he loses not alone the price of his wares, but he loses the respect of his fellow man. He loses credit among business men, and ofttimes meets failure in his business and failure in life.

The discreet nurseryman, he who succeeds, must exert himself to the utmost tension continually. He must be cultured and skillful, patient and tactful, progressive and aggressive. In order to succeed he must ignore all competition in trade; he must produce things of such value that competitor and patron alike will desire them and pay the price. In all this sea of difficulty the only guiding star that can lead us to safety and success is fixed in price. Except we receive profitable price for our production we are doomed to failure.

substitute those which are superior. We should abandon effete methods, and install latest and best improvements. We should seek and secure highest and best grade of seeds, stocks, and scions for propagation. Best suited soils, and locations adapated to growth of specific varieties should be chosen. We should adopt latest and best improved methods of soil preparation, planting, cultivating and training trees and plants, and of making them immune from disease, insects and other enemies, and of keeping every variety and every grade true to name and up to standard. Digging, pruning, handling, packing, shipping, delivering and giving instruction for transplanting, should all be done with constant reference to maintaining and conserving life and vigor of the plant or tree.

The typical nurseryman is an industrial teacher, a master producer, discoverer and demonstrator, and should be accounted a most honorable and useful citizen.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Trade here for Decoration day was heavy, with about enough stock to go the rounds. Carnations were the leaders, as usual, and an enormous quantity was used. Roses were quite plentiful and were about all sold out. Sweet peas sold well and were scarcely sufficient in quantity to fill all orders. Cape jasmines moved rather slowly, but a good number were used. Some late shipments of these came in as late as June 6, and they all went to the barrels.

Trade has held up well since Decoration day. Though the stock of geraniums was about cleaned up for Decoration day, a good number of them have come into bloom since then and are finding a ready sale, as the bedding is not nearly finished, on account of the rainy weather. It seems probable that the planting season will run well to the end of June, and that everything in the line of bedding plants will be cleaned up.

Funeral work has been heavy for the last week or so and has kept stock used up closely at all times.

Carnations are holding their own in good shape and promise to be in good condition for some little time yet. Roses are more plentiful, but the quality is not up to the top notch. Quite a number of weddings are booked for the month of June, and business is likely to be lively in that line.

Various Notes.

Walter J. Marion, of Ashville, O., is getting things in shape to put up a range of three houses at Circleville, O. Though he will not be able to get on the land till about September 1, he is getting the material painted and getting everything ready to run up the three houses, each 30x100, on short notice when he gets possession. He contemplates running them in lettuce the coming winter, and next season putting them in carnations, etc., for the local trade. J. M.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

One of the best Decoration day seasons on record left us cleaned out of stock, but happy and well satisfied with the business. Stock was scarce, but by foresight and outside buying a fair supply was on hand Sunday and Monday. Beauties, roses, carnations, sweet peas and peonies, supplemented by irises and gladioli, were the flowers on the market. Prices were good and the demand better. Plants sold at a rapid rate. Everywhere stock was at its best, and for the most part well in bloom.

Various Notes.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. found itself out of stock at noon on Decoration day, and the sales of cemetery plants continued into the next week. Boxwood and bay trees sold well at this place this year, as the vacancies in the long display along the front of the greenhouses bear witness.

O. C. Swanson had an excellent business, and is booking orders right and left for wedding decorations and graduation bouquets for the coming week.

The Radisson Flower Shop cannot complain of the business. Transient trade and old customers flock in daily.

R. A. Latham had some good stock for Decoration day. He is also displaying some fine Richmond and Killarney, which sell at a rapid rate.

Miss Whitted has opened her new store on Tenth street and Nicollet avenue, and finds herself located in one of the "niftiest" stores in the northwest, all gotten up in the modern handicraft style, with artistic and attractive fixtures. The old store, on Fifth street, is still running. M. E. M.

Winona, Minn.—Edward Kirchner, proprietor of the West End Greenhouse, with Mrs. Kirchner, is on his way to his old home at Kiel, Germany, for a visit.

New Hamburg, N. Y.—W. P. Clyde, for whom Henry Osterhoudt is gardener, has a notable collection of Japanese irises. A short distance from this large bed and close by a magnificent clump of hardy rhododendrons, one looks upon a herbaceous border 600 feet in length, backed by a stone wall about four feet high. In front is a velvety lawn, which is in turn bordered with a large collection of rambler roses. The effect of color is impossible to describe, but is an entire exhibition in itself.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Memorial day business was immense and fully up to that of last year, if not better. Roses, carnations and peonies, as cut flowers, sold best, while plants of all kinds were in demand. All stocks retailed at reasonable prices. Trade since then has been good. Quite a number of social affairs, weddings and commencements give all the florists something to do. Outdoor flowers are scarce, owing to the lateness of the season. Sweet peas are just coming in and from now on will be plentiful.

Firing has been necessary later this year than for several years past. The weather is still cool.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons had a big cut of roses and carnations for Memorial day and could have sold many more. They cut over 3,000 carnations of good quality. This firm will build another chrysanthemum house soon.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. did its usual big business for Memorial day. They cut lots of roses and carnations, which sold well. Their stock of plants was complete and seasonable.

Henry Seymour said he could have done a much larger trade if the flowers had been at hand.

Louis Fritsch says business was fine and he could have sold many more plants, especially geraniums.

Karl Zeidler had a large stock of plants and had no trouble in disposing of them. He also sold lots of cut flowers.

Nellie Goodge had all she could do to supply the wants of the people for Memorial day.

Ben Kramer's wagon was much in evidence.

J. C. Elspermann disposed of lots of plants and cut flowers.

Dr. Knapp, who has two acres of peonies, consigns most of them to the Chicago market. He expects to plant two more acres to peonies soon.

Royston & Fenton will get one house planted to roses this week. They will plant Bride and Maid, not being ready to give up these two roses yet. Their sweet peas are just coming in and give promise of producing heavily.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The florists of this vicinity are experiencing the usual lull that invariably follows the Memorial day rush. The growers welcome the respite, as it gives them the desired opportunity of doing necessary work about their houses and preparing for propagation for rebenching in the fall. Funerals, June weddings and receptions have afforded an ample medium for the moving of all the stock that has come in, and from now until the end of the month recitals, school graduations and similar functions will keep stock from any heavy accumulations. Prices are back to normal and everything is settling down for the summer lethargy, except for the growers.

Various Notes.

Joseph Leikens has opened his store on Bellevue avenue, Newport, for the season.

It has leaked out that John Burke, who has been with William Hay, the rose grower, for a number of years, is the purchaser of the latter's range of greenhouses on Dyer avenue, Arlington. The sale was made several months ago through a broker, the purchaser to take possession July 1.

John M. Greene, 187 Harrison street, has given up the branch store which he recently opened at 218 Cranston street.

Johnston Bros., Dorrance street, have been awarded a commission to grow 100 pots of corn for the trades' procession July 4 in this city.

The Evening Bulletin's tree campaign, which is being conducted by a committee, of which City Forester Alexander Johnson, of George Johnson & Son, is a member, has reached nearly 2,000. The paper announces that there are seventy streets in the city without a tree of any kind thereon, and it desires to secure 10,000 trees before the close of the campaign.

Ralph Armstrong, manager for Wadley & Smythe, has been in Newport the last week, arranging for the season's opening.

Timothy O'Connor had an order last week of 10,000 lilies of the valley for one of the wedding receptions on the east side.

H. J. Johnson, 1860 Broad street, is considering making additions to his range this season.

Charles H. Hunt had several large pieces for the funeral of Ex-councilman James K. Trask. Mr. Hunt's business for Memorial day exceeded any he has previously enjoyed. He had six extra helpers.

Vose & Son, 241 Main street, Woonsocket, have 40,000 aster plants of choice strains.

George C. Kelly has the contract to cut the grass at Hope Reservoir during this summer.

H. H. Pepper is setting out several thousand rose bushes of the tea varieties on his new show lot, corner of Elmwood boulevard and Warren street.

George Whitford, of Phenix, sold a large number of bronze galax wreaths for Memorial day, as well as an unusually large assortment of cut flowers and potted plants.

Walter Sword, of Valley Falls, has taken charge of the grounds at the city hall in Central Falls, and is busily engaged in setting out flowering plants.

Miss Florence Willard, of the Hope Greenhouses, has just completed setting out several hundred begonias in front of the Union station, at Exchange place.

The June exhibition of the Horticultural Society will be held in Masonic hall, June 23 and 24. W. H. M.

GRAND RAPIDS.

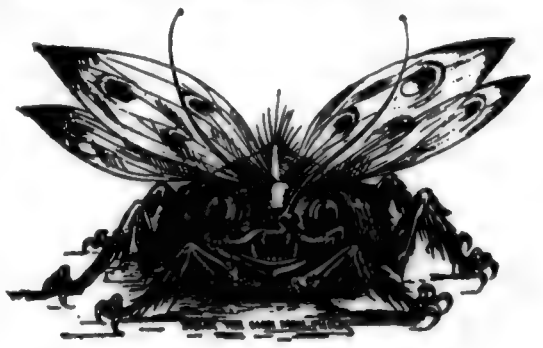
The Market.

Memorial day was not an ideal day for planting, as it was raw and threatened rain. The rain, however, did not come and people turned out in large numbers to decorate the graves. The florists consequently experienced difficulty in caring for the rush, which lasted until dark. The preceding week was the busiest in several years, both in retail and wholesale, as the out-of-town demand was strong and steady, and Memorial day itself was all that could be desired, the demand exceeding the supply.

Contrary to expectations, the peculiar weather conditions—reasonably warm days and very cold nights—resulted in so retarding the carnation crop at the start and so hurrying it as the important day approached, that the cut exceeded all previous forecasts. The supply was most plentiful and the demand cleaned it up closely. At the last moment orders were only partly filled, and some were refused for lack of flowers to fill them. Roses were in good supply, but "were not in it" with carnations. Outdoor shrubs and flowers were over, being spoiled by several heavy rains that occurred at night, followed by a sunshiny day. The volume of business was far in excess of last year's.

As for plants, chiefly geraniums, the demand was greater than on any previous occasion. Though more plants were grown, every plant in flower was cleaned out when the day itself arrived. In the rush of planting out, filling urns, baskets and porch boxes, and finishing cemetery planting, the florists had to work night and day to get done for Memorial day. The time allowed by the weather conditions for the work is so short that it is almost impossible to get through on time. On account of the cold nights, however, city bedding was not as urgent as in former years, and even now a considerable portion of it still remains unplanted. If the present cold weather continues much longer, some may even omit their work for this season.

Prices were reasonable this time. Carnations sold for 75 cents per dozen, and some at 50 cents. Roses brought $1 to $1.25 per dozen; sweet peas, 25 cents per dozen; daisies, 25 cents per dozen; lilies, $2.50 per dozen. While the peddler wagons sold geraniums at $1 per dozen to 10 cents straight, from 4-inch pots, the greenhouses generally sold at an even $1.50 per dozen and experienced no difficulty in obtaining it. Boxes were advanced to 60 cents per foot; last year they were 50 cents. A rumor is afloat that there are some boxes being filled at 37½ cents per foot; it is to be hoped this is a mistake.



The weather continues unfavorable, being rainy, cloudy and cold. We have not had a half day's sunshine in ten days, and there are no indications of a change. G. F. C.

East Palestine, O.—J. Faulkner is starting business here as a florist.

BOSTON NOTES.

F. W. Fletcher had a big wedding decoration June 6, using, among other flowers, hundreds of double pink peonies. He has another wedding decoration of large proportions later in the week.

A. R. Hutson, the genial salesman for W. H. Elliott, had a strenuous time last week, when he disposed of a quarter of a million roses. Even this number he expects will be far eclipsed another season.

William E. Doyle's window on Boylston street looked pretty last week with a tasteful arrangement of pink cattleyas and sweet peas of the Spencer type, on green velvet.

John Barr, of South Natick, is still marketing an extra fine lot of hydrangeas at 2 Park street. Like all plants handled by Mr. Barr, they possess the earmarks of high-class culture.

Henry R. Comley, on Park street, had some handsome vases of scarlet gladioli last week in his always interesting window display. Orchids, Spencer sweet peas, gardenias and about every other choice flower in season was also represented.

No better scarlet carnations are now seen than the flowers of Red Prince from Backer & Co., handled by W. F. Aylward. All the other carnations from the same firm are extra fine.

Philip L. Carbone always manages to keep his windows attractive, without using the masses of material other florists think necessary. A big vase of Smilacina racemosa looked uncommonly pretty last week. Small tables decorated with separate colors of sweet peas also showed excellent taste.

The baseball team from the Park street market journeyed to Madbury, N. H., June 4 and enjoyed a first-class game with W. H. Elliott's employees. The visitors were well entertained and thoroughly enjoyed their visit to the Granite State.

The beautiful estate of Nathaniel Thayer, of South Lancaster, of which A. P. Meredith is superintendent, was opened to the public June 2 to 5 and attracted hosts of visitors. The great attraction was the display of 5,000 hybrid rhododendrons.

A happy combination of summer and winter was noted at C Park street June 3, when the stalwart W. R. Nicholson arrived arrayed in a fur-lined coat and brand new straw hat.

James Farquhar's opinion of the so-called disease so prevalent this season among hardy lilies of all kinds is that it is due to the numerous late spring frosts we have had. These frosts still continue and potatoes and other crops were blackened as late as June 4 in some places.

The funeral of Ex-mayor George Hibbard, June 1, made considerable business for the leading retailers. There were 450 funeral designs in all, many being elaborate and costly.

The executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, after careful consideration, has decided to hold the next club picnic at Pine Banks Park, Malden, July 27. Pine Banks Park was selected as the picnic venue in 1908 and proved satisfactory in nearly every way.

William F. Aylward is handling a fine grade of Carnots, Brides, Maids and other roses at C Park street, the product of Mr. Aylward, Sr.

Julius H. Zinn, at 2 Park street, is still making a feature of Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward. He has also a fine line of orchids, splendid sweet peas and gladioli, and among other pot plants some nice gnaphalium (edelweiss).

Thomas F. Galvin sold more designs, bouquets and loose flowers for Memorial day than ever before in his history, the quantity being enormous. Other retailers also report similarly good trade.

John Booth succeeds E. O. Orpet in charge of the E. V. R. Thayer estate. He has been greenhouse foreman there for some time.

Another big orchid show in Boston in 1913 is already being discussed. Valuable lessons learned at the late show will enable the committee in charge to make needed changes. It is hoped some other city will, however, step forward and get up a similar exhibition between now and the next Boston show.

A. E. Thatcher, of the Arnold Arboretum, delivered an interesting lecture on "Trees and Shrubs" before the North Shore Horticultural Society, June 3.

E. O. Orpet, for twenty years in charge of the E. V. R. Thayer estate, South Lancaster, Mass., leaves there July 1, to assume the superintendency of the estate of Cyrus H. McCormick, Lake Forest, Ill. Mr. Orpet will July 1 have rounded out twenty years of service to the day. He is one of the best known practical gardeners in New England, and has made a special name for himself in the successful hybridization of orchids, many new and unique varieties originating at South Lancaster. His many friends in and around Boston are sorry to lose him, but congratulate him on his new appointment.

Killing frosts occurred June 4 in many parts of Massachusetts. Whole fields of potatoes, beans and tomatoes were blackened and great damage done to other tender vegetable and flower crops. Weather continues abnormally cool for June, but we are getting an abundance of moisture.

Greenhouse Heating.

THERE is little prospect for the early settlement of the labor question in the bituminous coal mines of the central west.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

A NEW JERSEY RANGE.

I have four houses, each 29x95, running east and west. My boiler cellar is at the west end of the second house from the north. What size of main shall I use to receive three 4-inch flows from the boiler, or would it be better to run three independent mains? How many 2-inch flows and returns will be needed in each house, to maintain a temperature of 55 degrees in zero weather?

C. F. C.

As the houses are arranged, it will probably be better to run the mains independently rather than try to unite them into one large main. If there were four mains, so that there would be one for each house, it would be a simple matter to adjust them to the houses, but if three 2½-inch flow pipes are used for each house, the flow of water can be equalized if four flows are taken off from each main and three of them are carried to each house.

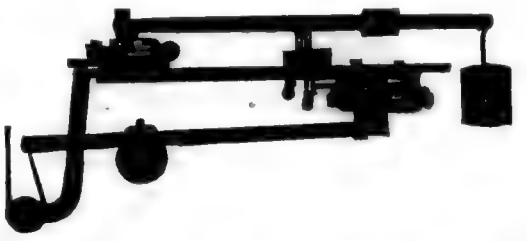
In addition to the three 2½-inch flow pipes, twelve 2-inch returns will be required for each house. One flow and two or three of the returns can be on each wall and the other returns can be under the benches.

SIZE OF BOILER.

I should greatly appreciate your kindness if you could tell me what would be considered a fair rent for each thousand square feet of glass. I am renting a place which consists of two greenhouses, one 20x200 and the other 20x175. There is a windmill to supply the water, a 6-room house, a medium-sized barn and five lots for a garden. There is no retail trade, as the place is five miles from town. The houses are 10 years old. I pay $75 rent per month, besides paying the taxes, fire, tornado and hail insurance, and all repairs. A local florist tells me this is too much rent, and my books tell the same. The land is valued at $75 per lot.

The houses are heated by steam. The boiler is 3x10 feet, with a dome 1½x1½ feet. It was a second-hand boiler when put in, ten years ago. The inspector allowed me a pressure of twenty pounds. The average temperature in the houses was 46 degrees in winter, and I burned 142 tons of coal, costing $650. Is the boiler large enough for the plant? Some engineers say "Yes," but florists say "No." H. W. R.

The boiler is probably rated at twenty horse-power, and is smaller than is desirable for the economical heating of a



Would You Save One-Quarter of Your Coal Bill?
INSTALL
A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—

"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.

"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.

"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

plant such as is described. Had it been somewhat larger, it would have maintained a higher temperature with the quantity of coal named.

The tenant's books would seem to be the best guide to the fairness of the rental. If the tenant can pay the rent and make a satisfactory profit, the rental may be considered equable. If he can not make a satisfactory profit, the rent certainly is too high for him. It is a habit of landlords to charge "all the traffic will bear."

LOCATION OF BOILER.

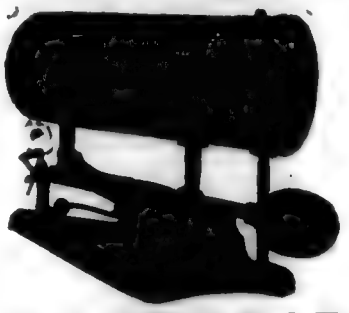
We intend to move from our present location, so as to have more space. We will enlarge our range of glass and should like to know which is the best way to run our houses. The location is on a corner in a Michigan town, one street running north and south, the other northwest and southeast. Which end would be the best place for the boiler room? W. E. T.

While the direction in which the houses run will not make very much difference, by having them run north and south it will be possible to have the boiler house at the north end of the range. If the houses are to be 200 feet or more in length, they could, if preferred, run east and west, and the boiler house could be north of the middle of the houses.

A SHALLOW BOILER PIT.

I am about to build two greenhouses, 22x50 each, here in northern Ohio. The ground is level and I cannot get drainage down more than two feet for the boiler. The houses will run north and south and will be connected to a one-story frame building, running east and west, which I intend to use for a boiler house and potting shed; the size of this building is 20x26. Will you kindly inform me as to what size and type of boiler would be best suited for my purpose, and the best way to pipe the houses? The houses will be connected, and I intend to grow carnations and bedding plants chiefly. I wish to use some of the space under the benches and should not like to use very small pipes. The houses will not be higher than ten feet to the ridge. I should prefer to use hot water. S. J. B.

Unless a closed system is used, the boiler should be dropped as low as possible, in order to secure a good circulation. Care should also be taken to carry the flow, and more particularly the return pipes, as high as possible for the same reason.



It will be well to use a 2½-inch flow pipe in each of the houses, with nine 2-inch return pipes, distributed on the walls and under the benches. The boiler should be one that can be set as low as possible, and may be either of the sectional or tubular form. For the two houses a boiler with a rating for 800 square feet of radiation will be desirable.

town desiring to include his valuable plant.

Concrete benches are in favor here, having been tested along with wood in the same house, proven cheaper and certainly cleaner. The sides are made three inches thick at the bottom, tapering to two and one-half inches at the top, with the bevel on the inside, and are reinforced every five feet with ½-inch pipe. Mr. Laub has made a careful study of this. One house built in this manner two years ago, as an experiment, has proved most satisfactory. M.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

That Memorial day sales broke the record, in both cut flowers and plants, is the opinion of R. Harry Cathcart, Jr., of the Yuess Gardens Co. This firm has plans under consideration for building an entire square of glass, with one range for bedding plants alone. Ground is being broken for a nursery to supply the local demand for hardy stock; about five acres will serve as a starter.

Geo. Chadbourn, of the Schaefer Co., invited the writer to look over the new miniature park, just completed, which puts a fine finish to their property facing the boulevard. What was formerly a dumping ground has been completely transformed and cannot but add to the value of surrounding property. They have had some elaborate wedding decorations of late. The climax came last week, when the wedding of the daughter of a millionaire called for a carte blanche palm decoration. The Yuess Gardens Co. furnished the flowers at the church.

Mark Crawshaw disposed of a large stock of bedding plants.

George Crawshaw believes in keeping up prices and sees no reason why geraniums should open up at 75 cents per dozen and advance with the season to $1, while across the river the price is $1 and $1.50.

Caldwell & Jesperson are well pleased with the season's business. They do considerable shipping. M.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Conrad C. Gindra, in discussing the difficulty which some florists experience in getting a good price for their geranium plants—$1.50 per dozen instead of the usual $1—said that the way to overcome this difficulty is to have stock that is worth the difference. Among his heavy sales, he disposed of 1,000 S. A. Nutt in 4-inch pots at $1.50 per dozen. M Gindra is opening a fine new flower store in the heart of the city.

G. W. Saltford has a splendid specimen of Cattleya gigas which he would have taken to the orchid show at Boston, could he have spared the time.

Poughkeepsie was visited by a severe hail storm on the Monday following the visit of the famous aviator, Glenn H. Curtiss. Fred White was the only member of the craft who suffered to any extent, he losing 2,000 violet plants. M.

Jackson, Mich.—Furnival & Son, who opened a greenhouse at 1045 West Ganson street a year ago, are building up a nice trade. They have just completed another house and, besides flowers, are supplying tomato, cabbage, cauliflower and other plants for the garden.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

"What is so rare as a day in June," 1910? Everyone is complaining about the weather, which has been unusually cool. The lack of sunshine, coupled with excessive rainfall, has made conditions extremely trying for the florists of this locality.

The month of weddings always brings business, and trade during last week was fair. The supply of carnations has been below the average; in fact, it has been almost impossible to furnish any large quantity of blooms. Other flowers are coming in equal to all demands. The trade in bedding plants is a bit slow, owing chiefly to the cool weather and the uncertainty of a frost, a killing freeze having just been reported from the northern part of the state. Reports are that vegetables and flowering plants have been completely ruined, entailing an enormous loss to gardeners and farmers in the northern counties of the state.

Various Notes.

The June meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association will be held Monday evening, June 13. Every member should be on hand, as important matters concerning the S. A. F. convention will be discussed. The chairmen of the local committees met on Thursday evening, June 2, and made definite plans for the work of each committee; these plans will be presented on Monday evening for the approval of the association.

The local florists who have missed seeing the magnificent collection of rhododendrons in Highland park have lost a great opportunity for this year. The many varieties and the wonderful coloring made a sight worth going a long distance to see. W. C. Barry, vice-president of the park board, has just returned from a trip to Boston and other eastern cities, and stated that he saw nothing in the east to compare with the display in Highland park. A valuable feature is that each variety is labeled, so that the visitor may know at a glance the particular species and variety. E. F. R.

Taunton, Mass.—C. D. Babbitt was badly bruised in one of his legs recently by a kick from his horse. Though no bones were broken, the wound was so severe as to cause serious lameness.

The Market.

Memorial day business, as a whole, was satisfactory. Any fears that flowers would be scarce proved groundless, as every market gardener was in the flower business this year. Peonies came in just right, bringing $6 per hundred. Candytuft was plentiful, moved well and was a good asset. Sweet peas were cleaned up, bringing from 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred. Carnations were of good quality, owing to the cool spring, and were cleaned up at $6 per hundred. Longiflorums, valley, lilies, orchids, Beauties, stocks and gladioli were plentiful.

The funeral of Congressman Jesse Overstreet occurred the day before Decoration day. This funeral, combined with the Memorial day rush, gave the storemen a good run of work, as there were flowers galore at the funeral.

This has not been the most satisfactory year for the flower bedding business. Owing to the cool weather, it will spread out through June. There has been more cheap competition this year than for some time. Some florists seem to have the idea that they must get rid of their plants, regardless of the price that they get for them.

Various Notes.

The Pahud Floral Co. has two new wagons and a new $300 horse. This enterprising young firm has the push and get-up which command success.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. had a decoration at Peru, Ind., last week. They sent a carload of palms and bay trees by express, to be used in this decoration.

Harry Balsley, of Detroit, spent a few days in this city last week, visiting the trade. Mr. Balsley reports the pot business good. He is also boosting the Elks' convention, to be held in Detroit in July.

Albert Pittet hit it right with his sweet peas for Decoration day. He cut thousands of them and found ready sale for them.

Hartje & Elder had as fine a lot of candytuft and feverfew as could be seen anywhere. They were right just to the minute and were sold out clean the day before Decoration day.

Baur & Smith have had great success with their white carnation, Shasta, this year. Mr. Baur states that it yielded more blooms to the plant than any other carnation that they grew, and that it does not crop, but is a steady bloomer. The bench of Shasta certainly looked all that Mr. Baur claimed for it, as it was one mass of blooms last week. H. L. W.

This section is our Pipe Frame Construction, using what we know to be the right number of posts and the right way to support a roof to make it thoroughly safe. Next to our Iron Frame House, it is the house we give our strongest endorsement.

PUT IT UP TO THE FIRM WHO KNOWS

You decide to build—decide how long and wide the house is to be—decide you want an up-to-date construction—decide in your mind that a house to meet your requirements ought to be bought for about so much. Then what is your next move—do you begin shopping about from firm to firm? Some of you do, but the long headed, practical grower puts it up to the firm who he knows, knows. He gets their price, considers what he is to get for that price; pays the price and gets exactly what he pays for. Gets what he pays for, do you mind those words?

He planks down his money with a comfortable sort of satisfactory feeling that his house is the best possible to buy for the money. He knows he has a house backed by a firm who "makes good"—he knows they make good because they have made good for over half a century. There is only one firm who has been in the business half a century. You know that one firm knows its business. So let us repeat: put your greenhouse building up to the firm who knows.

The Most Important Thing

About any statement in an advertisement is the truth or falsity of it. Some of the firms advertising their product are not over scrupulous as to keeping their claims within the bounds of truth and as a consequence the goods they sell offset the value of their advertising. This hinders the progress of their business. Let us say here that we are ready to stand back of every statement we have ever made in any advertisement and that we will guarantee our material to be all we claim it to be. You should investigate our material and get an estimate today on your needs.

READ WHAT SOME OF OUR BEST FLORISTS SAY ABOUT IT.

Morris County Gardeners' & Florists' Society.
Morristown, N. J., February 15, 1910.

Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati" . . . a grand acquisition and distinct from existing varieties; excellent in color, free-flowering, and apparently of good constitution. Certificate of Merit awarded.

A. HERRINGTON, WM. DUCKHAM, Judges.

Harrisburg, Pa., February 9, 1910.

It is the most beautiful plant of its kind I have ever seen, surpassing other Begonias of like character completely. I congratulate you on the possession of an extremely interesting and valuable plant, the spread of which over the country will do much to give more people a chance at beautiful flowers.

J. HORACE MCFARLAND.

Chicago, Ill., February 10, 1910.

The three shipments you made to us of your new Begonia "Glory of Cincinnati" arrived in fine condition, and were about the finest we had ever seen. The trouble with Begonias formerly was that they did not last long after they reached our customers' hands; but we have received nothing but the very best reports from these three shipments, nearly every one telling us how long they lasted.

FLEISCHMAN FLORAL COMPANY.

Chicago, Ill., January 5, 1910.

I think this Begonia is far superior to the various kinds of Begonias in size of the flower and keeping qualities. I think the "Glory of Cincinnati" will be a "glory" to you for years to come.

ERNST WIENHOEBER.

Buffalo, N. Y., February 9, 1910.

This plant was subjected to what I would consider very bad conditions. First of all, it was shipped during extremely cold weather, and second, it was cared for in the living-room with natural gas used for heat; but, with all this, I wish to inform you that this plant has kept far better than plants of the Begonia Lorraine which have been under the same conditions.

W. J. PALMER.

Detroit, Mich., January 4, 1910.

It is certainly an improvement over Begonia Lorraine. The plant is still at my home, and its blooms seem fresh as ever. I congratulate you on having discovered it.

PHILIP BREITMEYER.

Cincinnati, Ohio, February 3, 1910.

The bloom and lasting qualities of this variety are far superior to those of any Begonia heretofore on the market.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY

THE BOSTON MEETING.

Officers Reëlected.

All the official staff was reëlected, as follows:

President—Bertrand H. Farr, Reading, Pa.

Vice-president—C. J. Maloy, Rochester, N. Y.

Treasurer—J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa.

Secretary—A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass.

Director for three years—George C. Thurlow, West Newbury, Mass.

Date Is Too Early.

The annual exhibition and convention of the American Peony Society was held in Horticultural hall, Boston, June 14 and 15, in conjunction with the peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The season has been such an erratic one that setting the dates for the show was no easy task. One postponement was made, but the continued cold and wet weather made even the last dates decided upon much too early for Massachusetts growers. A full week later would have been decidedly better. Some of the large growers, like T. C. Thurlow's Sons, West Newbury, had few doubles open, and on all hands flowers showed the effects of the long spell of wet and sunless weather.

Given a week of clear weather prior to the exhibition, there would undoubtedly have been the grandest show of peonies ever seen in America. Taking all things into consideration, the exhibition was good, but not what Boston had hoped to give. Some growers reported considerable losses of buds from the late severe spring frosts, some varieties losing nearly every flower. The interest in peonies, judging from the attendance, shows no waning and they continue to hold their position secure as the most popular of hardy flowering plants.

While less peonies were shown than had been anticipated, some of the gaps were worthily filled by splendid displays of other herbaceous plants. The cool, wet weather has suited the bulk of such plants, as the splendid quality of the aquilegias, digitalis, dictamnus, hemerocallis and other varieties testified.

But when Tuesday, the opening day, arrived it brought tropical heat—90 degrees in the shade.

The Awards.

The following were the awards of the American Peony Society for the commercial classes:

Largest and best collection of named varieties, one flower of each, T. C. Thurlow's Sons, West Newbury, Mass., first; B. H. Farr, Reading, Pa., second.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

There were a considerable number of miscellaneous exhibits, the display being considerably augmented on the second day and filling the main hall and the lecture hall.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons staged a large collection of single peony flowers.

William Whitman set up a large display of digitalis, iris and peonies.

Mrs. E. M. Gill had a fine table of roses and peonies.

Mrs. Frederick Ayer's gardener staged Begonia Rex.

The Eastern Nurseries staged a large display of herbaceous flowers.

E. J. Shayler was voted a silver medal for a large collection of peony blooms of best and newest varieties staged in fine condition. Some of the best were Lucrece, Mme. Crousse, Le Cygne, a beautiful new white from Lemoine; Mme. Emil Galle, Jeanne d'Arc, Mme. Boulanger, Coronation, Octave Demay, Carnea Elegans, James Kelway, Baroness Schroeder, Mlle. Rosseau, Mme. A. Dessert, Boule de Neige, Duc de Wellington, Cytheree, Formosa Alba and others.

Business Session.

The business session was lightly attended, but the handful of peony enthusiasts who constitute the society's working force, under the leadership of President Farr, put through a considerable amount of work with thoroughness and dispatch.

Peony Festiva Maxima, Generally Named as Best White.

President's Address.

President B. H. Farr presented his annual address, in part as follows:

Eight years have passed since the American Peony Society was organized, for the purpose of trying to straighten out the confusion existing in the nomenclature of the peony and publishing accurate descriptions, by means of which all authentic varieties may be identified. It was known that the task would be a difficult one, but it is only on looking back over the ground covered that one begins to realize how almost hopeless was the task and how futile would have been the effort were it not for the singularly fortunate combination of men and circumstances with which it has been the society's great good fortune to be favored, the result of which enables me to have the satisfaction of announcing to my fellow members of the American Peony Society here assembled that there is now the most encouraging prospect of a speedy and successful conclusion of the nomenclature work which the society set out eight years ago to accomplish.

Most of the members of the society are more or less familiar with the steps which led to the organization of the society. We are indebted to C. W. Ward, who conceived the idea and issued the first call, and through whose efforts the coöperation of Cornell University was secured and the test plot established. We must acknowledge, too, the ready response of our home growers, whose generous contribution of plants, running into thousands, made the test plot an established fact. To these were added through the efforts of Mr. Ward and Prof. Craig, of Cornell, the splendid foreign collections of A. Dessert, Croux & Son, L. Paillet, of France, Goos & Koenemann, of Germany, De Graaff Bros., Von Leeuwen & Son, of Holland, and Peter Barr, of London, which have proven to be of the most vital importance. In fact, it is doubtful if without these we could have accomplished much with any degree of certainty.

The task of preparing and planting the peony plot was done by Cornell University, which from that time on assumed the great burden of the work, and it is doubtful if many members of the society realize the full extent of indebtedness we owe to the university and to those who have had the work directly in charge, especially to Dean L. H. Bailey, who during the last two years has given Prof. Batchelor carte blanche to go ahead and do everything which in his judgment was needed to bring the experiment to a successful issue. Also to Prof. John Craig, of the Department of Horticulture, who has taken a deep personal interest in the work, which has been done under his personal supervision.

We must not forget that while the work and interests of the Peony Society are national in their scope, the university is an institution of the state of New York, and, while the Peony Society has made donations toward the cost to some extent, the greater part of the expense of caring for the test plot, publishing the bulletins, photographing, etc., and the men detailed to carry on the studies, have been furnished and paid for by the university.

Last, but not least, we realize how much has depended on those at Cornell who have had the actual work to do and whose indefatigable and scholarly efforts have cleared the way to ultimate success. To Prof. J. Eliot Coit we are indebted for the check list containing all the names of peonies known to exist in commerce, upward of 3,000 in all, together with a most comprehensive bibliology of the peony extending back to the sixth century; also for the first bulletin, containing the history of the peony, classification, cultivation, etc., and the preliminary descriptive list of about fifty varieties.

To Prof. Leon D. Batchelor, who has so ably and conscientiously carried on the work from where Prof. Coit left it, we owe the second bulletin, covering the work of the nomenclature committee last year, with a careful description in detail of 290 varieties. Following up the plan adopted last year, Mr. Batchelor has, in coöperation with the special committee appointed for this work, visited other collections where the season is earlier than at Cornell, and so far over 100 new descriptions have been made this season, and it is expected before the season closes at Ithaca a total list of approximately 500 varieties will have been identified and described. It is proposed to publish a fourth bulletin early this fall, covering the work to date.

A new planting has been made containing three plants each of all the varieties so far identified and to these will be added this fall specimens of the additional varieties described, so that when the society again meets at Ithaca the net results of the work accomplished will be condensed and may be seen by all. This meeting should, in my opinion, be held two years hence, which will allow the plants to become well established. It will allow time also for the discussion of descriptions as published and the correction of errors before the publication of the final, official catalogue of the society. This, too, will mark the conclusion for all practical purposes of the test, and the accomplishment so far as this goes of the original object for which the society was formed.

General View of the American Peony Society's Last Exhibition in Horticultural Hall, Boston.

So far this season the committee has visited and worked among the peonies at Wyomissing, Andorra Nurseries, Cottage Gardens Co. and Geo. H. Peterson, Fairlawn, N. J., and it is a significant fact that the descriptions already taken practically cover everything to be found in any of these large collections with but few exceptions, covering almost completely the extensive catalogues of Lemoine and Dessert.

With the conclusion of the test at Cornell, what is to be the future of the society? Shall it consider its work completed and disband, or will it find new interests to keep it alive? The dahlia, the gladiolus and other flowers have newly-formed societies composed of their devotees, to say nothing of the old societies in other lines, and it would seem that surely a flower as beautiful and popular as the peony, with a history and pedigree not approached by that of any other flower, should find abundant support from its enthusiastic admirers to maintain its organization.

The interest in the nomenclature committee was largely a commercial one, arising from the difficulties which dealers experience in purchasing from each other with any degree of certainty as to what they would receive. But as dealers acquire what stock they desire they will deal with each other less and future sales will depend more on the popularity of the peony with the general public. New membership to the society will come more and more from the amateurs who become interested in the peony and acquire large collections because of their admiration of the flower, rather than from commercial motives. We should give the amateurs and private growers our warmest welcome.

The peony for Memorial day has become almost the national flower, and justly so, for certainly nothing else can so well serve that purpose. But it is unfortunate that in many places there is a tendency to consider that the peony has served its purpose as soon as Memorial day has passed. There should be no reason for this, as the varieties which follow later are superior both in beauty and keeping qualities to those which may be best for Memorial day, and it is gratifying to note that in many localities the usefulness of the peony for general decorative purposes is being recognized. In many western cities, particularly, there is a steady demand for blooms which are kept in storage until well into July. The most valuable varieties after the very early ones are the very late ones, which come in and are in demand after the earlier ones are gone.

In narrowing the list of varieties down to the best hundred, much will depend on the point of view. For the florist, fifty varieties would doubtless be ample. For him a variety is of no value if it does not keep well, ship well and have the right shade of color, and it must be fragrant. The landscape gardener will consider chiefly the habit of the plant, its floriferousness and its general effect at a distance planted in masses. The full size and heaviness of many of the finest cut flower varieties render them unfit for this purpose, and both classes would debar entirely, for one reason or another, hundreds of the varieties which would appeal to the amateur. Many amateurs admire the semi-doubles, the loose crown types and other distinct types, so that in selecting our list of the best hundred the tastes of all classes must be taken into consideration.

I must confess that my own taste in the selection of the varieties is largely that of the amateur, since my prime motive in growing peonies has never been for cut flowers as a specialty. The single peony as a cut flower is not a good seller, but where can there be found among all the doubles anything to compare with such singles as Stanley, Jupiter or La Fiancee for large massing of color effect? Their upright habit and lightness of flower enable them to withstand the rain and winds so destructive to the heavier double kinds. There are, it is true, a large number of inferior single varieties which should be promptly eliminated from our list, which is true also of a large number among the other classes.

We have previously been cautioned against the tendency to name new seedlings which are inferior to varieties already in existence. There are so many almost perfect varieties that many believe it almost impossible to make any additions that are genuine improvements. The American Peony Society should, and it is to be hoped will, come to be recognized as the authority competent to pass on the merits of a new introduction and they should be so conservative that their certificate of merit granted to a new variety should become a guarantee of the value of the new introduction.

The splendid collection which will be in existence at Cornell University will furnish the society with unusual facilities for judging a new variety. Whenever possible a specimen plant of the new variety should be sent to Cornell in order that it may prove its merits among the older varieties already established. This cannot always be done while the originator is in possession of only a few plants, which he would not wish to disturb or part with; neither

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

There were a considerable number of miscellaneous exhibits, the display being considerably augmented on the second day and filling the main hall and the lecture hall.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons staged a large collection of single peony flowers.

William Whitman set up a large display of digitalis, iris and peonies.

Mrs. E. M. Gill had a fine table of roses and peonies.

Mrs. Frederick Ayer's gardener staged Begonia Rex.

The Eastern Nurseries staged a large display of herbaceous flowers.

E. J. Shayler was voted a silver medal for a large collection of peony blooms of best and newest varieties staged in fine condition. Some of the best were Lucrece, Mme. Crousse, Le Cygne, a beautiful new white from Lemoine; Mme. Emil Galle, Jeanne d'Arc, Mme. Boulanger, Coronation, Octave Demay, Carnea Elegans, James Kelway, Baroness Schroeder, Mlle. Rosseau, Mme. A. Dessert, Boule de Neige, Duc de Wellington, Cytheree, Formosa Alba and others.

Business Session.

The business session was lightly attended, but the handful of peony enthusiasts who constitute the society's working force, under the leadership of President Farr, put through a considerable amount of work with thoroughness and dispatch.

President's Address.

President B. H. Farr presented his annual address, in part as follows:

Eight years have passed since the American Peony Society was organized, for the purpose of trying to straighten out the confusion existing in the nomenclature of the peony and publishing accurate descriptions by means of which all authentic varieties may be identified. It was known that the task would be a difficult one, but it is only on looking back over the ground covered that one begins to realize how almost hopeless was the task and how futile would have been the effort were it not for the singularly fortunate combination of men and circumstances with which it has been the society's great good fortune to be favored, the result of which enables me to have the satisfaction of announcing to my fellow members of the American Peony Society here assembled that there is now the most encouraging prospect of a speedy and successful conclusion of the nomenclature work which the society set out eight years ago to accomplish.

Most of the members of the society are more or less familiar with the steps which led to the organization of the society. We are indebted to C. W. Ward, who conceived the idea and issued the first call, and through whose efforts the coöperation of Cornell University was secured and the test plot established. We must acknowledge, too, the ready response of our home growers, whose generous contribution of plants, running into thousands, made the test plot an established fact. To these were added through the efforts of Mr. Ward and Prof. Craig, of Cornell, the splendid foreign collections of A. Dessert, Croux & Son, L. Paillet, of France, Goos & Koenemann, of Germany, De Graaff Bros., Von Leeuwen & Son, of Holland, and Peter Barr, of London, which have proven to be of the most vital importance. In fact, it is doubtful if without these we could have accomplished much with any degree of certainty.

The task of preparing and planting the peony plot was done by Cornel University, which from that time on assumed the great burden of the work and it is doubtful if many members of the society realize the full extent of indebtedness we owe to the university and to those who have had the work directly in charge, especially to Dean L. H. Bailey, who during the last two years has given Prof. Batchelor carte blanche to go ahead and do everything which in his judgment was needed to bring the experiment to a successful issue. Also to Prof. John Craig, of the Department of Horticulture, who has taken a deep personal interest in the work, which has been done under his personal supervision.

We must not forget that while the work and interests of the Peony Society are national in their scope, the university is an institution of the state of New York, and, while the Peony Society has made donations toward the cost to some extent, the greater part of the expense of caring for the test plot, publishing the bulletins, photographing, etc., and the men detailed to carry on the studies, have been furnished and paid for by the university.

Last, but not least, we realize how much has depended on those at Cornell who have had the actual work to do and whose indefatigable and scholarly efforts have cleared the way to ultimate success. To Prof. J. Eliot Coit we are indebted for the check list containing all the names of peonies known to exist in commerce, upward of 3,000 in all, together with a most comprehensive bibliology of the peony extending back to the sixth century; also for the first bulletin, containing the history of the peony, classification, cultivation, etc., and the preliminary descriptive list of about fifty varieties.

To Prof. Leon D. Batchelor, who has so ably and conscientiously carried on the work from where Prof. Coit left it, we owe the second bulletin, covering the work of the nomenclature committee last year, with a careful description in detail of 290 varieties. Following up the plan adopted last year, Mr Batchelor has, in coöperation with the special committee appointed for this work, visited other collections where the season is earlier than at Cornell, and so far over 100 new descriptions have been made this season, and it is expected before the season closes at Ithaca a total list of approximately 500 varieties will have been identified and described. It is proposed to publish a fourth bulletin early this fall, covering the work to date.

A new planting has been made containing three plants each of all the varieties so far identified and to these will be added this fall specimens of the additional varieties described, so that when the society again meets at Ithaca the net results of the work accomplished will be condensed and may be seen by all. This meeting should, in my opinion, be held two years hence, which will allow the plants to become well established. It will allow time also for the discussion of descriptions as published and the correction of errors before the publication of the final, official catalogue of the society. This, too, will mark the conclusion for all practical purposes of the test, and the accomplishment so far as this goes of the original object for which the society was formed.

General View of the American Peony Society's Last Exhibition in Horticultural Hall, Boston.

So far this season the committee has visited and worked among the peonies at Wyomissing, Andorra Nurseries, Cottage Gardens Co. and Geo. H. Peterson, Fairlawn, N. J., and it is a significant fact that the descriptions already taken practically cover everything to be found in any of these large collections with but few exceptions, covering almost completely the extensive catalogues of Lemoine and Dessert.

With the conclusion of the test at Cornell, what is to be the future of the society? Shall it consider its work completed and disband, or will it find new interests to keep it alive? The dahlia, the gladiolus and other flowers have newly-formed societies composed of their devotees, to say nothing of the old societies in other lines, and it would seem that surely a flower as beautiful and popular as the peony, with a history and pedigree not approached by that of any other flower, should find abundant support from its enthusiastic admirers to maintain its organization. The interest in the nomenclature committee was largely a commercial one, arising from the difficulties which dealers experience in purchasing from each other with any degree of certainty as to what they would receive. But as dealers acquire what stock they desire they will deal with each other less and future sales will depend more on the popularity of the peony with the general public. New membership to the society will come more and more from the amateurs who become interested in the peony and acquire large collections because of their admiration of the flower, rather than from commercial motives. We should give the amateurs and private growers our warmest welcome.

The peony for Memorial day has become almost the national flower, and justly so, for certainly nothing else can so well serve that purpose. But it is unfortunate that in many places there is a tendency to consider that the peony has served its purpose as soon as Memorial day has passed. is it possible for him always to send flowers to the exhibition, which may be held so far away or at a season when his plants are out of bloom.

To overcome this, I offer the suggestion that a committee may be appointed in several localities to whom a new variety might be submitted and, if it met with the approval of the sub-committee, they might recommend the variety and have it passed upon by the society as a whole at a later date. This would necessitate some delay in final recognition, which would not be unwise, as the merits of a variety cannot always be finally judged until after several years have passed.

Mr. Rosenfield has set us a good example of conservatism in this matter of naming new varieties, for while he has grown seedlings for many years he has introduced comparatively few varieties and I am sure all who have seen his Karl Rosenfield will agree that it is a worthy addition to our list, and that even among the vast number of reds there was room for this one. There is room also for an early red to compare with and bloom with Festiva Maxima, and while the standard established by the French growers is high, we should not fail to recognize and encourage any good thing which originates at home.

Secretary's Remarks.

Secretary A. H. Fewkes read the following paper:

The present membership of the society includes fifty-two active members and five honorary members. During the year we have lost one member by death, Thomas C. Thurlow, of West Newbury, Mass., who passed away July 2, 1909. He was a charter member of the society, taking great interest in all that pertained to it, and was one of the first to make a specialty of the peony in this country. In his death the society has lost a valuable member, and those of us who were privileged to know him intimately have lost an esteemed friend. Since the organization of the society, in 1903, we have lost by death three members, and by withdrawals and those who have dropped out, twelve.

Starting with a mere handful of signers in 1902, the membership had increased to thirty-six during the year of organization, and, notwithstanding losses, has steadily grown to its present number. It is encouraging to note that at least two of the members who dropped out have this year reinstated themselves, showing that the work accomplished by the society has a substantial value and that, although they have been a long time in maturing, the fruits of our labors are beginning to be available; and all honor is due to those who have stood by and made it possible to accomplish these results. The way has not been altogether a smooth one, and many obstacles have presented themselves, the most embarrassing of which has been the comparative smallness of our membership, which has necessarily limited our available funds, both for carrying on the nomenclature work and the payment of prize money to successful exhibitors.

The original membership was largely composed of commercial men, and included the greater part of the large dealers of the country. The number of these latter must necessarily be limited, and it is to the amateur class that we must look for future members and to which the commercial man must look for his most profitable business. The field is a large one, and every member should feel it incumbent upon himself to use what influence he may have with such of these as he may come in contact with, to interest them in our work and secure them as members. The circulars sent out a short time ago were a move in this direction, and were intended to help present the matter to the public.

From the inception of our society the interest has centered almost entirely upon the herbaceous class of peonies, particularly the albiflora varieties. This in itself is not surprising, as this class is by far the most common and easiest of cultivation, but the time must come when more thought will be given to the Moutan class, or tree peonies. In them we find an entirely different range of color, many of them being exquisitely beautiful in shade and texture. Preceding in their time of flowering, as they do, the albiflora class, they widen the peony season materially and add a peculiar charm to the garden. Undoubtedly the great reason for their scarcity is the impression that has gone forth that they are difficult to cultivate. It is true they are slow in coming to perfection and that grafting must be resorted to to perpetuate the varieties, but where love and skill are bestowed upon them these difficulties fade away, and the reward is a ravishing display of beauty that will repay all the time and care given them. Without doubt many will take exception to these statements, but in reply to them I would say that to be convinced that what I have said is true they should visit the gardens of Prof. C. S. Sargent, at Brookline, Mass., and see what can be done with the Moutan when its culture is made a specialty, as it has been done there under the management of Charles Sander.

The exhibition in connection with the meeting at Queens last June was a fairly good one, and did much credit to the exhibitors, who, though few in numbers, staged a large number of flowers. B. H. Farr, George H. Peterson, S. G. Harris, T. A. Havemeyer and John Lewis Childs were the exhibitors. Although the exhibition of cut blooms was a good one, the display in the fields proved the greater attraction, for it is seldom that such a magnificent display of flowers is to be seen. They were growing on perfectly level land in one immense block of about seven acres, with rows 500 feet in length, and offering an unusual opportunity for studying the individual characteristics of the varieties, as well as the color effects in masses.

The visiting members and friends feel deeply indebted to the Cottage Gardens Co. for the many courtesies shown them during the two days of the meeting, which was marred only by the unavoidable absence of C. W.

Nomenclature Committee.

Prof. Craig, chairman of the nomenclature committee, was not able to be present, so Mr. Farr, chairman of the special committee, reported on the work done, as follows:

It was realized last year that the season of study was altogether too short for any one locality to carry on the work without extending it over a number of years, and Mr. Jos. Dauphin, of the Cottage Gardens Co., and myself were appointed a special committee to assist Prof. Batchelor, and the season was greatly prolonged by beginning the work at Wyomissing, following it up at the Cottage Gardens Co., where the meeting was held, and finally at Ithaca. The immediate results of this course are shown in the large number of varieties added to our list in the new bulletin.

This year the same plan has been followed. In addition to the work this season at the nurseries mentioned in my address, the committee has since visited the collection of E. J. Shayler, here in Boston, and it is the intention, if possible, to visit other collections in the vicinity of Boston before leaving for Ithaca, where the work will be continued until the close of the season there.

It is expected by the close of the season that practically everything will be done in the old plot that it will be possible to do. There are still hundreds of names existing in the plot which it will never be possible to trace to any distinct origin, but the vast number of names originally existing there have been reduced to a large degree by the great number of synonyms found, all of which have been noted. As examples of this I might mention Edulis Superba, Dr. Bretonneau, Queen Victoria and others, which have been duplicated under twenty-five or thirty different names each, to say nothing of the host of red varieties, most of them of inferior quality, which are to be found. It would seem as if everyone who has a red of any kind calls it Delachei, or Francois Ortegat, or Louis Van Houtte, so that, strange as it may seem, these, our most common varieties, have been the hardest to determine which is the true variety. And of the many Delacheis it is a question if any of us are positive just which one is the true variety.

There is a common pink peony which, among its many other names, passes for Edouard Andre, but the true Edouard Andre is different in every way, being an immense very double flower, very late.

These are merely examples of some of the difficulties that the committee has had to contend with. Of the varieties left in the original plot it is doubtful if there will be many remaining which will be worth giving any further consideration. Doubtless the larger part of these have been unnamed seedlings sold in mixtures to which names have been given in order to distinguish them where they have been grown in nurseries.

It is not expected that no mistakes have been made, but the committee has had unusual facilities in making a wide range of comparison in every case, and we have every reason to believe that in most instances we have reached conclusions and that the errors existing will be detected and corrected before the final publication is complete. The decision of the committee may not in every way agree with individual opinion, but it will at least establish a basis upon which the work for the future may be done, and if it is adopted as a standard eventually it fulfills the object sought.

I wish to again call attention to the splendid services of Mr. Batchelor, and I also wish to make mention of the fortunate selection of Jos. Dauphin, who by his remarkable memory and ability to retain his impression of distinctions in color and form of flowers, and the long years of study he has given to this subject, has been able to render us invaluable services.

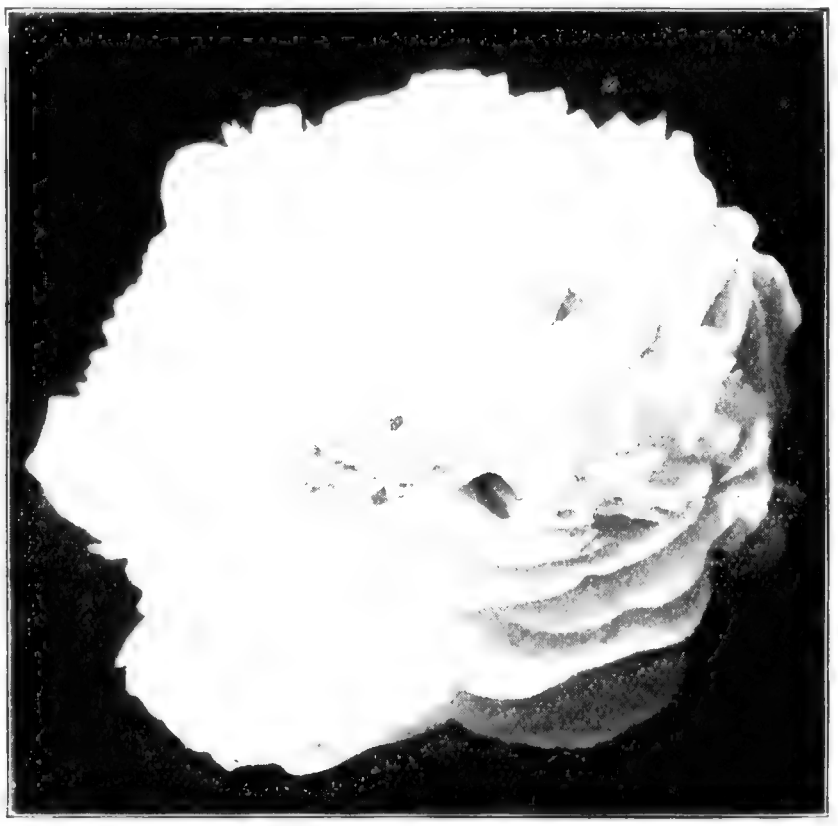
After a general discussion, in which President Farr spoke for the continuation of the work at Ithaca, a motion was adopted continuing the special nomenclature committee as previously constituted: B. H. Farr, J. Dauphin and Prof. Batchelor. It also was ordered that the society pay the personal expenses of the committee while at Ithaca on society work. President Farr spoke of the new bulletin to be issued, to include this season's work in describing varieties. It is to be published jointly by the society and by Cornell University, and it was voted to appropriate funds to take care of the society's share of the expense.



Prof. Saunders urged the society to encourage the raising of new varieties by offering medals and other awards for seedlings, but this did not meet with approval, a member of the nomenclature committee remarking that too many were now being raised without encouragement. Mr. Farr said raisers of seedlings should seek the society's approval of same before naming or disseminating.

On motion of A. H. Fewkes a new committee was authorized, to reconsider the recommendations of new varieties made in 1907. The president named William A. Peterson, Chicago; R. T. Brown, Queens, N.Y., and A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass. On motion, President Farr was added to the committee and made its chairman.

Five new members were elected.

Philadelphia Next.

After some discussion Philadelphia was selected for the meeting and exhibition of 1911, with a more or less definite idea of gathering again at Ithaca in 1912. A committee was appointed to have charge of the Philadelphia arrangements, consisting of representatives to be selected by the Andorra Nurseries and H. A. Dreer, with J. J.

Prof. Saunders urged the society to encourage the raising of new varieties by offering medals and other awards for seedlings, but this did not meet with approval, a member of the nomenclature committee remarking that too many were now being raised without encouragement. Mr. Farr said raisers of seedlings should seek the society's approval of same before naming or disseminating.

On motion of A. H. Fewkes a new committee was authorized, to reconsider the recommendations of new varieties made in 1907. The president named William A. Peterson, Chicago; R. T. Brown, Queens, N.Y., and A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass. On motion, President Farr was added to the committee and made its chairman.

Five new members were elected.

Philadelphia Next.

After some discussion, Philadelphia was selected for the meeting and exhibition of 1911, with a more or less definite idea of gathering again at Ithaca in 1912. A committee was appointed to have charge of the Philadelphia arrangements, consisting of representatives to be selected by the Andorra Nurseries and H. A. Dreer, with J. J.

Styer and President Farr, the latter to act as chairman.

Resolutions.

A committee on resolutions, consisting of Prof. Saunders, George H. Peterson and J. J. Styer, reported resolutions of sympathy for George E. Hollis, of South Weymouth, Mass., whose serious illness was reported; of condolence with the family of the late T. C. Thurlow, and of thanks to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for hospitalities and coöperation.

Among Those Present.

Among those present from outside the Boston district were:

Farr, B. H., Reading, Pa.
Saunders, Prof., Clinton College.
Dauphin, Jos., Queens, N. Y.
Styer, J. J., Concordville, Pa.
Peterson, Geo. H., Fairlawn, N. J.
Lahoney, Albert, Hempstead, N. Y.
Fewkes, A. H., Newton Highlands, Mass.
Thurlow, Geo. C., West Newbury, Mass.

ROOTING POINSETTIAS.

Please give us a little instruction in regard to rooting poinsettia cuttings. Ours all shrivel up and rot just above the sand within two or three days after they are put in. We have no propagating house, but have been using small boxes of coarse sand. W. S. G.

If you have not any regular propagating house, poinsettias will root nicely if you partition off a sash in one of your coldframes and use flats of sand for the cuttings. Put a layer of coarse cinders at the bottoms of the flats; lay over this some moss and then fill with sharp sand. Water well and press firmly before cutting the lines for your cuttings. Take the latter before they exceed three inches in length. Those with a heel are to be preferred, as they root the earliest and are less liable to damp off than those cut below a leaf. After taking off the cuttings, dip them in powdered charcoal or fine, dry sand to stop the bleeding. Keep the glass shaded and air only moderately for the first ten or twelve days. The flats will take a watering each day and may need it twice or thrice if very hot. Let them be dry at night.

Until the cuttings are rooted, you should maintain a tolerably close atmosphere, free from drafts and sunshine either of which will soon spoil the cuttings. Treated properly, poinsettias will root as easily as almost any other cutting. They should be potted off before the roots exceed an inch in length. Almost any ordinary greenhouse bench will root them if they have the needed shade and are not subject to drafts.

PEONY SYNONYMS.

The work of the special nomenclature committee of the American Peony Society, working with L. D. Batchelor, in charge of the test plots at Cornell University, has established a number of synonyms beyond peradventure. In the accompanying list some of these well-established synonyms are cited:

Mme. Furtado seems very similar, if not identical, with General Bertrand. The opinion of the committee is confirmed by observations of A. Dessert.

La Fiancee is being sold by some as albiflora, Japan Single White and albiflora The Bride. Very similar to La Fiancee, if not identical, is Snowflake.

Marie Jacquin can be found masquerading under the following names: Bridesmaid, Mme. Durufle and Water Lily. It should be known as Marie Jacquin only, as it was originated and published as such four to fourteen years before it appeared under the aforementioned synonyms.

Sailet is identical with chrysanthemiflora, which was originated by Guerin in 1842. Sailet seemed to have come suddenly into the trade within recent years.

Charles Gosselin in reality is anemoneflora rubra, and should be known as such.

Bridesmaid in reality is a well-established French variety, Marie Jacquin, originated by Verdier, described and published as such in Revue Horticole in 1885, and was renamed to Water Lily, Bridesmaid, etc.

Water Lily is identical with and should be known only as Marie Jacquin, originated by Verdier, described and published as such in Revue Horticole in 1885. This variety has also been renamed Bridesmaid, as noted before.

Jussier is in reality Atrosanguinea.

Cyntherii in reality is Mme. Coste, originated by Calot in 1873, more than twenty years before it appeared under the later name.

Philomele occasionally appears in the trade under the name of Gretchen.

Grandiflora alba laciniata is in reality grandiflora carnea plena, and should be known as such.

Mont Blanc is identical with Solfatare in many of the collections; there is, however, a true Mont Blanc originated by Lemoine in 1899.

Mons. Andre in reality is Comte de Paris.

The variety sold as Maiden's Blush is identical with bicolor, originated by Guerin in 1840. There is no record of any true variety under the name of Maiden's Blush.

Mons. Rousselon and Mons. Andre are believed to be the same as Comte de Paris. From correspondence with A. Dessert.

Gretchen is in reality the variety Philomele, originated by Calot in 1861.

Identical with Edulis superba are Delia, Edulis odorata, Rosa lilacina, Mamie Cutler, Sylvanus, Gloire de Peony M. Jules Elie, to Pinks What Festiva Maxima is to Whites.

Douai, Pizano, Early Rose, Acanum, Sainfoin and Lilacina superba. The above so-called varieties are synonyms pure and simple. No record can be found of the origination of any bona fide varieties under the aforementioned names; they should be stricken from the trade and this variety placed under the proper name, Edulis superba. In addition to the above synonyms this variety has masqueraded under the following names, which in reality are standard varieties, and there should be no confusion between them and Edulis superba: L'Esperance, Alexandriane, Jeanne d'Arc, Rosa plenissima, Duchess de Nemours (Guerin), Jules Elie, General Bertrand, Solfatare, Comte de Paris, Triomphe du Nord, Triomphe de l'Exposition de Lille, and Fragrans.

Although Emma is supposed to have been originated by Mr. Terry in 1905, the plants in the Cornell plots cannot be distinguished from Dr. Bretonneau, originated by Verdier. If the two so-called varieties cannot be identified one from another, they should certainly be known as Dr. Bretonneau, as this variety was originated fifty-one years before Emma came to public notice.

Hector in reality is Octavie Demay.

Superba is identical with rubra superba.

Lady Leonora Bramwell is identical, without doubt, with Dr. Bretonneau, originated by Verdier, and should be sold under the latter name, as it was described and published in Revue Horticole in 1863, twenty-three years before it began its masquerade as Lady Leonora Bramwell.

Canista in reality is Dr. Bretonneau, and was described and published as such in Revue Horticole forty-three years before it appeared as Canista.

Augustin d'Hour is often sold as Marechal MacMahon. Marechal MacMahon is identical with Augustin d'Hour and should be known under the latter name only.

Triomphe de l'Exposition de Lille has also occurred as Queen of the Pinks. It was named Triomphe de l'Exposition de Lille by Calot in 1865, about forty years before its reappearance as Queen of the Pinks.

Sarah Bernhardt in reality is Umbellata rosea.

Floral Treasure was sent to the plots under the name of Thorbeckii.

Mme. Lebon also occurs in the plots under the assumed names of General Lawton and Maria.

Lemoine proves to be Achille and was originated as such in 1855 by Calot, about fifty years before its appearance as Lemoine.

Umbellata rosea was renamed by mistake to Sarah Bernhardt. The same variety has also occurred under the name of La France. There is such a variety as La France, originated by Lemoine in 1901, but Sarah Bernhardt is simply a synonym of Umbellata rosea and should be known as such.

Grover Cleveland is said to be identical with Tecumseh.

Grandiflora rubra is identical with Marechal Vaillant, and should be known under the latter name only. Marechal Vaillant was originated in 1867 by Calot and a description of the variety was published in Revue Horticole in 1885, or twenty-one years before the variety was brought to public notice as grandiflora rubra.

Peony Mme. De Verneville, a Fine Early White.

NOTES ON VARIETIES.

In the study of the test plots of the American Peony Society at Cornell University much interesting matter has come up, especially with regard to the similarity of varieties which it has not been possible to say are identical. Here are some of the notes of the committee:

Jeanne d'Arc is similar to Golden Harvest, but is a taller grower and produces a larger bloom than the latter variety.

There has been great confusion with Avalanche and Albatre, but the latter has a larger, more compact bloom, and is about two days earlier; is a more upright grower and is more of a rose type, while Avalanche is a crown. Also the carmine flecks in Avalanche are noticeable, while in Albatre they are mere lines on the very edge of the central petals, hardly noticeable to the casual observer.

Very similar, if not identical, with Berlioz is the variety Bertha; however, we are hardly justified at the present in saying they are synonyms. Future study will doubtless clear up this point.

Some growers have sent Edulis superba under the name of General Bertrand, but there should be no confusion, as Edulis superba has a large, flat crown with a small collar, while General Bertrand is a typical bomb. The color of the two is the same, as well as the blooming season. General Bertrand has been sent out as grandiflora rosea, also. This variety has a somewhat larger, more loosely made bloom. Again, this variety has been confused with Modeste Guerin. The two sorts are similar, but General Bertrand is slightly lighter in color and blooms two or three days later.

Felix Crousse blooms more freely than Augustin d'Hour (Marechal MacMahon) and about the same as Victor Hugo. The color is very similar; possibly Felix Crousse is a little more brilliant.

Some growers have sent Fulgida to the Cornell plots under the name of Delache. The habit and season of the two are alike, but Fulgida has finer, lighter colored foliage and a looser bloom, which shows the stamens much more plainly; and in general the bloom is much lighter in color, due to the decided silvery tips. The color of the buds or petals before fading is identical. Other varieties which have been confused with Delache are Ed. Andre and Atrosanguinea. The Delache is a much more upright grower, very free bloomer and a superior variety in every way to Ed. Andre or Atrosanguinea.

Boule de Neige is much like Mons Dupont, but it lacks somewhat the cream tint and blooms three or four days

Styer and President Farr, the latter to act as chairman.

Boule de Neige is much like Mons Dupont, but it lacks somewhat the cream tint and blooms three or four days earlier. From correspondence with A. Dessert.

There has been some confusion concerning La Fiancee and albiflora, and many growers are selling the former variety under the latter name, but the true primitive albiflora is much inferior to the variety La Fiancee. Albiflora is a lower grower, with smaller bloom, not nearly so free a bloomer as La Fiancee.

Tree Peony Queen Elizabeth.

It is, however, really La Fiancee which usually occurs under the name of albiflora in this country.

The bloom of Mme. Geissler is very similar to Mme. Forel; however, it is slightly larger and borne on shorter stems.

There is a variety being sold under the name of Aurora, which is a bright pink rose type, the exact identity of which is unknown at present. There is also a variety originated by Mr. Dessert in 1904 known as Aurore, which should not be confused with Aurora. It does not occur, however, in the Cornell plots.

Exquisite is similar to albiflora and Japan Single White, but has a more upright habit.

Some growers report Rubens as nearly semi-double on well-established plants, producing blooms somewhat similar in form to Marie Jacquin.

Petite Renee is believed to be similar, if not identical with Hinodesekai.

Pallas might safely be expected to develop into a full double in years to come.

There has been some confusion between Edouard Andre and Delache. This is an inferior variety in every way compared with Delache.

Atrosanguinea has been somewhat confused with similar varieties, as it has been sent to the Cornell plots under the name of Delachei, Jussier and rubra triumphans. It differs from Delachei in habit. The latter is a very upright grower, while Atrosanguinea is spreading. Delachei has a more compact bloom and does not show the stamens as plainly as Atrosanguinea. Delachei is also a few days later. Atrosanguinea is a taller grower and not inclined to blight like Edouard Andre, with which it has sometimes been confused. Rubra triumphans is a much looser bloom, nearly single, and more of a crimson than Atrosanguinea. Jussieu does not exist as a distinct variety, but is a synonym of Atrosanguinea; the same is true of Atrosanguinea superba.

Fulgida has been sent to the plots as Delachei by some growers, but Fulgida has a very much more silvery reflex, is not nearly so compact in bloom, with visible stamens, and has smaller and lighter green foliage than Delachei. The season is the same and the habit similar. The buds of the two varieties before fading are nearly the same color, rosy magenta.

Faust has a rather variable bloom. Sometimes it takes on more of a bomb shape, with crown nearly lacking.

La Fiancee should not be confused with the single white La Fiancee originated by Dessert in 1902.

Duchess de Nemours should not be confused with Duchesse de Nemours, originated by Guerin, which from the description in the catalogue of its originator is a clear violet, lilac center, and has been greatly confused in this country with Edulis superba.

There seems to be some confusion concerning Papaveriflora, as less than half the donations sent for trial were correct.

Solfatare has been confused by some with Duc de Wellington.

Although Mons. Rousselon and Comte de Paris were suppositively originated as two distinct varieties by Guerin, they seem identical as they appear in the trade today. From correspondence with A. Dessert.

There seems to be more confusion over Edulis superba than any other, and it has been sent to the Cornell plots under twenty-three different names; and in some cases Edulis superba has come under three or four different names from a single nursery.

Baron James Rothschild is very similar to Formosa rosea.

Some growers are selling a deep pink under the name of Mme. Breon, which is incorrect. A. Dessert described this in 1865, taken from Guerin's catalogue, as flesh color, white center, slightly yellowish.

Golden Harvest is similar to Jeanne d'Arc as regards bloom. The latter is somewhat larger and is produced on a taller plant.

Augustin d'Hour has not quite so compact a bloom as Felix Crousse or Victor Hugo, and is possibly not so free a bloomer. The color of all three of these varieties is similar. Possibly Felix Crousse is a little more brilliant than the other two. This variety has a more prominent collar than Victor Hugo or Felix Crousse.

Ville de Nancy has been confused by some with Marechal Vaillant, but the two varieties are distinct. The colors are very similar, but Ville de Nancy is a somewhat darker shade.

Some growers have sent out a single peony under the name of rosea, which is false.

There has been some confusion in regard to Albatre and Avalanche, but they are entirely distinct, Albatre being much higher class.

Charlemagne is similar to Bernard Palissy. It may be a few days later in blooming than the latter variety, and possibly more likely to burst during unfavorable weather for this type of bud. Bernard Palissy fades out more nearly white in the sun than Charlemagne.

A. Dessert informed the committee that the variety which was sold by him in 1895 as Sarah Bernhardt is in reality Umbellata rosea. The sort became mixed with a number of unnamed seedlings and Mr. Dessert fully believed he had introduced a new variety, until recently he discovered his mistake. The result of the investigations of the committee agree perfectly with Mr. Dessert's statements.

Souvenir de Gaspard Calot is sometimes confused with Eugene Verdier.

Delicatissima is very similar to Floral Treasure; in fact, we must continue our studies further to be able to point definitely to the distinguishing characteristics of each.

Mme. Forel has been confused by some persons with Livingstone. The latter is a much superior sort. It is also similar to Mme. Geissler, but is taller and has smaller blooms than the latter.

Marie Houillon is very similar to Mme. Forel and Mme. Geissler. Possibly Marie Houillon is a few days later and more upright in habit.

The buds on Mme. Lebon are tight and frequently rot off in damp weather.

Bernard de Palissy is similar to Charlemagne, possibly a few days earlier, and blanches out more nearly white.

There are two varieties under the name of Bunch of Perfume, which are similar in color and form, but one is lacking in fragrance, has a taller plant, is not so compact and is somewhat darker than the true Bunch of Perfume.

Souvenir d'Auguste and Miellez are said to be identical with Marechal Vaillant by prominent growers. From correspondence with A. Dessert.

Eugene Verdier is sometimes confused with Souvenir de Gaspard Calot.

Rubra superba is known as Richardson's rubra, Richardson's rubra superba and superba (Richardson's).

MOTOR DELIVERY.

Automobile delivery is becoming quite the proper thing; many first-class retail stores are investing in automobiles, and find them profitable from two points of view—as advertisements and as performing a large amount of work at moderate cost.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the new delivery car of B. Schroeter, Detroit. The body was built according to special orders by Schroeter. The chassis is one of the light delivery trucks now being built by Buick Motor Co., of Flint, Mich. The vehicle has a carrying capacity of 1,000 pounds. The motor has twenty-eight horse-power, a two-cylinder, double opposed engine being used. The car will run twenty-five to thirty miles per hour. The capacity of the body is sufficient for three dozen palms in 8-inch pots. The body is forty-two and one-half inches wide inside, six feet three inches long back of the seat, and five feet three inches high in the center. In the rear doors forty-nine inches clearance is obtained. Besides the rear doors there is a double door back of the chauffeur, providing for an opening 24x27 inches. A small door for ventilation is located in the panel over the rear door. The car is electric lighted throughout, even to a dome light inside. The color is deep wine, with moldings in black, lettering and striping in gold.

The Market.

The consensus of opinion is that business last week was poor. This is nothing unusual after Memorial day, but the unprecedentedly wet weather, day after day of steady rain or drizzle, had a demoralizing effect on the market, and about all flowers have suffered sharp declines. We are at last getting somewhat clearer weather, and we hope it may remain settled, as people will not come out and buy flowers when sunshine is lacking. Roses have had a hard time of it, and clearances are only made at absurdly low prices. Carnot, Killarney and White Killarney are selling the best, but even of these there are far too many for the market's needs. Carnations are also away down, and demand for them was poor all last week. Sweet peas are coming good in quality, particularly the Spencers, and are selling as well as anything. Lily of the valley also sells tolerably well.

Peonies are not yet in heavy supply. The wet weather ruined many, spotting the flowers. It will be the end of the present week before they become abundant. Prices vary from $4 to $8 per hundred. Gladioli, such as America, are now abundant and popular for window decorations. Asters, indoor grown, are already being received. Stocks in several colors are abundant, but these do not meet with a good sale. There are plenty of lilies, and callas are still of fine quality. Gardenias are overabundant, and there is a full supply of orchids. Demand for asparagus and adiantum has been fairly good.

Bedding plant trade has dragged along slowly, owing to the unfavorable weather, but the bulk of growers are well satisfied with sales up to date.

Various Notes.

Lewis E. Small, of Tewksbury, and Walter Holden, the well-known Park Street Market salesman, are spending ten days in the northeastern part of Maine on a fishing trip. Mr. Stearns acts as salesman during Mr. Holden's absence.

Julius H. Zinn had some fine Queen of the Earlies asters in his window last week. They were grown by J. H. Leach & Son, of North Easton.

Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, has had a fine lot of peonies at his stand, 2 Park street. He also has a splendid crop of outdoor Jacqueminot roses just coming in.

S. J. Goddard sailed from New York June 15, on the White Star liner Baltic, for Southampton.

W. C. Ward, of Quincy, is one of the first to bring in extra fine quality outdoor grown sweet peas.

Arthur Griffin, late head gardener to E. T. Gerry, Newport, R. I., and a first-class grower of plants and cut flowers, has purchased twelve acres of land at Woburn, Mass., and will grow cut flowers for the Boston market. If Mr. Griffin's productions in a commercial way equal in quality those grown while at Commodore Gerry's, he will speedily make a name for himself around the Hub.

Mr. Nelson, of the firm of Nelson & Johnson, of South Framingham and South Sudbury, Mass., sailed on the steamship Ivernia, from Boston, June 7, on a visit to Denmark.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, was a visitor in New York last week, visiting the orchid specialists there.

The bloom of Mme. Geissler is very similar to Mme. Forel; however, it is slightly larger and borne on shorter stems.

There is a variety being sold under the name of Aurora, which is a bright pink rose type, the exact identity of which is unknown at present. There is also a variety originated by Mr. Dessert in 1904 known as Aurore, which should not be confused with Aurora. It does not occur, however, in the Cornell plots.

Exquisite is similar to albiflora and Japan Single White, but has a more upright habit.

Some growers report Rubens as nearly semi-double on well-established plants, producing blooms somewhat similar in form to Marie Jacquin.

Petite Renee is believed to be similar, if not identical with Hinodesekai.

Pallas might safely be expected to develop into a full double in years to come.

There has been some confusion between Edouard Andre and Delachei. This is an inferior variety in every way compared with Delachei.

Atrosanguinea has been somewhat confused with similar varieties, as it has been sent to the Cornell plots under the name of Delachei, Jussier and rubra triumphans. It differs from Delachei in habit. The latter is a very upright grower, while Atrosanguinea is spreading. Delachei has a more compact bloom and does not show the stamens as plainly as Atrosanguinea. Delachei is also a few days later. Atrosanguinea is a taller grower and not inclined to blight like Edouard Andre, with which it has sometimes been confused. Rubra triumphans is a much looser bloom, nearly single, and more of a crimson than Atrosanguinea. Jussieu does not exist as a distinct variety, but is a synonym of Atrosanguinea; the same is true of Atrosanguinea superba.

Fulgida has been sent to the plots as Delachei by some growers, but Fulgida has a very much more silvery reflex, is not nearly so compact in bloom, with visible stamens, and has smaller and lighter green foliage than Delachei. The season is the same and the habit similar. The buds of the two varieties before fading are nearly the same color, rosy magenta.

Faust has a rather variable bloom. Sometimes it takes on more of a bomb shape, with crown nearly lacking.

La Fiancee should not be confused with the single white La Fiancee originated by Dessert in 1902.

Duchess de Nemours should not be confused with Duchesse de Nemours, originated by Guerin, which from the description in the catalogue of its originator is a clear violet, lilac center, and has been greatly confused in this country with Edulis superba.

There seems to be some confusion concerning Papaveriflora, as less than half the donations sent for trial were correct.

Solfatare has been confused by some with Duc de Wellington.

Although Mons. Rousselon and Comte de Paris were suppositively originated as two distinct varieties by Guerin, they seem identical as they appear in the trade today. From correspondence with A. Dessert.

There seems to be more confusion over Edulis superba than any other, and it has been sent to the Cornell plots under twenty-three different names; and in some cases Edulis superba has come under three or four different names from a single nursery.

Baron James Rothschild is very similar to Formosa rosea.

Some growers are selling a deep pink under the name of Mme. Breon, which is incorrect. A. Dessert described this in 1865, taken from Guerin's catalogue, as flesh color, white center, slightly yellowish.

Golden Harvest is similar to Jeanne d'Arc as regards bloom. The latter is somewhat larger and is produced on a taller plant.

Augustin d'Hour has not quite so compact a bloom as Felix Crousse or Victor Hugo, and is possibly not so free a bloomer. The color of all three of these varieties is similar. Possibly Felix Crousse is a little more brilliant than the other two. This variety has a more prominent collar than Victor Hugo or Felix Crousse.

Ville de Nancy has been confused by some with Marechal Vaillant, but the vo varieties are distinct. The colors e very similar, but Ville de Nancy is somewhat darker shade.

Some growers have sent out a single ony under the name of rosea, which false.

There has been some confusion in re- rd to Albatre and Avalanche, but ey are entirely distinct, Albatre being ch higher class.

Charlemagne is similar to Bernard lissy. It may be a few days later in oming than the latter variety, and ssibly more likely to burst during un- vorable weather for this type of bud. rnard Palissy fades out more nearly hite in the sun than Charlemagne.

A. Dessert informed the committee at the variety which was sold by him 1895 as Sarah Bernhardt is in reality mbellata rosea. The sort became ixed with a number of unnamed seed- ngs and Mr. Dessert fully believed he d introduced a new variety, until re- ntly he discovered his mistake. The sult of the investigations of the com- ittee agree perfectly with Mr. Des- rt's statements.

Souvenir de Gaspard Calot is some- mes confused with Eugene Verdier.

Delicatissima is very similar to Floral Treasure; in fact, we must continue our tudies further to be able to point defi- itely to the distinguishing character- stics of each.

Mme. Forel has been confused by ome persons with Livingstone. The lat- er is a much superior sort. It is also milar to Mme. Geissler, but is taller nd has smaller blooms than the latter.

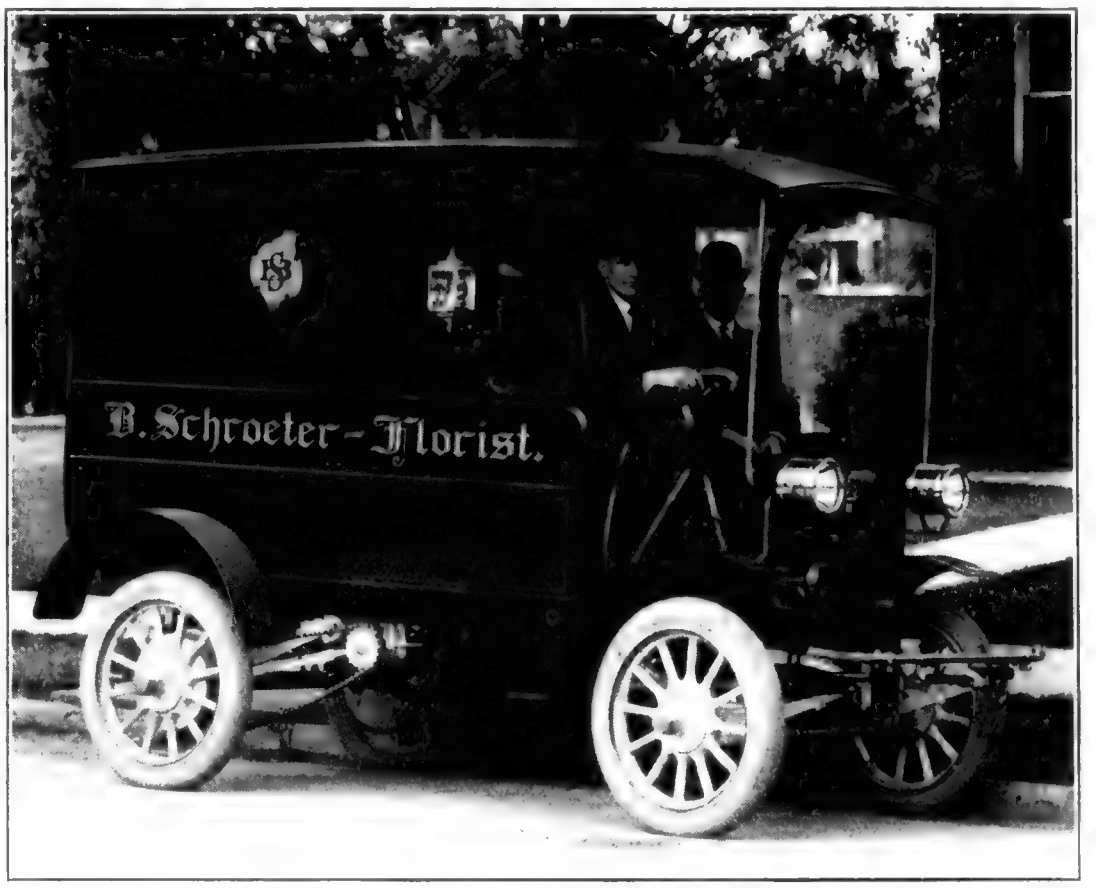
Marie Houillon is very similar to Mme. Forel and Mme. Geissler. Pos- sibly Marie Houillon is a few days later and more upright in habit.

The buds on Mme. Lebon are tight nd frequently rot off in damp weather.

Bernard de Palissy is similar to Charlemagne, possibly a few days earlier, and blanches out more nearly white.

There are two varieties under the name of Bunch of Perfume, which are similar in color and form, but one is lacking in fragrance, has a taller plant, is not so compact and is somewhat dark- r than the true Bunch of Perfume.

Souvenir d'Auguste and Miellez are id to be identical with Marechal Vail- nt by prominent growers. From cor- spondence with A. Dessert.



Eugene Verdier is sometimes con- sed with Souvenir de Gaspard Calot.

Rubra superba is known as Richard- n's rubra, Richardson's rubra su- rba and superba (Richardson's).

MOTOR DELIVERY.

Automobile delivery is becoming ite the proper thing; many first-class tail stores are investing in automo- les, and find them profitable from wo points of view—as advertisements nd as performing a large amount of rk at moderate cost.

The accompanying illustration is rom a photograph of the new delivery ar of B. Schroeter, Detroit. The body as built according to special orders y Schroeter. The chassis is one of the ght delivery trucks now being built y Buick Motor Co., of Flint, Mich. The vehicle has a carrying capacity of 1,000 pounds. The motor has twenty- ight horse-power, a two-cylinder, dou- ble opposed engine being used. The car will run twenty-five to thirty miles per hour. The capacity of the body is sufficient for three dozen palms in 8-inch pots. The body is forty-two and one-half inches wide inside, six feet three inches long back of the seat, and five feet three inches high in the center. In the rear doors forty-nine inches clearance is obtained. Besides the rear doors there is a double door back of the chauffeur, providing for an opening 24x27 inches. A small door for ventilation is located in the panel over the rear door. The car is electric lighted throughout, even to a dome light inside. The color is deep wine, with moldings in black, lettering and striping in gold.

The Market.

The consensus of opinion is that business last week was poor. This is nothing unusual after Memorial day, but the unprecedentedly wet weather, day after day of steady rain or drizzle, had a demoralizing effect on the market, and about all flowers have suffered sharp declines. We are at last getting somewhat clearer weather, and we hope it may remain settled, as people will not come out and buy flowers when sunshine is lacking. Roses have had a hard time of it, and clearances are only made at absurdly low prices. Carnot, Killarney and White Killarney are selling the best, but even of these there are far too many for the market's needs. Carnations are also away down, and demand for them was poor all last week. Sweet peas are coming good in quality, particularly the Spencers, and are selling as well as anything. Lily of the valley also sells tolerably well.

Peonies are not yet in heavy supply. The wet weather ruined many, spotting the flowers. It will be the end of the present week before they become abundant. Prices vary from $4 to $8 per hundred. Gladioli, such as America, are now abundant and popular for window decorations. Asters, indoor grown, are already being received. Stocks in several colors are abundant, but these do not meet with a good sale. There are plenty of lilies, and callas are still of fine quality. Gardenias are overabundant, and there is a full supply of orchids. Demand for asparagus and adiantum has been fairly good.

Bedding plant trade has dragged along slowly, owing to the unfavorable weather, but the bulk of growers are well satisfied with sales up to date.

Various Notes.

Lewis E. Small, of Tewksbury, and Walter Holden, the well-known Park Street Market salesman, are spending ten days in the northeastern part of Maine on a fishing trip. Mr. Stearns acts as salesman during Mr. Holden's absence.

Julius H. Zinn had some fine Queen of the Earlies asters in his window last week. They were grown by J. H. Leach & Son, of North Easton.

Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, has had a fine lot of peonies at his stand, 2 Park street. He also has a splendid crop of outdoor Jacqueminot roses just coming in.

S. J. Goddard sailed from New York June 15, on the White Star liner Baltic, for Southampton.

W. C. Ward, of Quincy, is one of the first to bring in extra fine quality outdoor grown sweet peas.

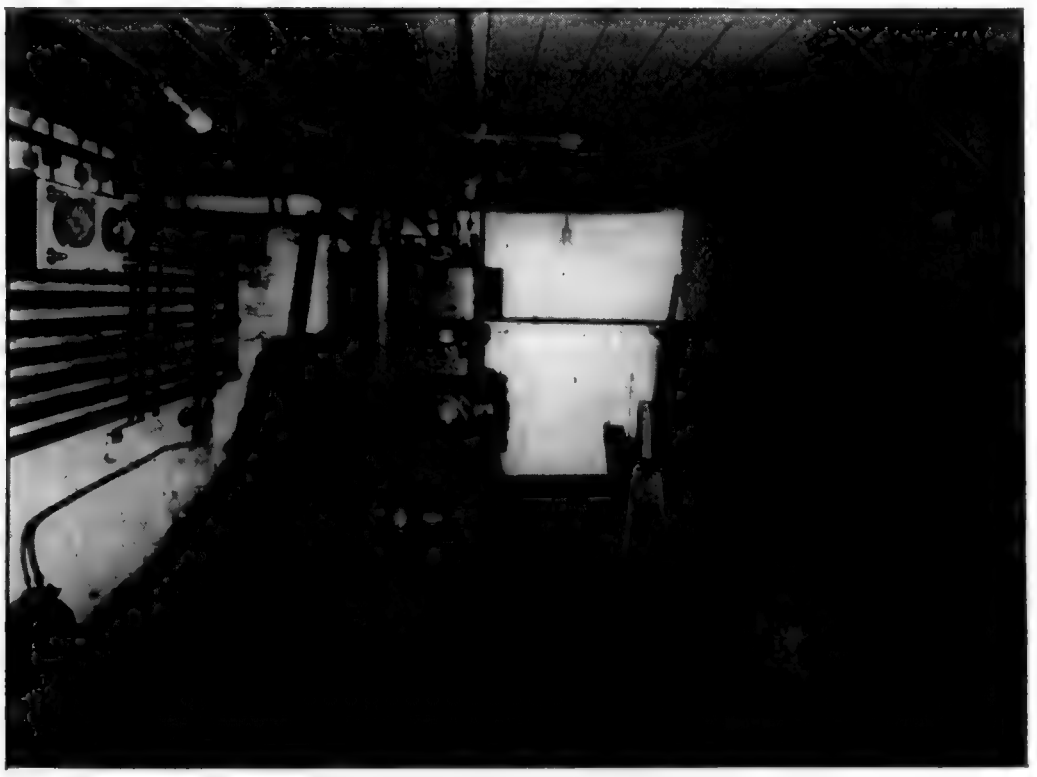
Arthur Griffin, late head gardener to E. T. Gerry, Newport, R. I., and a first-class grower of plants and cut flowers, has purchased twelve acres of land at Woburn, Mass., and will grow cut flowers for the Boston market. If Mr. Griffin's productions in a commercial way equal in quality those grown while at Commodore Gerry's, he will speedily make a name for himself around the Hub.

Mr. Nelson, of the firm of Nelson & Johnson, of South Framingham and South Sudbury, Mass., sailed on the steamship Ivernia, from Boston, June 7, on a visit to Denmark.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, was a visitor in New York last week, visiting the orchid specialists there.

P. J. Van Baarda, representing Joseph Breck & Sons, has just returned from a successful business trip in New York and Connecticut.

The display of bedding pansies and violets at Forest Hills cemetery is unusually fine this season. Owing to the cold weather, T. H. Westwood, the superintendent gardener, has not yet done any subtropical bedding.



Considerable interest is already being manifested in the coming Rochester S. A. F. convention, and a much larger delegation than usual will go from Boston.

H. R. Comley, on Park street, is showing some fine Bouvardia Humboldtii.

Howard Burr, of South Sudbury, has sold out his greenhouse interests to Alfred M. Eaton, who will consign all his flowers to B. J. McGinty, 2 Park street.

Miss Elizabeth Washington, sister of Booker Washington, the well-known Stoughton florist, was married June 7.

A MODERN COOLING-ROOM.

The accompanying illustrations show the cold storage system and cooling-room of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia. The first picture shows the compressor, the condenser and the coils of pipe used for conveying the ammonia to the cold storage room shown in the second illustration. There are also two other cold storage rooms, one a freezer for ferns, galax, etc., on the lower floor with the machinery, the other a duplicate of this cold storage room which is placed by its side on the first floor.

The theory of this ammonia system is not understood by florists generally, who believe that the ammonia coils give out cold air, so cooling the temperature of the room. This is not the case. The ammonia pipes absorb heat, thus reducing the temperature of the room. The compressor compresses the ammonia in something the way air is compressed; the condenser carries off the heat of the ammonia generated by compression by means of running water. A 1½-inch pipe filled with running water passes through a 2-inch pipe; the space between the smaller and larger pipe contains the ammonia. From the condenser the ammonia passes into the coils, where the additional pump space allows it to expand. In so doing heat is absorbed. The ammonia passes from the coils by a return pipe back to the compressor.

Samuel S. Pennock, president of the company, when discussing this cold storage plant with a representative of The Review, said he felt well pleased with this plant; it does the work better than ice, is far less bulky and requires less labor to operate. Mr. Pennock said that cost of the ammonia is comparatively small, and that the tank connected with the machinery requires filling only three or four times a year. He further stated that when the engineer closes down at night the cooling-room will remain at the same temperature until morning, when the machinery must be started again, owing to the frequent opening and closing of the cooling-room doors. OBITUARY.

H. J. Billings.

H. J. Billings, of Rockland, Me., died on Sunday, June 5, after an illness of only a few days. He was well known and much esteemed in the community, and his sudden death was a shock to his many friends. He is survived by his wife. His body was taken to Boston for interment.

John Maxwell.

John Maxwell, a nurseryman of Napa, Cal., died May 27, at the age of 55 years. He was born in England, but had been a resident of California for over twenty-five years. He was quite successful as a business man and as a grower of fruit trees and general nursery stock. He is survived by a grown-up family.

Charles Eisner.

Charles Eisner, who was in business at 6105 Penn avenue, Pittsburg, Pa., died Sunday morning, June 12, of pneumonia, after an illness of only two days. His death was so sudden and unexpected as to be a peculiar shock to his friends.

Samuel Weber.

Samuel Weber, for seven years in charge of the landscape work at the Great Southern hotel, Gulfport, Miss., was found dead in his bed June 6. He was a native of Baden-Baden, 42 years of age.

Frank DeWitt.

Frank De Witt, florist and gardener, of 2285 Pitkin avenue, Brooklyn, was drowned in the bay off Merrick, L. I., June 9. He went out fishing with Captains Oliver Herbert and Del Simonson in a sloop. In jumping from the sloop to a rowboat he missed his footing and drowned. The body has not yet been recovered. De Witt was nearly 30 years of age and single.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

Winchester, Mass.—The greenhouses of Newman & Sons, at the corner of Central and Bacon streets, will be torn down, as the land has been purchased for building purposes.

Nashville, Tenn.—M. Stauch, formerly general manager of the Joy Floral Co., who recently returned from a visit at his old home in Germany, has accepted a position with Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore.

Woodlawn, N. Y.—Samuel Cockburn & Sons think they have an exceptionally good thing in the new mum, Mrs. Jane Cockburn. It is a mauve-pink sport of Glory of Pacific and can be had in bloom by the first week in October.

Dallas, Tex.—The McKinney Nursery Co. and Otto Lang have formed a joint stock company, with headquarters here. The Green Floral & Nursery Co. has secured the Southern Floral Co. establishment, so that it now has three large plants.

Merrill, Wis.—Mr. and Mrs. N. Greivelding, accompanied by Mike Philipps, left June 13 for Europe, where they will visit Mr. Greivelding's former home, at Luxemburg. He and Mr. Philipps also intend to tour France, England, Germany, Belgium, and perhaps Holland and Switzerland.

Sturgis, Mich.—J. W. Dunn, who has succeeded Albert Richter in business here, comes highly recommended from Chicago, where he was foreman for nearly twelve years for J. A. Budlong. Mr. Dunn started growing flowers when but 12 years old. His family is expected here soon. Mr. Richter, his predecessor here, is now in business at Wellington, O.

Jersey City, N. J.—The joint will of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Bolling, parents of Charles Bolling, the Montgomery street florist, was recently probated. By the terms of the will, Charles and his two sisters receive all the real estate in equal shares. In consideration of the florists' business which is bequeathed to him, Charles is to pay $300 annually in monthly installments to his sisters.

Kinderhook, Ill.—Mrs. Kathryn H. Brenneman, who was formerly in business at Webb City, Mo., but who sold her greenhouses there and surrendered them to the new owner in the beginning of last March, has been residing here principally since then. She expects to go to the Pacific coast for a short visit in July, and after that she may engage in the business again. "I have visited a number of greenhouses," she says, "since my residence in Illinois, and my spirit has caught the fire anew."

Martins Ferry, O.—Davison Bros. furnished the decorations for the City hospital commencement, held in the Elks' hall.

Shawano, Wis.—Ed Lenger has purchased a greenhouse here and expects to be ready for business in a short time. He is an expert gardener.

Northampton, Mass.—H. W. Field is resting up after the rush. His veteran grower, William Graves, is producing some fine stock. A specialty is Richmond, with 4-foot stems and heads in proportion.

South Hadley Falls, Mass.—Joseph Beach is packing his grip, intending to sail for Europe, after a most prosperous season. Joe, Jr., will have charge in his absence and will see that nothing suffers.

Woodstock, Ont.—Nearly every pane of glass in the greenhouses of Hall & Calland was broken by a heavy wind and hail storm which passed over this district on Sunday night, May 29. Farmers' crops and all outdoor vegetation were also badly damaged.

Milwaukee, Wis.—C. C. Pollworth recently was a witness in the contest between the Milwaukee Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association against the express companies operating in the state. The shippers are endeavoring to secure better service and lower rates.

Newton, Mass.—Gilbert Cronie, a young gardener on a large estate, was burned to death early on the morning of June 7, in a fire which consumed the building where he and Thomas Fletcher, another gardener, his wife and 4-year-old boy were sleeping. The three latter barely escaped, but Mr. Cronie was suffocated and his body badly burned.

Cromwell, Conn.—A. N. Pierson has just returned from an extended trip to Europe and says he is just as pleased to be home again as the boys are to have him. In his absence, Wallace Pierson kept the machinery in excellent order. The stock looks fine. A tremendous sale of both cut flowers and pot stock is reported. The season throughout has been most satisfactory.

New Castle, Ind.—As reported by The Review's Cincinnati correspondent, in the issue of June 9, the firm of Weiland & Olinger has been dissolved by the withdrawal of Mr. Weiland, who has sold his half interest to Mr. Olinger for $30,000. It is understood, however, that Mr. Weiland will not retire permanently from the trade. He has been troubled with rheumatism and will rest for several months. Then, it is said, he will erect a modern range of ten houses on a farm of fifty-seven acres, west of the city, which he purchased several years ago.

Onarga, Ill.—The Mosbæk Greenhouse Co. conducted an extra store at Buckley, Ill., during the Memorial day rush, and sold large quantities of cut flowers, potted plants, porch boxes, etc., at that place.

Dayton, O.—S. P. Lentz has purchased the ground known as the Royal lots, and will there construct a greenhouse and some hotbeds for vegetables. He will also build a residence and other buildings on the property.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—N. B. Stover, who has been superintendent of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co. for the last two years, has resigned the position and expects to engage in the retailing of flowers on his own account in the Grand Rapids district.

Salem, Mass.—E. A. Stearns has purchased the North street greenhouses and has organized a firm which will conduct the business under the name of Stearns & Lake. Mr. Lake is a practical florist, while Mr. Stearns is well known in the city as a successful contractor.

Fort Scott, Kan.—Oscar Herold has filed a claim of about $100 against one of the express companies, on account of failure to deliver flowers that were wanted for a wedding and a funeral. It seems that the non-arrival of the flowers was due entirely to neglect on the part of the express company's employees.

Iowa Falls, Ia.—W. H. Hall is building greenhouses at the rear of his residence property on College avenue. He has purchased the buildings and equipments at the Riverside Greenhouses, which he has heretofore been occupying, and is using the second-hand material and heating plant, or as much of it as is suitable, in the construction of the new greenhouses. He expects to have the new place ready for business by August 1.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—A. L. Bush & Co., who for the last year have conducted greenhouses on Fourth street, have now purchased a tract of ground with a frontage of 400 feet on Oak avenue, a short distance west of St. Agnes hospital and north of East Division street, and will there build four greenhouses, each 16x100. The grounds surrounding the new greenhouses will be so improved as to make the place one of the most attractive on the east side. It was planned to have the new houses completed by June 22, when the lease on the Fourth street property expires. A. V. Broome, who has been superintendent of the Fourth street greenhouses, will act in the same capacity at the new place.

P. J. Van Baarda, representing Joseph Breck & Sons, has just returned from a successful business trip in New York and Connecticut.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Now that Congress has bent to the will of the people to the extent of giving them postal savings banks, let's get a parcels post.

THE cashier of a bank in North Dakota is inquiring of Secretary Esler whether the Florists' Hail Association will write a line on thirty acres of potatoes.

LOUIS WITTBOLD, secretary of the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, says he has proven to his complete satisfaction that the cheapest way to sell plants to the trade is on mail orders procured by advertising.

THE guarantors for the second National Flower Show will within a few days be called on to pay the first twenty per cent of the amounts subscribed. Thus far the committee has carried the work without funds.

IN line with the policy of many advertisers to concentrate their advertising in the publication giving best results, double-page spreads are becoming quite the fashion. The Review has published five of these impressive ads in the last five issues.

MONEY is to a business what gasoline is to an automobile—you can not run your business machine with the money that is coming to you any more than you can make the auto wheels go round with the gasoline still in the barrel. Be a good collector.

NAME OF WEED.

I am sending you a sample of weed which I cannot kill. I have cultivated for seven or eight years once every week in summer, and it only makes it come thicker. Please tell me the name and something that will kill it. Any information you can give me will be appreciated. B. F.

I do not know the weed which you enclose a sample of. Send a plant to the state agricultural college of your state for identification. They will also advise you how to best get rid of it. Some troublesome weeds are best cleared out by planting the land for a season with some vigorous growing crop, like fodder corn, which helps to smother them out. C. W.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The time fixed by the by-laws for the annual change of officers of the American Rose Society is July 1, but in practice it has been found advisable to make the formal change during the annual convention of the Society of American Florists. This year this will be held in Rochester, at which time a regular meeting of the American Rose Society will be held. We at that time desire to start a list of special prizes for the coming great National Show at Boston.

Every special prize has been distributed. The man who carried off the largest number of prizes at the New York show, held in the American Museum of Natural History, was H. C. Steinhoff, of West Hoboken, N. J. He took Mayor Breitmeyer's prize.

The Dorrance prize has been won only three times in ten years; first by Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J.; second by Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., and third by Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa.

Benjamin Hammond, Sec'y.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the fern, Nephrolepis Roosevelt, by the American Rose & Plant Co., of Springfield, becomes complete.

H. B. Dorner, Sec'y.

June 9, 1910.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week opened with everything in an extremely satisfactory condition, but by the middle of the week stock was being received so heavily that average prices went down all along the line. It is noticeable in June that the better class of buying is early in the week. This is accounted for by the fact that most of the weddings and school functions occur too early in the week to help the market on Wednesdays and Thursdays. By Friday there comes buying for the cheap sales of Saturday, which suffices to clean up stock, though at extremely low prices. Last week the market was almost stagnant on Wednesday and Thursday, but active on Friday, and a fair clearance was made Saturday at prices the lowest of the year to date. It was, in fact, impossible to make prices low enough to dispose of all the carnations. Too many were of poor quality; such poor quality, indeed, that even the cheapest of the cheap street salesmen would not handle them, insisting on having stock of fair quality at their cheap prices.

The current week opened with a lighter run of business than Monday has brought in recent weeks. Tuesday found the market also weaker than on preceding Tuesdays, largely because the better class of schools have now closed, and the middle of the week finds the market in a depressed state. The intermittent spring apparently has at last given place to settled summer. The heat has made a great increase in supplies, and the market is in a worse glutted condition than has been the case at any time in 1910. But there are a great many mitigating circumstances. From the wholesaler's point of view, things are not so bad. In the first place, there continues to be a quite fair call for the selected grades of stock; a call from people who will pay fair prices for good flowers. The less critical buyers are taking large quantities at cheap prices, and the flower stand and special sales people, being able to buy the balance at about whatever they choose to offer, are doing a big business. The result is a better total for the wholesaler than his books showed in the middle of June last year. Reference to last year's records also

Killarney

As Good As Ever Were Grown

Our Killarneys are known far and wide as the finest roses that come into the Chicago market, and just now they are specially good by comparison with the mildewed stock that is so common. We never had nicer, cleaner Killarneys. Don't endanger your trade by offering your customers inferior stock. We can supply you. All lengths.

BEAUTIES

Buyers know the splendid quality of our summer Beauties—for years we have had all summer the finest Beauties to be found anywhere. Well—we've got 'em again this year—shall have them every day, awaiting your order. Start today using these Beauties and you will find they will help your summer business.

Peonies

The local cut of Peonies is on full force this week—best stock of the season. These are the right varieties, cut right, bunched right and handled right to give satisfaction to out-of-town customers.

Easter Lilies

We can supply fancy Easter Lilies in quantity every day in the year. Remember, when you want Lilies you can always get them here.

Our Butterfly Peas are the Talk of the Town—3 Shipments Received Every Day.

Carnations

We can supply as good Carnations as the season affords no limit to the quantity—prices extremely reasonable.

Greens

Headquarters for fancy Farleyense, Adiantum, Smilax, Asparagus bunches, in fact all the greens all the time. Order here.

Fancy Valley Always on Hand

SPECIALTIES FOR JUNE

ORCHIDS. Cattleyas, $4.00 to $6.00 per dozen. We can supply White Orchids or any special variety that is in season on a few days' notice. We supply the prize-winning blooms—the finest Orchids in America—and there is no other source of supply that has either equal quantity or quality. No disappointment possible if you order of RANDALL in time.

PEONIES. The home-grown Peonies are now coming in. These local Peonies are not only the best cut flower varieties, but they are fresh from the fields, so handled as to reach each buyer in the best possible condition. Some cut tight for shipping, others fully expanded for immediate use. Good stock, $2.00 to $6.00 per 100.

BUTTERFLY SWEET PEAS. There is no finer stock than these—long stems, large wavy flowers. Almost any color. $1.00 to $1.50 per 100.

FANCY VALLEY. Call on us at any time; we always have it. $3.00 to $4.00 per 100.

DAISIES. If these are to be had on this market, we have them, but the demand is such at this season that frequently a whole day's receipts is ordered up in advance

FANCY GREENS. Adiantum, 75c to $1.00. Croweanum, $1.00 to $1.50 per 100, extra long fine stock.

We have large daily receipts of Asparagus Plumosus Strings and can supply any quantity on short notice.

KILLARNEY ROSES. We can supply your needs on Killarney—the finest, cleanest stock in the market and all lengths of stem. Good stock, $3.00 to $6.00; fancy, $8.00; special, $10.00 per 100. Can furnish Beauties and all other Roses in quantity.

CARNATIONS. Many large buyers who have had years of experience prefer our Carnations to all others because of the superior shipping and keeping quality of our stock. We ship great quantities to far distant points.

shows that, low as average prices are, they still are better than a year ago, and growers' checks last week were larger than for the same week of 1909. Average prices will be lower this week, but the checks doubtless will be just as high. Wholesalers are working hard.

This is peony week. The local crop is coming on rapidly under the influence of warm sun. Immense quantities are arriving. The quality varies greatly. There are some peonies apparently untouched by frost, but many buds were deformed by the spring freeze. As usual, much of the stock is open, and this must be sold on arrival for whatever it will bring. Enough of the best grade is put on the market to supply all requirements, but the majority of the storable stock is going into the freezer.

Good Beauties are again more abundant, and the demand has slacked off to an appreciable degree. There still are some splendid Killarney roses, fine, clean stock, but an astonishing proportion are badly affected by mildew, which practically destroys their selling value. The special demand for Richmond is subsiding. Jardine is popular. Maid, Bride and Kaiserin are offered in good shape.

The carnation growers appear to be harvesting their final crop of the season. Receipts are extremely heavy, quality shows the neglect with which many growers treat their stock at the close of the season, and prices are at the point where the throwing out of unprofitable benches will shortly be begun.

Sweet peas of the better grades continue good property. Lower grades sell indifferently, but seem to be making, nevertheless, comparatively better prices than the lower grades of other flowers. There continues to be a seasonable demand for orchids, valley, lilies, gladioli and daisies, though not so brisk as earlier in the month.

Green goods are in fair supply, except fancy hardy cut ferns. It is just between crops on these.

Various Notes.

W. J. Smyth has enough telephone trade so that he has three wires. He has just been connected to the new Aldine exchange and given the numbers Aldine 880, 881 and 882. In such a case the telephone operator has a ring around the three numbers on the switchboard, and if the number called is busy gives one of the others without the party calling knowing the difference.

C. M. Dickinson reports that E. H. Hunt has this week shipped an order of florists' supplies to the Philippine Islands, calling for a representative line, but especially strong on violet supplies.

Mr. Schreiber, who manages the greenhouses of his daughter, widow of the late Jacob Schneider, of Park Ridge, has gone to the Pacific coast to spend three months visiting his sons,

John Zech says it easily is possible to have too much of a good thing, and thinks the market may be in that condition next season with respect to Killarney. Albert Lies, at Niles Center, is sending Zech & Mann some splendid Maid and Bride, and the firm thinks that the grower who does the old varieties well will get good money for them next season.

F. F. Benthey, of Kyle & Foerster, says the Frederick Benthey Co., at New Castle, is having splendid results with Beauties that were planted in the winter.

E. E. Pieser describes the peony situation by saying the stock comes in by the wagon-load, goes out by the armful, and the balance is stored.

E. T. Wanzer, of Wheaton, who markets his cut through the A. L. Randall Co., says the season has been quite satisfactory. He is methodical, and keeps complete records. They show that he has not thus far cut quite as many carnations as to the same date last season, but that average prices have been enough higher to more than make up the difference. With another crop coming on at the end of this month, he expects to considerably improve the record before replanting. Sweet peas also have done better than last year.

J. L. Raske lost his mother last week. The funeral was held Sunday.

At Winterson's Seed Store it is said the season is rapidly drawing to a close. They had a wonderful March, and in both April and May showed some increases over last year, with business holding out later in the season than it did last year.

Webb Randall has spent his spare time with an oculist this week. A pair of specially ground glasses is the result.

E. C. Amling says that in spite of the low prices of last week, growers' checks were larger than the week before, which was unanimously pronounced one of the best this market ever has seen. The fact will illustrate the increase in supply.

Hoerber Bros. have not yet completed their new range of ten houses, for roses, carnations and mums, but are already looking forward to the erection next year of a range for Beauties.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is sending O. Johnson, in the Flower Growers' Market, its annual crop of peonies.

Miss A. L. Tonner, of the Randall Co., was the subject of a two-column portrait in the Tribune one day last week, in connection with a characteristic newspaper horticultural item.

Schiller is storing the peonies bought of the Chicago Carnation Co.

J. A. Budlong's former foreman, Joe Dunn, started in business for himself last week at Sturgis, Mich.

Wietor Bros. have practically completed the replanting of roses. Quite a percentage of the stock will be run another year.

August Poehlmann was especially interested in the report last week that creditors had asked to have the Mogg Coal Co. declared bankrupt. Poehlmann Bros. Co. expends $50,000 a year for fuel, and at one time looked to the Mogg concern for the entire supply. It was about the time the American Rose Society met in Chicago that Mr. Poehlmann lost confidence in the Mogg people, taking his business elsewhere, but first he got them to donate $100 as a special prize for the rose show, and won it for his firm.

Among the week's visitors have been E. H. Hitchcock, of Glenwood, Mich.; Charles Wild, Sarcoxie, Mo.; George C. Schmidt, Tuscola, Ill.; George B. Franks, Champaign, Ill.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The middle of June finds this market with a supply of elegant flowers. Never have the decorators for June weddings had finer stock with which to work. Roses are as good as at any time during the whole year. There are exceptionally fine sweet peas, Spanish iris, valley, lilies and peonies, and everything seems to move out nicely except carnations, which have been a glut all the week.

The retailers are not overcrowded with trade, except where they have wedding decorations, as the general business in cut flowers has been affected somewhat by the weather, but, all taken together, one can report trade fair.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday night, June 7, at the Fort Pitt hotel, but the attendance was away below the average. Peonies were under discussion. J. W. Elliott sent in an exhibit of peonies and an invitation to the members to visit his nursery at Cheswick, to see his collection, which is one of the finest in the country.

A. W. Smith says his trade is holding out almost as well as before Decoration day. People seem to be planting much later than usual.

Randolph & McClements report the largest planting season in their experience, but many planted too soon and have had to replant a lot of the tender stock.

John Bader and B. L. Elliott left Friday night, June 10, for Detroit, to participate in the "Scott tournament," which takes place in that city. Mr. Bader will probably remain for a week or two at Mount Clemens.

Fred Burki left Friday for Mount Clemens, to remain for some time, hoping to get rid of a case of rheumatism which has troubled him for some weeks.

W. Q. Potter, of the McCallum Co., is the happy father of a bouncing 12-pound boy. Wm. Q. Potter, Jr., is the title of the youngest florist in the city.

John Madden, for several years with H. L. Blind & Bros., left last Friday for Los Angeles, Cal., where he expects to take up another line of trade.

The McRae-Jenkinson Co., of New Kensington, Pa., was the victim of a fire last week, which completely gutted the store. The firm opened Saturday in a new location.

Married, June 9, John McClements and Lillian Pearl Dunkle. Mr. McClements is bookkeeper for Randolph & McClements.

Ray Page, bookkeeper for the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., has been confined to his home for some time with a bad case of quinsy.

The backward season has greatly hindered the planting in the parks. Foreman John Jones says they have not put out anything tender up to this time, and those who have are sorry for it, as coleus and crotons and such stock which have been planted have dropped their leaves.

The finest thing of its kind seen at Schenley park this season is the Tausendschon rose, a pink cluster rose which has several shades in the same cluster; it has a climbing habit. This is a fine thing for forcing for Easter. Notwithstanding the backward season, hybrid roses are finer than ever before in this vicinity.

Charles Eisner, who bought out the L. I. Neff east end store, died Sunday morning, June 12, of pneumonia, after two days' illness. Mr. Eisner was in his usual health Wednesday, and whistled a few selections from several of the operas for the entertainment of the writer. Death was the last thing he would have thought of at this time, and it was quite a shock to his friends to learn of his sudden death.

Miss Lilly Geib, for several years stenographer for the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., but for the last year of Los Angeles, Cal., now signs herself Mrs. J. B. Lilly. Hoo-Hoo.

Choice Stock

Nothing less will do for Weddings and Commencements—and right here are the finest roses we ever have seen in June. Following are some of our leaders:

BEAUTIES Best on the market.

We have a range of Beauties grown specially for a cut in June and later. These have much better substance, color, stem and foliage than from plants that were cut from all winter. Try them; they're good.

ROSES Grown on Grafted Stock.

Our Killarney, Maryland, Kaiserin, Field, Jardine, White Killarney, Richmond, Maids and Brides are all grafted stock. Much better size and substance than own-root stock at this season.

CARNATIONS None better.

We grow the fancy sorts, like Aristocrat, Victory, Winsor, White Perfection, Enchantress, etc., and will not take a back seat for anybody on quality. They can't be beat.

SWEET PEAS Fancy Butterfly.

Fancy stock in best selling colors. Enchantress-pink, lavender, white, pink and blue, or violet shade. You will say these Peas are all right. The blue is an ideal pea that takes the place of violets and gives better satisfaction.

PEONIES, VALLEY, HARRISII, PANSIES and All Other Stock in Season.

Sprengeri and Asparagus Bunches, light and dark green. Ferns and all other greens.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

As was to have been expected, last week showed a decided falling off in business, none but the growers and landscape men being busy. The former are making necessary repairs and preparing for the rebenching season, and the latter are completing the large amount of spring work they have had on hand. Funeral work is about all that has kept the retailers from being idle, but the closing of schools during the next two weeks will somewhat accelerate business in bouquets and baskets. Prices are on a par with those that usually prevail at this season in this vicinity.

We Call Attention to Our Maids

You have many customers who want nothing but that grand old rose, the Maid. For such, the Maids we offer this month are just what you need. No finer Maids ever were cut so late in the season. We also have fancy

Killarney, Bride, Richmond, Beauties and all other Roses, Carnations, Peonies, Sweet Peas, Fancy Lilies, Valley and Red Gladiolus

Try our CARNATIONS; you will find them at least the equal of the best in this market today.

Your customers must have the best stock obtainable for the June Wedding and Commencement work—they won't be satisfied with less. That's where our "personal attention to every order" is valuable to you. We see to it that you get the right grade of stock, not sometimes, but every time.

Various Notes.

William Crompton, of East Greenwich, is bringing in a fine lot of Easter lilies.

The Evening Bulletin's tree campaign has now reached 2,318 trees, to be planted in the early fall.

Frost June 6 killed many vegetables and other plants in the northern part of the state.

Laurence Hay is busy grading and seeding the grounds at the Agawam Hunt Club. He is bringing in some nice Mme. Salleroi geraniums. He says he has had the best spring in his business career.

C. Schulz, of Westerly, was in the city June 8, on his way home from J. H. Cushing's, at Quidnick, where he had been purchasing bedding stock.

William F. Jurgens, of Newport, was a visitor in New York last week.

Eugene McCarron has about completed a busy spring of landscape work on the east side.

M. J. Leach & Sons, of Pawtucket, were particularly busy last week with a number of wedding orders.

Christopher M. Lee has been appointed by the Providence city council as a member of the park commission for three years.

Arthur Griffin, for many years gardener for Elbridge T. Gerry, at Newport, has purchased a place at Woburn, Mass., of some twelve acres, for the purpose of growing flowers for the market.

The Westminster Greenhouses, Mr. Scott proprietor, had a large wedding decoration last week. The ceremony took place under a finely decorated arch of lily of the valley and asparagus. The shower bouquet for the bride consisted of lily of the valley and orchids, and the seven bridesmaids each carried a basket of sweet peas.

J. J. Kelly has been elected to the town council of Valley Falls.

T. Jenkins is now gardener for Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at The Breakers, Newport.

The strike among the assistant gardeners at Newport has been adjusted. In practically all the cases the desired raise in pay has been granted, although in some three or four instances, that of the wealthiest estates in that city, the old men have lost their positions and new men have been employed at the new scale.

Visitors: Walter Mott, of Newburgh, N. Y.; Mr. Bryant, of A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass.; Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; William F. Jurgens, of Newport.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society will hold its annual outing June 24, at which time it will visit Newport and become the guests of the Newport Horticultural Association.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held June 20. The club will then arrange for its annual summer outing and the proposed visit to the State College at Kingston. W. H. M.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The quality of the flowers coming into town at present is unusually good for the middle of June. This has stimulated the demand and maintained prices better than usual. The long-continued cloudy weather and the cool nights have put fresh life into the hard-worked stock. There is no mistaking the wane of the season, for despite excellent shipping orders and some local demand, business is duller than a week ago.

Carnations are particularly fine for the season. Winsor is the leading pink. White Perfection and Lady Bountiful are in fine form, while there are a few good Ethel Crocker, forerunner of the warmer weather.

Roses are excellent. Red and white seem most in demand, probably because the stock of the pink is so large and the call for this color is not so much quickened by bridal festivities and commencements as is the sale for the others.

Valley and sweet peas are the flowers most sought and the supply at times is insufficient. In sweet peas this is due solely to the dark days and the rain. The quality of the outdoor stock is finer than ever seen here before. Cattleyas have shortened; Mossiæ has given place almost entirely to Gaskelliana. Gardenias are doing a little better. The quality in snapdragons is absent. Easter lilies are in moderate demand, while there are still a few callas. Peonies are coming in from north, and east, and from the mountains. The price is lower. Feverfew, candytuft and double petunias evidence that summer flowers are here. There is a moderate demand for fine green.

The June novelty is Golden Glow chrysanthemum. This wonderfully adaptable variety is in form equal to autumn.

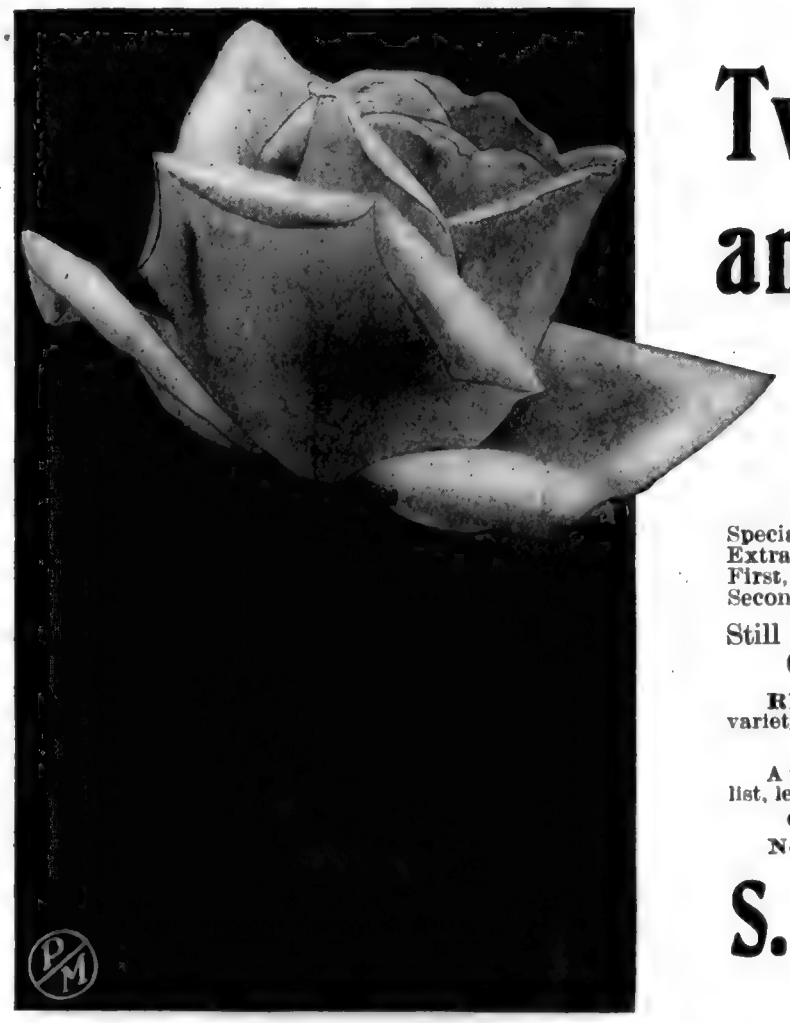
The June Meeting.

The June meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society demonstrated the soundness of President Hyle's idea that the time for an exhibition is when people have flowers. The competition in the outdoor rose class was large and spirited, the quality of the blooms being unusually fine.

The attendance was considered by the faithful as the best in the history of the society—that is, for a regular meeting. This was the more noteworthy because some of the most loyal were absent from a curious cause. Dr. Bergen's valuable paper on "Water Lilies in a Small Yard" was sent to all the members at no small cost; instead, therefore, of the usual notices, a slip was inserted in the pamphlet, giving the changed date of the June meeting. This slip was overlooked by some of the society's stanchest friends.

The essayist of the evening, Professor Stewardson Brown, gave a scholarly talk on the history of the rose, while the society's botanist answered cultural questions from the members.

The medical profession won in the election that followed for two vice-presidents, Dr. Willetts and Dr. Bergen emerging as the winners in a close contest.



Among the roses exhibited was a hybrid tea, rose-pink in color, that has been grown around Germantown for a quarter of a century, and which defied the experts to identify it; they could only say that it "was on the order of—" but then disagreed.

An immense magnolia was a feature of the exhibition table.

The Andorra Nurseries.

The picturesque Andorra Nurseries, situated at the end of the Wissahickon drive, are looking their best this month. The success of the various shows held at the Andorra during the last few seasons is shown by the heavy orders for the specialty exhibited. The place is a show in itself. The magnificent displays of rhododendrons, peonies and iris, each in turn, lend that effective touch of color that enhances the beauty of the various shades of sober green that predominate over the hillside.

over so many acres, in the nurseries proper and in the various offshoots, that Chestnut Hill has come to regard the institution as a part of itself and will not allow the ambitious Jerseyman to acquire any of it.

The stock was in fine condition and looked as though winter had dealt tenderly with trees and shrubs. There was an air of progress about the place. The system of roadways now covers miles of ground, winding over the hillside and through all parts of the nurseries.

A vista northward, in the direction of Erdenheim, is one of the show places. There are many places of interest to the initiated, such as the wonderful collection of some of the finest specimens to be found in any nursery today; the system of culture, aimed for quality, quality, quality; trees and shrubs that will do credit to the Andorra Nurseries when far away. The prosperity of the place was evidenced everywhere. Possibly the simplest way of expressing it was a new Packard car that carries the chief to the distant spots where landscape planting is planned.

Various Notes.

George D. Clark, of Henry A. Dreer, is inspecting seed crops in California.

John Westcott was elected chairman of the transportation committee charged with the duty of getting Philadelphia's delegates to Rochester as economically as may be consistent with the greatest comfort.

Robert A. Craig and Duncan Macaw spent three splendid days among the growers of Long Island and northern New Jersey. They visited seven or eight places, including W. R. Darlington, Pankok & Schumacher, Louis Dupuy, Bobbink & Atkins, and Julius Roehrs Co. They were much pleased with their cordial welcome and the fine stock seen, and there was much pleasant raillery between the bachelor and benedict as to which one had prevented the other from tripping on Broadway, a pretty sure sign that they steered a straight course and are good comrades.

Edward C. Dungan, formerly with William Henry Maule, and now president of the Noll Seed Co., Newark, N. J., was married to Miss Perry June 15.

Morris Hoffman, with Alfred M. Campbell, is much pleased with the stalwart appearance of his first assistant.

Theodore Edwards, of Bridgeton, N. J., and Mrs. Edwards were in town June 13.

Jacob Becker has commenced on the boiler pit for his proposed range of four greenhouses at Fifty-second and Ludlow streets. This is on Mr. Becker's property at the rear of the store occupied by W. W. Crawford.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving outdoor sweet peas of extraordinary quality, grown by Messrs. Rohrer, Girvin and Denlinger, the former of Strasburg, the other two of Lancaster, Pa.

E. P. Hostetter, of Manheim, Pa., is sending Ethel Crocker carnations of old-time quality to Edward Reid.

Myers & Samtman, Wyndmoor, Pa., have begun replanting their houses with fine stock of young Beauties. At least one house will be devoted to their new deep pink sport from My Maryland which the firm expects to send out next season.

Alphonse Pericat's orchids exhibited at the Florists' Club's June meeting were much admired.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week's business in cut flowers was far from satisfactory to the wholesalers, and prices are, sooner than anticipated, down to the summer level. American Beauties are firm at top figures for the few perfect ones arriving. There is an abundance of mediocre stock, not only of this variety, but of roses generally. No carnations sell above 2 cents, and the clean-ups the last of the week were made at $5 per thousand, with roses in large lots at similar concessions. In some of the department stores roses, carnations and even orchids were sold at the quoted wholesale prices, purchases being made in quantity at the buyer's price. Philadelphia is sending a lot of stock here every day, and the latest rumor is that one of the largest wholesale cut flower houses of that city is to have a branch in New York. Nothing slow about this, and the invasion is called a certainty by those who know. In fact, the new store of Russin & Hanfling's, next to P. J. Smith's, on West Twenty-eighth street, it is said, will house the venture, though this is not definitely decided.

The shipments of peonies are now decreasing. Prices were off badly last week, when the market was glutted with them.

Monday comes the carte blanche wedding of Teddy Roosevelt, Jr., and if the ship comes in in the meantime, the national welcome to Teddy Roosevelt, Sr., should mean in part a floral welcome.

Club Meeting.

The final meeting of the season, June 13, brought a full house and proved one of the best of the year. The exhibits were excellent, if not numerous. The caterer did himself honor and the splendidly illustrated lecture on Hayti by Prof. G. V. Nash held the delighted attention of the audience until after 11 o'clock, following which the old guard celebrated until cockcrow.

The exhibits in competition for the Hitchings cup were a vase of Gardenia Veitchii from A. J. Manda, scoring twenty-five points; Compacta, Irene, Falconer, Fantastic, Little Blush and Dr. Hogg gladioli from John Lewis Childs, receiving a vote of thanks, and a magnificent showing of cut orchids from Harry Turner, of Castle Gould, scoring eighty-five points.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., gave details of his meeting in company with Anton Schultheis, H. C. Steinhoff and Alex. H. Donaldson with the "powers that be" in reference to the proposed market at Fifty-ninth street, and announced a public hearing as set for Monday, June 20, at 2 p. m., in the aldermanic chamber of the City hall, which all growers and florists interested are strongly urged to attend. The room has seats for 100 and should be crowded, the passing of a resolution assuring the market being now almost a certainty and only depending on the enthusiasm manifested by its advocates at this final consultation.

F. H. Traendly gave his committee's report on transportation to Rochester, recommending the Lehigh Valley route.

F. R. Pierson described the progress for the national flower show of 1911.

Bowling was considered and Joseph A. Manda empowered with authority to construct a team on the way to the convention.

President Miller announced the following committees: Nominating committee, C. B. Weathered, W. F. Sheridan, Patrick O'Mara, R. E. Berry, F. H. Traendly, F. R. Pierson and John Birnie. Committee to secure the $50,000 appropriation for the erection of greenhouses for the experiment station at Cornell university, Patrick O'Mara, C. H. Totty, W. E. Marshall, J. Austin Shaw, Mr. Weber, P. Dailledouze and Alfred H. Langjahr. Advisory committee to assist in carrying out experiments at Cornell university, James Dean, I. S. Hendrickson, Benjamin Hammond, W. A. Manda and J. H. Pepper.

President Miller referred to the fact that all the great prizes won at the Boston show were by members of the New

The Hitchings Cup.

York Florists' Club. W. B. DuRie said it was well to remember, too, that they all lived in New Jersey. J. T. Butterworth reminded the club that several of the prizes for superior excellence went to South Framingham, Mass. Mr. Butterworth fraternized with one of the club members, Alex. Hogg, whom he had not met for thirty-five years. They were boys together when they took their first lessons in floriculture, and now they are orchid experts of national reputation.

T. Mellstrom, one of the new members, was introduced to the club and made a loyal maiden speech. Anton Schultheis spoke in favor of opening the market under the new bridge in October, with a big flower show.

The next meeting of the club will be September 12.

Various Notes.

Some of the leading retailers are always busy, and the weddings have been numerous and the decorations beautiful. M. A. Bowe had one especially pretty at the Langen hotel last week, with some new decorative conceptions by the Forster Mansfield Mfg. Co., and some dainty artistic color combinations by Arthur Merritt that appealed to the optics of the expert critics.

The annual outing of the Florists' Club, June 28, is already assured of a large attendance. The committee has given much time to the details, and the prizes will be many and valuable. The souvenir book of the outing will contain the photos of all the active members of the club, and will be distributed next week. Tickets are $5 a couple; $3.50 for men; $2 for ladies; $1 for children, and babies free.

July 7 the Greek Florists' Association will hold its annual outing at Witzel's grove. The committee declares this is to exceed all former records, and great preparations for athletic contests and refreshments are to be made.

Several railroads are under consideration for the excursion of the New Yorkers to the Rochester convention. The company need only total 100 to secure a special train, and New York expects to send the largest crowd it has ever sent to any convention.

In Elizabeth, N. J., the Grand Army veterans are a unit in denouncing the authorities that placed wreaths of wax flowers on the graves of the old soldiers this year, instead of natural flowers.

There will be a large attendance from New York at the seedsmen's convention in Atlantic City next week.

Several from this city and vicinity are at the peony exhibition and convention at Boston this week.

The cut flowers sent to the New York wholesale market by William Matthews, of Great Neck, are distributed by Philip Kessler from his new quarters on the third floor of the Coogan building.

John T. Butterworth is still visiting in New York with his daughter. His fine stock of cut orchids finds a ready sale here. John J. Coan, of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., says they sell on sight at top prices.

Attractive windows and their value as advertisements are illustrated forcibly by many retailers of cut flowers, as well as by the prominent seedsmen. Nothing on Broadway seems to draw better than J. H. Small & Sons' window of water lilies, with its fountain, live ducklings and artistic arrangement.

The House of Flowers, on Fifth avenue, is one of the best educators the city has seen in a generation.

Mrs. H. H. Berger and her daughter are in Europe.

The annual trade sale of palms, plants, etc., at Wm. Elliott & Sons', on Vesey street, will take place June 21. This will be the final and most important sale of the year.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds. Makes Grass Grow.

Has been used in almost every state in the Union with satisfactory results. Second and third orders now coming in rapidly from first buyers.

ORDER SOME AT ONCE FOR YOUR TRADE. WE GUARANTEE SATISFACTION OR YOU PAY US NOTHING. Send references.

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns it kills flat-leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours, and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich, green growth of lawn grasses, which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 square feet; 25 lbs. to 1000 square feet (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

Jefferson Leon Doremus, son of the veteran rose grower of Madison, N. J., and Lillian May Noe, daughter of the late L. M. Noe and Mrs. Noe, were married June 8. Among the New York guests present were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Guttman.

B. Rosens and his family occupy their summer home at Averne-by-the-Sea.

R. J. Irwin, of Skidelsky & Irwin, Philadelphia, was a visitor last week.

George Saltford will begin next week the transformation of his new store on West Twenty-eighth street, all contracts for the big ice-box and the many improvements having been let.

Mrs. Arthur T. Boddington and family have returned from Europe, and Mr. Boddington is now located at his summer home in Yonkers.

The Rickards brothers have been making a thorough canvass of their Jersey, Long Island and New England territory during the last two weeks and report excellent business on fall deliveries.

The Kervan Co. now occupies two stores on West Twenty-eighth street, and business shows no diminution as the summer progresses.

Nicholas Lecakes and family have moved to their farm in Connecticut for the summer.

Gunther Bros. have already arranged for their annual dahlia specialties, and will have the cream of the new varieties this year in unlimited quantity. They have done much to popularize this flower in New York.

J. K. Allen is automobiling in his spare time this summer and gathering growers and health at the same time, in early preparation for the coming vigorous fall campaign.

Clarence Saltford is using his week-ends in deep-sea fishing, and comes back on Mondays with some long stories and fish for his friends on the wholesale street.

Wm. L. Miller writes that his father, E. S. Miller, met with a painful accident recently, while riding his bicycle. The forks broke at the head, throwing him heavily to the ground and cutting his face badly. Several stitches were taken in each lip and the nose. Besides the cuts, he was bruised and generally shaken up, so that it will be some time before he will be able to leave the house.

A. L. Miller has just recovered from a severe attack of grip.

ALWAYS MENTION THE FLORISTS' REVIEW WHEN WRITING ADVERTISERS

N. Y., of the firm of D. McCarthy & Son, were visiting New York last week.

Walter L. Curtis, of Utica, must have had a large decoration this week, judging by the number of boxes of green goods that were shipped to him from Twenty-eighth street Monday evening.

J. J. Fellouris says he has just celebrated his third anniversary and that last year's business was over double the year before.

Alex. McConnell had the bachelor dinner decorations at Delmonico's last week for Teddy Roosevelt, Jr., a peony conception of profuseness and brilliancy. Mr. McConnell is still undecided as to his new location, after the necessary move of May 1 next to make room for another skyscraper. Rentals on Fifth avenue have doubled in the last year. Charles Thorley's old store, for which he paid $10,000 a year, is now $20,000. His present quarters cost $30,000 yearly. Mr. McConnell will doubtless locate not far from his present fine store, which it seems a crime to destroy.

Bowling.

The scores at Flatbush last week were:

Player.	1st	2d	3d
Schmutz, Sr.	129	146	125
McCormick	124	137	145
Riley	152	166	223
Shaw	114	110	117
Hansen	199	146	149
Schmutz, Alf.	137	110	162
Dailledouze, Paul	177	149	154
Dailledouze, Henry	174	159	152

A silver keyring was won in the special game by Ed. Hansen. Riley's high score is seldom beaten. The club may send a team to Rochester.

Astoria practices faithfully every Tuesday evening. J. Austin Shaw.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Miss Whitted's new store, at Fourth street and Nicollet avenue, which she is conducting in addition to her store on Fifth street, is causing much favorable comment on account of the artistic way in which the outlines of the lily, as a "floral motif," are worked out in the store and its furnishings. The lily motif is displayed in the dainty fresco work of walls and ceiling. The bronze hanging electroliers bear lamps in lily cups of exquisite tints, and in the floor the conventionalized lily is carried out in mosaic.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The statement of one of the wholesalers, that it might be worse or might be better, expresses to a nicety the condition of the market during the last week. Plenty of flowers were sold, but the prices were scarcely normal; in fact, some were very low. In general, there is more than enough stock to fill orders.

Roses and carnations are overabundant. Outdoor sweet peas and coreopsis are now arriving at the wholesale houses. Harrisii, a few callas and lily of the valley are seen. This week will probably see the last of the fresh cut peonies. Orchids can also be had. Sufficient eastern and southern ferns are coming to this market to meet all requests. The other stock of decorative greens is as a whole enough for all requirements.

Various Notes.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Florists' Society was held at the club rooms of the society Monday evening, June 13. A motion was passed to appoint a committee of five to arrange for an outing. This committee consists of Max Rudolph, Gus Adrian, C. E. Critchell, William Murphy and Frank Deller. Frank Deller proposed the names of Frank A. Volz and John Rutenschroer, and Albert Sunderbruch proposed the names of Charles H. Hoffmeister and Otto H. Hoffmeister for membership. The following were nominated for officers: President, C. E. Critchell and Gus Adrian; vice-president, William Murphy and Max Rudolph; secretary, Alec. Ostendarp and Henry Schwarz; treasurer, Albert Sunderbruch and E. A. Forder; directors, Herbert Greensmith, William Murphy and J. A. Peterson. A committee was appointed to find out about sending a bowling team to Rochester. The kind invitation of Gus Adrian to hold the annual meeting in July at his home was accepted.

C. E. Critchell is offering fine outdoor sweet peas, water lilies from Washington, D. C., and orchids.

L. K. Kyrk is receiving coreopsis and some callas that are excellent, considering the time of the year.

William Murphy furnished many sweet peas for shipping orders about the middle of the week. He reports that John Fischer, of Huntsville, Ala., has sold his plant to John Scott. He also reports that the wedding invitations are out for the marriage of Beatrice Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Taylor, of Rome, Ga., to M. L. Fisher.

Graser & Humphreys, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., who up to a fortnight ago were heavy consignors to this market, are now buyers.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger have had as their guests during the last week Mrs. Weiland, Mrs. Olinger's mother, of Evanston, Ill., and Mr. Olinger's father, of Aurora, Ill.

Fred Bruggemann, now with Weiland & Olinger, has disposed of all his retail interests. Ed. Buschle, formerly buyer for Fred Gear, bought his Norwood establishment, the Norwood Floral Co., and Mrs. Edwards his interest in the Newport store, Edwards & Co.

The Hyde Park Rose Co. is cutting Taft roses that are excellent in regard

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23, 1910.

THERE are not quite so many local patches of onions for seed in the seed buying sections this year.

LEONARD SUTTON, of Sutton & Sons, Reading, England, is visiting the trade in New York and other eastern cities.

EXCEPT of one or two varieties, the Long Island cabbage seed growers expect a fair yield, but they feel assured of a much better demand.

IF the government's crop reports are substantiated by the harvests, little else will be needed to insure another good season for seedsmen.

D. LANDRETH SEED CO., Bristol, Pa., has appointed David Rust, secretary of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, as local agent in Philadelphia.

THE convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Atlantic City next week promises to be one of the best yet held in point of attendance and interest.

A WELL-POSTED seedsman, who does a large business with florists, says a 20-dollar ad in The Review will sell more goods than a 20-dollar salesman—and the publisher pays the traveling expenses.

W. ATLEE BURPEE has mailed invitations to seedsmen and those of related trades, asking them to Fordhook June 24, following the adjournment of the seed trade convention. A considerable party is expected.

G. LENICH, the son of the proprietor of the well-known seed establishment of Gustav Schott, at Aschaffenburg, Bavaria, entered the firm May 12 as partner. The firm does a large business with the leading seed establishments of this country in natural and tree seeds, also clovers.

THERE should be an excellent demand for tomato seeds of this season's crop. Market garden demand increases nearly every year, packet sales mount up, and the sales to canners should be large next season, for already the announcement is made that the 1910 pack must fall far below normal.

GEORGE D. CLARK, of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, is on the Pacific coast.

THE trade hears with equanimity that smut on the onion is blighting the Californians' hopes for big crops.

IT is asserted that the so-called consignment box business is not keeping up with the development in other branches of the seed trade.

HOLLAND bulb growers report that the warm weather in May materially hastened the dying down of the foliage and that lifting operations will begin a fortnight earlier than last year.

A REPORT comes from San Francisco, where W. Atlee Burpee and Howard M. Earl met Luther Burbank June 3 and proceeded to Lompoc, that Burpee & Co. will introduce Burbank's new poppy and primrose.

EDWARD C. DUNGAN, president of the Noll Seed Co., Newark, N. J., was married June 15. He was for twenty-five years manager for William Henry Maule, Philadelphia. His bride was Miss Perry.

THE Western Seed & Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb., Wm. Emerson, manager, says orders have been booked engaging about all the acreage of nearly all varieties they can expect to receive from the growers under ordinary circumstances.

THE prospect is for at least a fair crop of Harrisii bulbs, and those who are most familiar with conditions in Bermuda assert with confidence that the growers will be able to show a still further improvement in the quality of the stock this year.

CROPS SAFE IF LAND OWNED.

After three years of legal battles it has been definitely decided that where a seedsman owns the land, in the state of Nebraska, he can control the crop of seeds grown on it.

The Supreme Court of the state has just handed down an opinion sustaining the judgment rendered in the District Court in favor of the J. C. Robinson Seed Co. against John Hamilton, H. B. Waldron, Citizens State Bank, et al. This suit was brought under replevin to recover a crop of sweet corn grown by Hamilton in 1907, on plaintiff's land, and sold to Waldron et al. As reported in The Review at the time, the District Court awarded the corn, with costs, to the plaintiff, and the Supreme Court decision absolutely places ownership of the entire crop with the owner of the land under the form of contract used. J. C. Robinson says this decision will safeguard all future contracts where seedsmen own their land.

SURPRISED THE TREE MEN.

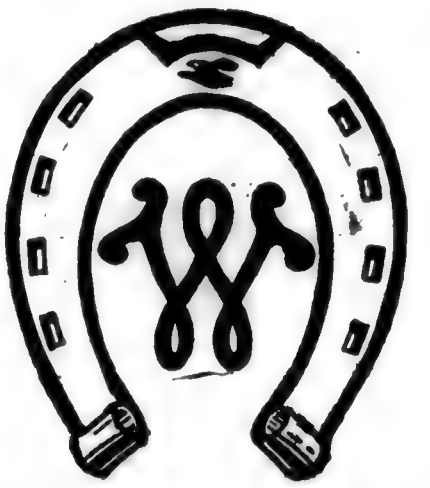
CONDITIONS IN NEBRASKA.

One of the leading growers of Nebraska sweet corns and vine seeds writes that the season has been cold and very backward and the conditions rather unfavorable for crops of nearly all kinds. There has been considerable replanting done, especially of corn, and some of the crops will be late. We hope, however, with favorable conditions from now on, and good growing weather, to fill the most of our orders in full, and may have a limited surplus of a few varieties to offer next fall. We do not, however, look for any large surplus stocks of corn and vine seeds throughout the west and central states.



HOLLAND BULBS.

A correspondent in Holland reports that the lifting of both hyacinths and tulips was begun in a small way in the first days of June and that it should be by now in full progress. The start at lifting was made earlier than in many years. This was due to the sudden arrival of summer, about the middle of May, after a cool, backward spring. The effect was pronounced and important. The tulips practically stopped growing and began to ripen off. The result should be to the advantage of the blooming quality of the bulbs, but the size is less than would be the case had the hot weather held off; first-size bulbs will not be abundant. The crop of hyacinths, tulips and most other bulbs will be below earlier expectations and the tendency of prices is to advance. With a favorable drying season, overseas shipments should get out much earlier this year than last.

ation. Twenty seed concerns were represented. Three sessions were held, morning, afternoon and evening. There was general discussion of topics of trade interest, but the greater part of the time was devoted to consideration of the Iowa pure seed law and the work which is now being done for its enforcement. State Food and Dairy Commissioner W. B. Barney was present, also Prof. L. H. Pammell, of the State Agricultural College at Ames. Others outside the association who talked were Henry Wallace, Prof. J. M. Campbell and H. W. Graham.

During an intermission all those present were the dinner guests of the Iowa Seed Co.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines; vice-president, Henry Field, Shenandoah; treasurer, John T. Hamilton, Cedar Rapids; secretary, B. H. Adams, Decorah.

It was voted to hold the next annual meeting at the Hotel Chamberlain, Des Moines, on the second Tuesday in June, 1911.

Mr. Page is president and manager of the Iowa Seed Co. and this is his fourth term as president of the Iowa Seed Dealers' Association.

The firms represented were as follows:

N. J. Burt & Son, Burlington, Iowa.
Ottumwa Seed Co., Ottumwa, Iowa.
Conger-Ball Co., Sac City, Iowa.
Summers Seed House, Malvern, Iowa.
Shugart & Ouren Co., Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Our stock is guaranteed true to description and will REPLACE WITH THREE any that prove not true. We can make this unparalleled guarantee because of the extreme care we have always used in growing our stock, and never have the trouble that some dealers complain of about their stock not proving true, because we never ship a peony plant that has not already bloomed on our place. Any peony is much surer to bloom, and will be twenty per cent stronger, if moved in September, so that new rootlets may form before freezing down. This gives a great advantage to home-grown stock over imported plants, which invariably come too late.

GLADIOLUS PINK BEAUTY.

Referring to the item which recently appeared in The Review, C. J. Speelman & Sons, Sassenheim, Holland, state that they have been appointed sole agent for the dissemination of this variety by P. Vos Mz. As instancing the earliness of this variety, they say that Mr. Vos sold to C. de Jong, of Loosduinen, near The Hague, a number of bulbs of Pink Beauty, which the latter planted last November, together with other long-stocked gladioli. In the early part of February they were brought into a forcing temperature. The first blooms were cut May 5. The other varieties under the same treatment did not bloom before June 5. Mr. Vos loaned to Vranen & Van Delft, of Rynsburg, 1,000 bulbs of Pink Beauty, which were planted November 12 and which flowered May 28. Speelman & Sons say these two experiments, in conjunction with those conducted with other varieties, prove the new sort to be the earliest blooming of all long-stocked gladioli of which there is knowledge in Holland.

CUCUMBERS DO NOT MATURE.

We have one house planted with cucumbers. The vines are full of blooms and little cukes, but the cukes turn yellow and drop off. Can you tell me what is the cause of this? Do they need shading on the glass? Z. & G.

It is highly probable that this grower has no bees in his cucumber house. Many growers depend upon bees coming in from outside, but this is poor policy. The bees will not come into a cucumber house if they can get plenty of blooms of other kinds to work on outside, and on rainy days they do not come in at all, so it is necessary to have a swarm in each house for best results.

If the pollen is not transferred from the male to the female blooms, the young cukes will not mature, but turn yellow or brown and fall off. The male blooms are open only one day, then dry up and fall off, but the female blooms will stay open about three days, awaiting pollen; then, if none is transferred to them, the little cucumbers which are already formed must dry up and not mature. If these female or fruit-bearing blooms are pollinated the first day they are open, they close up soon afterward.

The tiny pickle will sometimes turn brown and fall off from other causes, either from injury by being allowed to get extremely cold, or by injury from some kinds of fumigation being too strong, etc., but these cases are rare. If no bees are kept in the house, the grower need look no farther for his trouble. H. G.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

From the reports of most of the retailers, and from the way stock sold at all of the wholesale houses, trade must have been good all of last week. There were a great many weddings in all parts of the city and much work for school commencements. The weather seems to have steadied down at last, with good, warm, clear days. The supply at the wholesale houses was fairly good all last week, with plenty of roses at reasonable prices, long Beauties bringing not over $3 per dozen. Carnations also were plentiful, with extra fancy up to $3, but the bulk of the stock brought $2, and common $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Sweet peas sold better, and the market cleaned up daily. Valley and gladioli also had a good call. In greens the market had everything.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The twenty-third anniversary meeting of the Florists' Club, held Thursday afternoon, June 9, was a great success, there being fifty members present. This was the largest attendance the club has had this year.

The trustees reported through Chairman Bentzen that they had secured Romona park, in St. Louis county, for the club's annual picnic and that they had decided on Thursday, July 21. This was accepted by the members and $50 was donated by the club. C. De Wever reported for the bulletin committee, which was ordered to make a full report at the next meeting. The Big Four railroad sent in a communication regarding rates to Rochester for the S. A. F. convention. J. J. Beneke was named as a committee of one to look up the matter and report at the July meeting. H. A. Eirick, of Webster Groves, made application for membership. The treasurer's report showed a big balance to the club's credit.

For the good of the club the trustees had several boxes of cigars and an extra one donated by Harry Balsley, who was present in company with S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia. President Windler asked the secretary to read an essay on "Brotherly Love Among the Florists," which was written by Fritz Blumenschnider, which caused a great deal of merriment. The question box was well stocked. The question as to what caused the high prices of cut stock for Memorial day brought out a great discussion from three sides, the retailer, the wholesaler and the grower, which took up a large part of the afternoon, and will be more fully discussed at the next meeting, July 14. The nomination of officers will take place then, with the election at the August meeting.

THE cost of labor saved in six months will buy and install a Skinner System of Greenhouse Irrigation.

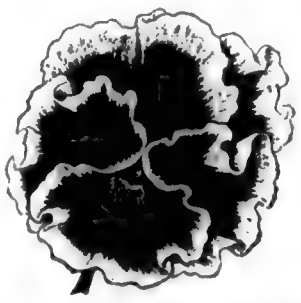
Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held an important meeting Monday, June 6, in the K. of C. hall, with eighteen members present and C. C. Sanders in the chair. Further discussion will take place at the next meeting in the same hall, June 20, at 8 o'clock.



The members of the Ladies' Home Circle spent a pleasant day and night at Chautauqua, Ill. They left the Union station Wednesday evening, June 8, and returned Thursday evening. During the day a meeting was held in the Meinhardt cottage, where S. A. F. matters were discussed and Mrs. F. H. Meinhardt read a paper on "Wild Flowers." The rest of the day was spent exploring the hills. The party consisted of Mesdames Weber, Steidle, Koenig, Miller, Meinhardt, Berning, Beneke, Schitzle and the Misses Meinhardt and Weber. The next meeting of the circle will be held at the home of Mrs. John Steidle the first week in July.

At the Florists' Club meeting W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, showed a fine lot of cut sweet peas, all new varieties grown by him. Mr. Pilcher has had a great success with sweet peas this season.

A. S. Halstead, head of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, exhibited at the club meeting a lot of fine blooms from seedlings from Queen of the West geranium.

L. P. Jensen, who has charge of the Adolphus Busch greenhouses, returned last week from a trip to New York, where he supervised a lot of landscape work on Mr. Busch's place along the Hudson river, where Mr. Busch will build a fine residence and conservatories.

PACIFIC COAST.

This week's obituary column contains a report of the death of John Maxwell, a nurseryman of Napa, Cal.

Portland, Ore.—W. S. Sibson, of the Sibson Rose Nurseries, acted as one of the judges at the Portland Rose Society's annual show, which opened on Monday, June 6, and continued for six days. Mr. Sibson made the awards during the two-day exhibition at the Exposition building, on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Portland, Ore.—June 6 to 11 was rose week and the annual exhibition, the parade of flower-decorated automobiles and other events calling the rose into prominence were great successes. At the exhibition at the Armory a class was provided for nurserymen. Clarke Bros. won the first premium of $100 for best general exhibit of roses and shrubbery; Swiss Floral Co. second, and the Bay Tree Nursery third.

Portland, Ore.—George Spencer, of the Martin & Forbes Co., recently returned from a trip to Australia, on which he found much of interest. At Melbourne he formed the acquaintance of T. W. Pockett, originator of several of the best chrysanthemums grown in America. Mr. Pockett is curator of the Malvern Botanic Gardens, a beautiful spot built by Mr. Pockett's genius where there was only a sandy waste a few years ago. Mr. Spencer says the florists' business in Australia looked to him to be in about the stage it was in America twenty years ago. The largest greenhouse he saw was about 15x50, glazed with 8x10 glass. In the flower stores the stocks of metal wreaths were more conspicuous than the flowers, though, of course, it was summer in Australia at the time of Mr. Spencer's visit.

CALLAS IN CALIFORNIA.

The illustration on page 49 is reproduced from a photograph made in one of the calla fields of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco, and will serve to give an idea of how this crop is produced. These plants are growing for bulbs to supply the eastern trade, and not for cut flowers. Dan MacRorie, who is widely known in the trade through his years of connection with eastern houses, stands on the right hand in the picture. A comparison of the flowers with the figure of Mr. MacRorie, and he is not a small man, will give an idea of the luxuriance of the growth of the calla in California.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The hot weather which we passed through a week ago has commenced to show its effects. Many thousands of blooms under ordinary circumstances would have been ready for market now and in the near future, but the quick rise of temperature which commenced about a week before Memorial day practically finished the crop and flowers have never before been so scarce in the early part of June. Good roses are out of the question and all orders have to be filled with stock which plainly shows the results of too much heat. In carnations the conditions are almost the same, and although not so much can be said against the quality of them, everyone complains of their scarceness. Sweet peas are about the only popular flower that is plentiful, and they also are getting rather short of stem. The price on them continues to be low, while quite the reverse is true of roses and carnations.

We have had an abundance of funeral orders and plenty of June weddings, while the out-of-town dealers have been purchasing largely from the wholesalers. A few cactus dahlias have been sent to town and Bride gladioli are all out of season. Other kinds of hardy stock are being used up well and more could be sold if it could be had. There is no immediate chance of any great quantity of inside stock being sent into town and such growers as have much to offer can consider themselves lucky.

Various Notes.

John Maxwell, one of the best known nurserymen in this section, died at his home in Napa, Cal., May 27. He had been a resident of California for over twenty-five years and was a native of England. He was a large grower of fruit trees and general nursery stock and was a successful business man. He is survived by a grown-up family and was 55 years of age.

Frank Shibeley will depart shortly on a two weeks' vacation, to be taken in the neighborhood of Cazadero.

R. D. Hunter is on a trip through southern California.

E. W. McLellan & Co., of Burlingame, will shortly commence building several additional rose houses.

W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia,

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

NOW IS THE TIME TO BEGIN!

PACIFIC COAST.

This week's obituary column contains a report of the death of John Maxwell, a nurseryman of Napa, Cal.

Portland, Ore.- W. S. Sibson, of the Sibson Rose Nurseries, acted as one of the judges at the Portland Rose Society's annual show, which opened on Monday, June 6, and continued for six days. Mr. Sibson made the awards during the two-day exhibition at the Exposition building, on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Portland, Ore.—June 6 to 11 was rose week and the annual exhibition, the parade of flower-decorated automobiles and other events calling the rose into prominence were great successes. At the exhibition at the Armory a class was provided for nurserymen. Clarke Bros. won the first premium of $100 for best general exhibit of roses and shrubbery; Swiss Floral Co. second, and the Bay Tree Nursery third.

Portland, Ore.- George Spencer, of the Martin & Forbes Co., recently returned from a trip to Australia, on which he found much of interest. At Melbourne he formed the acquaintance of T. W. Pockett, originator of several of the best chrysanthemums grown in America. Mr. Pockett is curator of the Malvern Botanic Gardens, a beautiful spot built by Mr. Pockett's genius where there was only a sandy waste a few years ago. Mr. Spencer says the florists' business in Australia looked to him to be in about the stage it was in America twenty years ago. The largest greenhouse he saw was about 15x50, glazed with 8x10 glass. In the flower stores the stocks of metal wreaths were more conspicuous than the flowers, though, of course, it was summer in Australia at the time of Mr. Spencer's visit.

CALLAS IN CALIFORNIA.

The illustration on page 49 is reproduced from a photograph made in one of the calla fields of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco, and will serve to give an idea of how this crop is produced. These plants are growing for bulbs to supply the eastern trade, and not for cut flowers. Dan MacRorie, who is widely known in the trade through his years of connection with eastern houses, stands on the right hand in the picture. A comparison of the flowers with the figure of Mr. MacRorie, and he is not a small man, will give an idea of the luxuriance of the growth of the calla in California.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The hot weather which we passed through a week ago has commenced to show its effects. Many thousands of blooms under ordinary circumstances would have been ready for market now and in the near future, but the quick rise of temperature which commenced about a week before Memorial day practically finished the crop and flowers have never before been so scarce in the early part of June. Good roses are out of the question and all orders have to be filled with stock which plainly shows the results of too much heat. In carnations the conditions are almost the same, and although not so much can be said against the quality of them, everyone complains of their scarceness. Sweet peas are about the only popular flower that is plentiful, and they also are getting rather short of stem. The price on them continues to be low, while quite the reverse is true of roses and carnations.

We have had an abundance of funeral orders and plenty of June weddings, while the out of town dealers have been purchasing largely from the wholesalers. A few cactus dahlias have been sent to town and Bride gladioli are all out of season. Other kinds of hardy stock are being used up well and more could be sold if it could be had. There is no immediate chance of any great quantity of inside stock being sent into town and such growers as have much to offer can consider themselves lucky.

Various Notes.

John Maxwell, one of the best known nurserymen in this section, died at his home in Napa, Cal., May 27. He had been a resident of California for over twenty-five years and was a native of England. He was a large grower of fruit trees and general nursery stock and was a successful business man. He is survived by a grown-up family and was 55 years of age.

Frank Shibeley will depart shortly on a two weeks' vacation, to be taken in the neighborhood of Cazadero.

R. D. Hunter is on a trip through southern California.

E. W. McLellan & Co., of Burlingame, will shortly commence building several additional rose houses.

W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia,

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.: Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

THE Teas Nursery Co., of Houston, Tex., has been incorporated, with a capital of $20,000, by Edward Teas, C. S. Preston and A. J. Condit.

C. GROOTENDORST, of F. J. Grootendorst & Sons, Boskoop, who has been visiting nurserymen and plantsmen in this country for two months or more, sailed for Holland June 14, from New York.

CHARGED with using the mails to defraud, J. A. Delaney was arrested at Crystal Lake, Ill., June 6, by a postoffice inspector. Delaney formerly was employed by Saddler Bros., of Bloomington, and by Arthur Bryant & Sons, of Princeton, and is alleged to have defrauded his employers by means of forged orders. At Chicago Commissioner Foote held him in $1,500 bail.

PROGRESS IN THE TRADE.

At the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, held at Denver June 8 and 9, President F. H. Stannard sounded the keynote in the following words, quoted from his annual address:

"Much has been done in recent years in establishing uniform grades, in furnishing the grades now required by the trade, and discarding the objectionable trees as required by the various state laws, making the producer furnish more real value for the money than at any other period in the history of the nursery business. For these reasons there ought to be a united effort on the part of the nurserymen to get better prices."

Better stock and better prices; that was the theme, one way or another, of almost every speaker.

PRESIDENT STARK.

W. P. Stark, the new president of the American Association of Nurserymen, also is president of the Missouri State Board of Horticulture, and is one of the most enthusiastic of orchardists, as well as nurserymen. He is treasurer of Stark Bros.' Nurseries & Orchards Co., of Louisiana, Mo., and an untiring worker in the field of horticulture generally. The Stark firm was established in 1825, and is now being managed by the third and fourth generations of the Stark family. The company has a capital stock of a million dollars, all paid up, and is probably the largest nursery concern in the world. The company grows its stock in nine states. Experience has shown them that no one locality will produce all kinds of stock to the best advantage, and this is given as the reason that the growing end of the business is scattered over such a large territory. The company employs thousands of agents, and also has a large mail order trade, which is increasing rapidly. The past season's business was the largest in the history of the concern. The company is the introducer of Delicious, King David, Senator, Champion, Black Ben, and other apples, the names of which they registered as trademarks, as well as some fine peaches, grapes, etc.

During the year just closed Mr. Stark has served the association as vice-president and chairman of the transportation committee, and the way he handled the latter position showed how wise is the act of calling him to assume the general direction of the affairs of the association.

THE DENVER CONVENTION.

Trade Ethics.

The American Association of Nurserymen, on the closing day of its convention at Denver last week, went squarely on record in regard to a question of trade ethics. It was declared by resolution that trade lists should be withheld from those not nurserymen or dealers with established headquarters; that prices should not be cut as the season progresses, and that those not buying to sell again should be charged retail rates.

W. P. Stark.
(President American Association of Nurserymen.)

President F. H. Stannard introduced the subject by saying, in his annual address: "At our meeting in Rochester last year, J. H. Dayton, of Painesville, O., read a paper on 'Nurserymen Pulling Together a Little More,' which I believe was much appreciated by every nurseryman present, not only because of the entertaining way in which he handled the subject, but because of the facts presented, which we all recognize and ought to make a special effort to put in practice." The discussion crystallized in the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved—That our lowest prices or trade lists should be mailed only to nurserymen or dealers with established headquarters, who are known to be actively engaged in the trade;

That some effort should be made to have our price lists and quotations to orchardists and retail buyers nearer a uniform basis for the same grades and varieties of stock.

That as the practice of cutting prices as the season advances is one of the great demoralizers of both the wholesale and retail trade, established rates should be adhered to throughout the season.

That parks, cemeteries and other public institutions are not in the trade and are not entitled to trade rates.

That stock shipped on orders of landscape architects and invoiced direct to their customers should be billed at same retail rates as if the order came direct from the planter.

Opposed to Replace Policy.

Having gone so far as to define who should and who should not get trade prices, J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, Tex., found little opposition to his plan to have the association go on record as condemning the so-called replace policy, which is Mr. Mayhew's pet abomination. He purposes to do what he can to stamp it out, and recently secured the adoption of a resolution by the Texas Nurserymen's Association condemnatory of the practice of replacing stock at less than full price. Being on the program for a paper on "The Resultant Evils of the Replace Policy," he said in part: "When and where the practice originated I am unable to say, but this I know, that few retail men the country over but have practiced the policy of replacing, or the promise to replace, at one-half price, free, or on some other nonsensical basis. Doubtless he who first conceived the idea believed it to be a business asset, but has it so proven? It has proven a millstone about our necks, branded us as shysters, grafters, and what not? My friends, this insane policy, if not checked, will keep us poor. A business policy detrimental to the common good should be suppressed, whether in our own business or that of our competitor, for our fields are so close by that if one sows tares we all get our share of the harvest."

After a vehement denunciation of the practice of replacing by E. W. Kirkpatrick, and a mildly apologetic talk in its favor by J. S. Kerr, all Texans, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, the policy of replacing nursery stock at less than full value, heretofore extensively practiced over the country generally, has resulted in serious injury to the nurserymen, exercised a demoralizing influence over the salesmen, and has not really benefited the planter because it has encouraged negligence on his part in planting and looking after trees and plants purchased by him and led him to underestimate the value of such nursery stock sold him; and

Whereas, this association was instituted and is maintained to promote the best interests of both nurseryman and planter, which said interests are being seriously crippled by the above policy; and

Whereas, said practice necessarily tends to destroy the confidence of the planter in the nurseryman, and produces in his mind an erroneous impression as to the real value of the goods sold by the nurseryman, now therefore,

Be It Resolved, That this association unqualifiedly condemns the said policy of replacing nursery stock at less than its full market value as being unwise, unbusinesslike and wholly unnecessary, and

Be It Further Resolved, That the real interests of the nurseryman and planter will be best promoted by the exercise of sound business methods in this, as well as other dealings, with them.

Hard Root Gall Innocuous.

E. A. Smith, of Lake City, Minn., presented a paper on the hard or hairy form of root gall or crown gall. The subject is an important one, because several states have passed laws prohibiting the admission of trees showing signs of any form of root gall. Mr. Smith cited what the authorities of the experiment stations have said regarding it, and described experiments conducted for five years by the Jewell Nursery Co., by which he had proven to his complete satisfaction that the hard gall is not only not contagious but not injurious and generally outgrown. Peter Youngers, of Geneva, Neb., took the same stand. Specimens of roots of perfectly healthy trees were shown which had been grown from nursery stock affected by these diseases. After a lengthy discussion, in which some of the inspectors took issue with the essayists, the following resolutions, presented by Mr. Smith, were adopted:

Whereas, The hard or hairy form of root or crown gall by practical experiments has not been found injurious or contagious to apple trees;

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That we, the American Association of Nurserymen, do hereby protest against and condemn the action of state legislatures in refusing to grant certificates of admission and acceptance of apple trees in their respective states because of the presence of hard or hairy form of root or crown gall, and we hereby urge upon the legislatures, their agents or persons having this matter in charge, the advisability of admitting this class of stock, and recommend that the laws be so changed as to permit the delivery of apple trees showing hard or hairy form of root or crown gall; also, that this resolution be placed in the hands of our legislative committee with power to act at their discretion.

Officers Elected.

The officers for 1910-11, elected as per nominations by the state vice-presidents, are:

President—W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.

Vice-president—E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.

Secretary—John Hall, Rochester.

Treasurer—C. L. Yates, Rochester.

Executive Committee—J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; E. M. Sherman, Charles City, Ia.; H. B. Chase, Huntsville, Ala.

All save the president and vice-president are reëlections.

St. Louis Next.

St. Louis is a perennial candidate for the nurserymen's convention. Victorious on the floor of the convention a year ago, but defeated on a mail vote to reconsider, that city's representatives renewed the invitation for 1911 and were successful.

The Local Hospitalities.

Probably never before in its history has the association been so lavishly and fittingly entertained as during the meeting held in Denver last week. Every available moment during the two days of the convention was occupied in automobile rides for the ladies, park entertainments and theater parties planned for by the Denver Convention League and the western nurserymen. On Friday, the day after the closing of the business sessions, all the members and their ladies, some 300 in number, were guests of the western nurserymen on a trip over the Moffat road, one of the most attractive of the many scenic routes in Colorado. A bountiful lunch was provided to be eaten on the way, and after the train arrived at the highest altitude, 11,660 feet above sea level, the party descended to indulge in merry games of snow-balling, in picture-taking and gathering rare specimens of flowers growing in abundance among the scanty grass.

In contrast to this rugged and spectacular trip was that taken next day as guests of the Colorado State Board of Immigration through the fertile plains skirting the mountains, where the visitors were given object lessons in the manner of conducting irrigation and the immense benefits received therefrom. Irrigated fields covered with waving grain or thriftily growing trees alternated with gray, barren wastes that had not yet been touched by the life-giving waters. Stops were made at Boulder, Longmont, Loveland, Fort Collins, Greeley and Lupton, and at each place conveyances stood ready, either automobiles or trolley cars, to take the visitors to points of interest in the surrounding country. At Fort Collins, where the State College of Agriculture is situated, an especially hearty greeting was accorded the visitors by the faculty of the college and the Chamber of Commerce. Welcome refreshments were served amid the cool, shady green of the campus, and the buildings and grounds were thrown open to inspection. An abundance of literature was distributed everywhere, bearing witness not only to the marvelous results achieved within the short history of the settlements, but also to the implicit faith in the future cherished by the enthusiastic people of this region of Colorado. In fact, Colorado people confess themselves to be "boomers and boosters," and rather enjoy being thus considered.

E. S. Welch.
(Vice-President American Association of Nurserymen.)

CHOOSING A VOCATION.

[An extract from the paper of A. Willis, read before the Nurserymen's Convention at Denver, June 8, 1910.]

Before advising a young man to adopt the nursery business as a vocation, think what your advice may mean and what the consequence may be. Remember that few nurserymen are rich. So far as is known to the writer, there is no nurseryman worth a million dollars who has made his money in the nursery business in this country. There is, so far as known to the writer, no nursery firm which has ever handled a million dollars' worth of nursery stock in any one year in the regular way of trade. There have been few great men among nurserymen and few ever had high official position. This calling does not promise large success in a business or financial way, nor yet in official honors and preferments, but it does promise, if faithfully followed, a comfortable support and in some cases a degree of luxury for its members. It promises, if carefully cultivated, good character and in large degree the confidence and good will of those with whom you associate.

You will have the satisfaction of knowing that no one does more to adorn the landscape, or make beautiful the home of the working man, or the mansion of the rich, and no one has contributed more to promote the pleasure and good health of his fellow men than the people who have supplied the planter and the orchardist, and the landscape artist with the fruit and ornamental trees they have needed for their work. The nurseryman has supplied these, and he has supplied millions of trees for the forester and the new work of conservation will from every standpoint be more dependent on him than on the followers of any other calling.

Before deciding how you would advise this young man, let me ask that you call to mind your own experience

W. P. Stark.

(President American Association of Nurserymen.)

President F. H. Stannard introduced the subject by saying, in his annual address: "At our meeting in Rochester last year, J. H. Dayton, of Painesville, O., read a paper on 'Nurserymen Pulling Together a Little More,' which I believe was much appreciated by every nurseryman present, not only because of the entertaining way in which he handled the subject, but because of the facts presented, which we all recognize and ought to make a special effort to put in practice." The discussion crystallized in the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved—That our lowest prices or trade lists should be mailed only to nurserymen or dealers with established headquarters, who are known to be actively engaged in the trade;

That some effort should be made to have price lists and quotations to orchardists and retail buyers nearer a uniform basis for the grades and varieties of stock.

That as the practice of cutting prices as season advances is one of the great demoralizers of both the wholesale and retail trade, established rates should be adhered to throughout the season.

That parks, cemeteries and other public institutions are not in the trade and are not entitled to trade rates.

That stock shipped on orders of landscape architects and invoiced direct to their customers should be billed at same retail rates as if the order came direct from the planter.

Opposed to Replace Policy.

Having gone so far as to define who should and who should not get trade prices, J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, Tex., found little opposition to his plan to have the association go on record as condemning the so-called replace policy, which is Mr. Mayhew's pet abomination. He purposes to do what he can to stamp it out, and recently secured the adoption of a resolution by the Texas Nurserymen's Association condemnatory of the practice of replacing stock at less than full price. Being on the program for a paper on "The Resultant Evils of the Replace Policy," he said in part: "When and where the practice originated I am unable to say, but this I know, that few retail men the country over but have practiced the policy of replacing, or the promise to replace, at one-half price, free, or on some other nonsensical basis. Doubtless he who first conceived the idea believed it to be a business asset, but has it so proven? It has proven a millstone about our necks, branded us as shysters, grafters, and what not? My friends, this insane policy, if not checked, will keep us poor. A business policy detrimental to the common good should be suppressed, whether in our own business or that of our competitor, for our fields are so close by that if one sows tares we all get our share of the harvest."

After a vehement denunciation of the practice of replacing by E. [illegible] Kirkpatrick, and a mildly apologetic talk in its favor by J. S. Kerr, all Texans, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, the policy of replacing nursery stock at less than full value, heretofore extensively practiced over the country generally, has resulted in serious injury to the nurserymen, exercised a demoralizing influence over the salesmen and has not really benefited the planter because it has encouraged negligence on his part in planting and looking after trees and plants purchased by him and led him to underestimate the value of such nursery stock sold him;

Whereas, this association was instituted and maintained to promote the best interests of the nurseryman and planter, which said interests are being seriously crippled by the above policy; and

Whereas, said practice necessarily tends to destroy the confidence of the planter in the nurseryman, and produces in his mind an erroneous impression as to the real value of the stock sold by the nurseryman, now therefore,

Be It Resolved, That this association unqualifiedly condemns the said policy of replacing nursery stock at less than its full market value as being unwise, unbusinesslike and wholly unnecessary, and

Be It Further Resolved, That the real interests of the nurseryman and planter will be best promoted by the exercise of sound business methods in this as well as other dealings with them.

Hard Root Gall Innocuous.

E. A. Smith, of Lake City, Minn., presented a paper on the hard or hairy form of root gall or crown gall. The subject is an important one, because several states have passed laws prohibiting the admission of trees showing ...of any form of root gall. Mr. ...th cited what the authorities of the ...eriment stations have said regard... it, and described experiments con...ted for five years by the Jewell ...sery Co., by which he had proven ...his complete satisfaction that the ...d gall is not only not contagious ... not injurious and generally out... ...wn. ...ereas, The hard or hairy form of root or ... gall by practical experiments has not ... found injurious or contagious to apple ...

...refore, Be It Resolved, That we, the ...rican Association of Nurserymen, do hereby ...st against and condemn the action of state ...ficials in refusing to grant certificates of ...ission and acceptance of apple trees in their ...ective states because of the presence of hard ...airy form of root or crown gall, and we ...y urge upon the legislatures, their agents ...ersons having this matter in charge, the ad...bility of admitting this class of stock, and ...mend that the laws be so changed as to ...it the delivery of apple trees showing hard ...airy form of root or crown gall; also, that ... resolution be placed in the hands of our ...slative committee with power to act at their ...tion.

The Local Hospitalities.

Probably never before in its history ... the association been so lavishly ... fittingly entertained as during the ...ting held in Denver last week. ...ry available moment during the ... days of the convention was ...pied in automobile rides for the ...s, park entertainments and the... parties planned for by the ...ver Convention League and the ...ern nurserymen. On Friday, the ... after the closing of the busi... sessions, all the members and ... ladies, some 300 in number, were ...sts of the western nurserymen on a ... over the Moffat road, one of the ... attractive of the many scenic ...es in Colorado. A bountiful lunch ... provided to be eaten on the way, ... after the train arrived at the high-altitude, 11,660 feet above sea level, ... party descended to indulge in ...ry games of snow-balling, in pic...e taking and gathering rare speci...ns of flowers growing in abundance ...ng the scanty grass.

In contrast to this rugged and spec...ular trip was that taken next day ... guests of the Colorado State Board ... Immigration through the fertile plains skirting the mountains, where the visitors were given object lessons in the manner of conducting irrigation and the immense benefits received therefrom. Irrigated fields covered with waving grain or thriftily growing trees alternated with gray, barren wastes that had not yet been touched by the life-giving waters. Stops were made at Boulder, Longmont, Loveland, Fort Collins, Greeley and Lupton, and at each place conveyances stood ready, either automobiles or trolley cars, to take the visitors to points of interest in the surrounding country. At Fort Collins, where the State College of Agriculture is situated, an especially hearty greeting was accorded the visitors by the faculty of the college and the Chamber of Commerce. Welcome refreshments were served amid the cool, shady green of the campus, and the buildings and grounds were thrown open to inspection. An abundance of literature was distributed everywhere, bearing witness not only to the marvelous results achieved within the short history of the settlements, but also to the implicit faith in the future cherished by the enthusiastic people of this region of Colorado. In fact, Colorado people confess themselves to be "boomers and boosters," and rather enjoy being thus considered.

E. S. Welch.

Vice-President American Association of Nurserymen.

CHOOSING A VOCATION.

[An extract from the paper of A. Willis, read before the Nurserymen's Convention at Denver, June 8, 1910.]

Before advising a young man to adopt the nursery business as a vocation, think what your advice may mean and what the consequence may be. Remember that few nurserymen are rich. So far as is known to the writer, there is no nurseryman worth a million dollars who has made his money in the nursery business in this country. There is, so far as known to the writer, no nursery firm which has ever handled a million dollars' worth of nursery stock in any one year in the regular way of trade. There have been few great men among nurserymen and few ever had high official position. This calling does not promise large success in a business or financial way, nor yet in official honors and preferments, but it does promise, if faithfully followed, a comfortable support and in some cases a degree of luxury for its members. It promises, if carefully cultivated, good character and in large degree the confidence and good will of those with whom you associate.

You will have the satisfaction of knowing that no one does more to adorn the landscape, or make beautiful the home of the working man, or the mansion of the rich, and no one has contributed more to promote the pleasure and good health of his fellow men than the people who have supplied the planter and the orchardist, and the landscape artist with the fruit and ornamental trees they have needed for their work. The nurseryman has supplied these, and he has supplied millions of trees for the forester and the new work of conservation will from every standpoint be more dependent on him than on the followers of any other calling.

Before deciding how you would advise this young man, let me ask that you call to mind your own experience as a nurseryman. Do not forget the drought that cut short your crop, nor the hail storm that destroyed it when it was partly grown. Do not forget the bogus dealer who bought a big bill of you and then paid nothing. Do not forget the man who came to you with fair promises and whom you trusted and then, when pay-day came, he laughed at you and did not even thank you. Do not forget the railroad company that delayed your trees en route so your plans for your packing were altogether disarranged, and when you shipped them out failed to get them to the place of delivery on time, and then refused to make good the loss their neglect had caused—for if you are a nurseryman you have suffered all these things and probably more. You have done your best work and seen it fail to bring the results you thought should have been realized.

While all these things are true and they brought loss and trouble, do not forget you also have had your measure of success, the bright sunshine and the gentle rain and the fertile acres, and the efforts you have been able to put forth have brought you a measure of success that has given you much satisfaction. Life to you has been a battle and you have felt the joy of victory much more often than you have felt the sting of defeat, and the sum of your victories has been so much greater than the sum of your defeats that now you look over the past and say you have been the better and are today the stronger for the opposition you have met. It must be remembered that riches and official honors, and the honors that many esteem so highly, are not the greatest things in life. You feel stronger for the fight you have made and your experience is worth much, so that from the present as we look back we say we have more to be thankful for than we have to complain of, and we should not hesitate to say, or in any way qualify the statement, we are glad we have given our life to the calling of the nurseryman and we should advise, if the young man was a suitable man for such calling, that he go forward to his life work as a nurseryman with courage and hope and a purpose to succeed, believing that if he will he may succeed well.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Mark Aitken has his new plant at Agawam fairly under way. Superintendent Morgan says it is an ideal spot and promises to produce stock that will make the best growers sit up and take notice.

William Schlatter & Son need more store space and are considering an offer of a fine location nearby. They report a big business. The greenhouses, under the care of the senior member, never looked better. He says he is going to Rochester to attend the convention and inspect the aster fields.

Louis Robinson handled the largest number of plants on record this season. He believes in quick sales and proportionate returns.

Foreman Butts, of J. W. Adams & Co., still pins his faith to Prospector, which he considers the most profitable scarlet carnation to grow. Charles Adams says the nursery end this season beat the record for both local and out-of-town orders. M.

NORTH ABINGTON, MASS.

Vandals visited the premises of the Bay State Nurseries on the evening of June 4 and destroyed choice imported evergreens, also apple and pear trees, to the value of $1,000. The plants were snipped off near the ground with shears and hatchets. W. H. Wyman, proprietor of the nurseries, who was formerly chief of the Abington police, believes that the work was maliciously done in an endeavor to get even with him by someone whom he had prosecuted when at the head of the police department. A year ago, when he was in office, a large number of trees were similarly damaged. The miscreants were not found on that occasion, nor have any arrests been made this time. C.

Emporia, Kan.—James M. Tanner has gone to Cedarville, Mich., to spend the summer.

Pocantico Hills, N. Y.—Henry Schrader, a florist on the estate of John D. Rockefeller, recently purchased a farm at Schooleys Mountain, N. J. John Hoffman has been engaged by Mr. Schrader to take charge of the farm, and will spend the summer on it.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The annual summer show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall, June 8. Considering the season, the exhibition hall was well filled, and the visitors were unanimous in their praises of the fine display. Harry Turner, Walter Shaw and David McFarlane were judges for the day. H. S. Phips, Jr., Roslyn, was elected an honorary member. Two new members were elected and two applications received.

The next meeting will be sweet pea night, and several prizes will be offered for the best exhibits.

Among the numerous exhibits was a particularly good one from F. O. Johnson, gardener to Mrs. H. Pratt, Glen Cove, who showed seven vases of roses which well deserved the cultural certificate awarded.

The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., made a splendid exhibit of orchids, including about twenty varieties, and received a cultural certificate.

Honorable mention was awarded to W. Ross, gardener to C. H. Phips, Jr., Roslyn, for two beautiful ferns; also a vote of thanks for a display of roses not entered for competition. A vote of thanks was also awarded to V. Cleres for campanulas, and to E. Westerbe for a vase of roses.

Monthly prize winners were: G. Wilson, for best pteris, also for best adiantum, and I. McDonald, for best nephrolepis.

A cultural certificate was awarded to H. Fleischauer for a fine display of sweet peas, roses and strawberries, and honorable mention to Paul Reul for a vase of Frau Karl Druschki roses.

WESTERLY, R. I.

S. J. Reuter was away at the time of my visit, but Louis Reuter piloted me through their extensive plant, where something of interest is to be seen at all seasons. Roses were looking first-class. Maryland is considered the best producing variety, either grown on own roots or grafted. Pink Delight is the most popular pink carnation. Sangamo is highly considered for a crimson and is doing well. Part of the houses are being planted.

Cement is taking the place of wood as fast as possible at the Reuter place. There is no intention of adding any houses this year. Mr. Reuter, Sr., is quite a poultry fancier and has some choice breeds. He believes in having the best of everything. M.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

At the last meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society, A. E. Thatcher, of Arnold Arboretum, was the speaker, giving a most interesting talk on some of the new Chinese flowering shrubs, which have proved hardy in New England. He mentioned a long list of varieties that have proved reliable, and also named some tender flowering shrubs which could be grown as pot plants for greenhouse work in winter.

While it would seem hard to rival the beauty of the viburnums, spiræas, loniceras, etc., which recently have been in their full glory in this vicinity, Mr. Thatcher's list contained many things which all up-to-date planters will want to try.

The three hot, dry summers which we have experienced in this locality have tended to ripen and increase the floriferousness of our shrubs to a marked degree and, on the other hand, have, in conjunction with moderate winters, woefully increased insect pests. Chief among these at present is the cutworm, which has done great damage in both private and commercial gardens, in some cases whole plantings of onions, sweet peas, beans and carnations being completely ruined.

Low temperatures were recorded here during the first week of June and on one morning at least the grass was white and stiff with frost on low land.

Magnuson & Hylen, the Bridge street florists, report heavy sales of bedding plants, their greenhouses being rapidly cleaned out.

GERANIUMS

It is now about time that the spring stock should be disposed of, and you were thinking about buying new stock of Geraniums to plant out or placing your order for 2-inch stock to be delivered next fall or winter; in either case we are ready to talk business. It is a well known fact that we are headquarters and have the most complete collection in the country, good standard sorts at $2.00 per 100, $18.50 per 1000 to 50c each for newer varieties and novelties. We offer a collection of one plant each of 50 kinds, made up from the 1908 and 1909 European novelties, for $5.00.

Ageratum, Cineraria Candidissima, Centaurea Gymnocarpa, Coleus, Verbenas, Heliotrope, Fuchsias, Lemon Verbenas, Salvia, Swainsona Alba, 2-inch, $2.00 per 100; 3-inch, $3.00 per 100. Alternantheras, 2-inch, $2.00 per 100.

Special prices on large lots.

Cannas, 3-inch, fine stock, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

WESTERLY, R. I.

S. J. Reuter was away at the time of my visit, but Louis Reuter piloted me through their extensive plant, where something of interest is to be seen at all seasons. Roses were looking first-class. Maryland is considered the best producing variety, either grown on own roots or grafted. Pink Delight is the most popular pink carnation. Sangamo is highly considered for a crimson and is doing well. Part of the houses are being planted.

Cement is taking the place of wood as fast as possible at the Reuter place. There is no intention of adding any houses this year. Mr. Reuter, Sr., is quite a poultry fancier and has some choice breeds. He believes in having the best of everything. M.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The weather during last week was a record-breaker for rain and cold nights. With a temperature of 45 degrees, everything in the planting line was at a standstill.

The cut flower business, as is usual at this season of the year, has been greater in volume than in monetary value, although there has been some funeral work which made heavy calls for good stock. The June weddings, also, are fairly numerous and some have calls for elaborate floral displays.

The quality of roses is not improving and many that come in are hard to move. From now on growers will be pulling them out and shipments will necessarily diminish. The dealers on the streets are selling them at 1 cent each. Carnations are still abundant and in fairly good shape, but this is due wholly to the cool weather.

Various Notes.

Thomas H. White will give an address at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, June 13, on "Fertilizers for the Greenhouse."

Richard Vincent, Jr., has arrived home from his trip to Belgium and Holland, where he inspected some of the largest nurseries there. He will give the club an illustrated lecture on his trip and what he saw at the Haarlem show and the bulb fields. He is working hard on the summer outing of the Maryland State Horticultural Society, which is to be held at Harrison's Nurseries, at Berlin, Ind., in the near future. Mr. Vincent has planted thirty acres in dahlias this season.

James Hamilton, of Mount Washington, has had one of the busiest seasons in pot plants that he has known for many months. He is shipping thousands of mums all over the country. Q.

Wichita, Kan.—Carter Bros., of this city, have purchased sixteen lots at the corner of Pearce street and Central avenue, in the northwest part of the city, and will there erect a large residence and a range of greenhouses. Four greenhouses, each 30x150, will be built at once, and will be among the finest in this part of the state.

BEGONIA

CORALLINA LUCERNA

The grandest of all flowering begonias. A vigorous, upright growing plant, grows from 5 to 7 feet in one season, covered with enormous trusses of coral-red flowers; leaves olive green, spotted silver, bright red beneath; blooms freely and continuously from April to November. A novelty of real merit. We have one of the largest stocks of this superb new begonia and can supply plants as follows:

2½-in. pots, 10c each; $1.00 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.
4-in. pots, 25c each; $2.50 per doz.; $20.00 per 100.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Trade conditions have not changed materially during the last week. The unfavorable weather continues, preventing to a great degree the outdoor work necessary to the production of good stock in large quantities. Carnations have been a little more plentiful than formerly, and the receipts of roses have been sufficient to meet all demands.

Bedding plant trade was quiet in the early part of the week, but Friday and Saturday saw a marked increase in sales. Aster plants seem to be selling exceptionally well this spring. As the aster was adopted only last year as the official flower of Rochester, the public had no special incentive to cultivate this flower until this season, but it seems now as if everyone who has a garden intends to have at least a dozen plants. James Vick's Sons report the sale of nearly 10,000 plants of the official Rochester aster, formerly known as Mikado Pink, in small lots to their retail store customers. In addition to this variety, thousands of other sorts have been sold—the Branchings in colors, Daybreak, Violet King and Rose King being popular. Other retailers report large sales of aster plants. Probably a quarter of a million aster plants will be grown by amateurs in and about the city, and it is impossible even to estimate the number set and ready for setting by the commercial growers.

Various Notes.

The Rochester Florists' Association announces that its second annual flower show will open in Convention hall November 1, and continue five afternoons and evenings. The plans used in last year's show will be followed to some extent, but the exhibit will be much larger. H. B. Stringer, secretary of the association, has already suggested to the commercial growers the wisdom of starting their specimens at once and, if possible, indicating the amount of space desired.

"The souvenir album for the S. A. F. convention is about ready for the printers," says Mr. Vick, who is chairman of the committee. "It's going to be the finest thing of the kind ever issued, and every member who attends the convention will carry his copy home as a valuable souvenir of Rochester."

BOSTON NOTES.

Much sympathy is felt for Alexander Porter, the Woburn florist, whose little 8-year-old daughter is still critically ill as a result of a fiendish attack June 3 by some scoundrels who are still at large.

George Williams' lease of the Coolidge Bros. place in South Sudbury has terminated. The latter are now operating it themselves, and will ship their flowers to Welch Bros.

Frank McDonald, buyer for N. F. McCarthy & Co., is suffering from severe blood poisoning in the face.

J. Newman & Sons, on Tremont street, have a fine lot of orchids, including miltonias, odontoglossums, cattleyas and other varieties, in their window display this week. A large basket tastefully arranged with American Beauty roses and Gladiolus The Bride was noteworthy.

David Welch, of Welch Bros., is planning a European trip toward the end of the present month.

Rain prevented the baseball game scheduled for June 11 between the Park Street Market team and one representing the Brookline landscape gardeners.

The many friends of Mrs. William W. Edgar, of Waverly, are pleased to learn that she is recovering nicely from a late operation for appendicitis.

S. A. F. directors and others interested in the coming national show were in session in Boston last week, completing arrangements for the rental of Mechanics building and transacting other important business. As now planned, the exhibition will open either Saturday evening, March 25, or Monday, March 27, 1911.

Some excellent vocal talent has been secured for the ladies' night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, June 21, at Horticultural hall. The committee in charge is planning on a large attendance, and all will be well repaid for attending.

S. J. Goddard is sending to C Park street the finest Gladiolus America it has been our privilege to see this season.

Peoria, Ill.—Frank E. Rue, of 420 South Adams street, announces in his advertising that the flower department which he recently opened in connection with his seed store will be "strictly a six-day store, not open on Sunday." He adds that "prompt and careful delivery until late Saturday evening assures everyone of having plenty of fresh cut flowers for Sunday."

Claysville, Pa.—Reed & Snee, who grow vegetables and bedding plants, have had a remarkably successful spring season. Their bedding plants moved faster than last spring, and their geraniums could have been sold out entirely if they could have been brought into bloom in time. They had a fine crop of cucumbers, of the variety Rawson's Hothouse, which they sold at 65 cents and $1 per dozen, and were unable to supply the demand.

Would You Save One-Quarter of Your Coal Bill?

A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.
Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—
"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.
"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.
"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

Greenhouse Heating.

EXTREMES IN SIZES OF PIPE.

Will you kindly give me advice about the piping of a greenhouse, 25x100, for hot water? There will be five benches in the house—a 3-foot one along each wall and three 4-foot ones in the center. Which will be the better plan—to run two 2-inch flows overhead and come back under the bench with 1½-inch returns, or use 4-inch pipes throughout? Also tell me the number of runs to use of each size for returns. The house is in a protected position and I expect to install a boiler with at least twenty-five per cent of surplus capacity. I am located in northeastern Ohio.

F. R.

I would not care to use either plan proposed, except with some modifications. While small pipes are preferred to those four inches in diameter, it is a mistake to use returns as small as 1½-inch in a house of the size mentioned, unless the boiler is several feet below the level of the returns. Even then five 2-inch flows and fourteen 1½-inch returns would be needed, but better results could be obtained with three 2½-inch flows and twelve 2-inch returns.

One of the flows could be upon each wall and the other in the center of the house, overhead. Three of the returns can be under each side bench and the others can be placed in pairs under the other benches.

FOR EITHER STEAM OR WATER.

We intend to build three greenhouses, each 16x100, seven feet to the eaves and eleven and one-half feet to the ridge, with 3-foot wooden walls, surmounted by four feet of glass, and the ends also glazed. There will be a glass partition between the houses. The houses will be protected on the north by a salesroom, potting shed and boiler room. We have a 52-flue firebox boiler, rated at 2,200 feet of radiation.

The north house we intend for roses, and it will need a temperature of 60 degrees; the middle house, for carnations, will be run at 50 degrees; the third house, for sweet peas and violets, will require 40 to 45 degrees. Here, in central Wisconsin, the winters vary a great deal, but it is safe to figure on 20 degrees below zero as our coldest weather, and that only for short periods.

Will you please let us know if our boiler will handle this work easily? How many 1-inch pipes will be needed in each house, to maintain the required heat? We have two 3-inch runs from our boiler, but only one 4-inch opening for the returns. Will this 4-inch return take care of the two 3-inch flows?

We intend to put up an expansion tank and run hot water until such times as steam is needed, then run on steam.

A. L. B.

Especially if hot water is to be used, it will not be advisable to use 1-inch pipe for the returns, and even 1¼-inch pipe will not be very satisfactory in houses 100 feet long. I would suggest arranging the houses so that the desired temperature can be maintained with steam in the coldest weather, but would arrange it in such a way as to permit the use of hot water during mild weather in the fall and spring.

For the rose house, 16x100 feet, use one 2½-inch flow pipe and eight 1¼-inch returns. In the carnation house, of the same size, a temperature of 50 degrees can be maintained with one 2-inch flow and five returns. In the cool house in which there is five feet of glass in the south wall, only four returns will be required in addition to the main flow pipe.

If the boiler merely approaches the rating mentioned it will be sufficiently large, as the radiation needed is only about 1,000 square feet. The 4-inch return, although none too large, will carry the hot water and is much larger than is required for steam.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The florists of this city can congratulate themselves, for the season has so far been a most satisfactory one in every respect. Up to the latter half of last week the demand was mostly ahead of the supply; consequently all business was transacted on a firm basis. Not till Wednesday of last week could it be said that there were plenty of carnations, roses, sweet peas and some of the other standbys. Even with the increased supply, there was nothing left to speak of, for business in all branches was fine. The month of June brings with it weddings, graduation exercises and other social affairs, and this class of work, with an unusually heavy run in funeral work, has given everyone a chance to make good. The stock is still of fine quality, due, no doubt, to the fact that up to now the nights have always been cool.

Local peonies of good quality are now arriving in quantity and sell readily. In lilies the Harrisii have been more plentiful than the callas; the latter have always been cleaned up, while some of the former were unsold. With the exception of a few stray tulips, that line is done for this season. The demand for valley has been exceptionally heavy during the last fortnight. Green goods are about equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

The M. A. McKenney Co. says that up to now busines has been firm and steady, away ahead of other seasons, with no prospect of a let-up in the near future.

J. M. Fox & Son, who always get their share of the better class of trade, have been quite busy of late with work for weddings and other social functions.

Roy Currie, who conducts the store of Currie Bros. Co. on Wisconsin street, remarked that he "never saw the like; for the last two months it has been one continual rush from morning till night, trying to please everybody."

William Zimmermann, at Fifth street and Grand avenue, reports that business has been fine for some time. Funeral work and graduating exercises have caused him to work overtime.

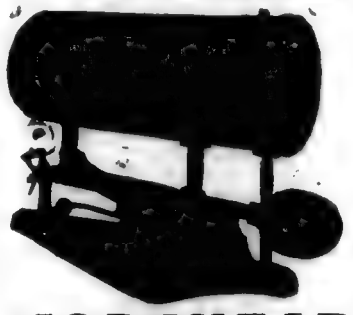
The East Side Floral Co. has been extremely busy of late with outdoor bedding and window boxes. The firm was well prepared for the spring trade and the work is well cleaned up by this time.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co. is supplying this market with Victory carnations which are really of better quality than in midwinter. All around, their stock is holding out finely.

To judge by the way Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, has been and is growing White Perfection and Winsor carnations this season, one could not wish for better varieties in those respective colors.

Albert Groth, also of North Milwaukee, is bringing in some exceptionally fine sweet peas these days. His carnations, which are clean in every respect, find ready sale.

The C. C. Pollworth Co., though completely sold out of bedding stock some time ago, says that there is still plenty of call for that line of stock. Shipping trade with this firm continues satisfactory.



The Holton & Hunkel Co. is receiving daily shipments of fine Killarney roses from Adam Zender's plant at Rogers Park, Ill. Shipping trade here has been fine right along.

The three new greenhouses of Manke Bros., at their North Milwaukee place, which will be devoted to carnations exclusively, are nearing completion. This will give them a chance for early housing.

William Toole, secretary of the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, spent a few days in our midst, working on the preliminaries for this year's state fair, which takes place just west of our city.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Trade was rather quiet last week. Flowers are plentiful. Carnations are in big supply, with the demand fair. They retail at 50 cents per dozen. Good roses bring $1.50 per dozen; snapdragons, 75 cents and $1 per dozen; lilies, $2 per dozen; gladioli, 75 cents and $1 per dozen.

Indoor sweet peas are not of much account. Geraniums and other bedding plants sell well yet. The demand for pansies and daisies is practically all over. There has been a good demand for them this season, with fairly good prices. Funeral work has been good of late, using lots of short and inferior stock.

The weather last week was cold and damp. There was plenty of rain and everything is looking nice and green. There is a good demand for young aster plants; these retail at 10 and 15 cents per dozen roots. The present wet season has been good for the starting of young stock in the field. The street faker is still with us, selling roses and carnations at ridiculously low prices.

Various Notes.

M. B. Sylvia, of the Dartmouth street nurseries, reports a good demand for shrubs, etc., during the last week. Some of the children in the home garden contest are making wonderful progress in their work and are already showing surprising results.

William P. Peirce, on Union street, is showing large quantities of bedding plants and flowers at his store.

M. B. Sylvia and William Livesey were in Boston recently and also visited the New England Nurseries, at Bedford, Mass.

R. H. Woodhouse will have plenty of mums for this season. His stock is looking fine. W. L.

ALBANY, N. Y.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Albany Florists' Club, Fred A. Danker handed in his resignation as chairman of the flower show committee. President Goldring announced the following committee, which will have charge of the arrangements for the second annual show, to be held in November: Frank M. Briare, chairman; Fred A. Danker, Fred Henkes, Edward P. Tracey, Patrick Hyde, Edward F. Meany and William C. Kurth.

F. A. Danker, secretary, was authorized to make an announcement through the newspapers of the plan to distribute flowers at the commencement exercises of the schools this month. By a recent ruling of the board of education floral presents to graduates may not be presented on the stage, but are to be distributed to the recipients later. W. S. Boardman will have charge of this work in the case of the high school commencement in Harmanus Bleecker hall, and for the grammar schools the distribution will be in charge of one or more men sent to the schools by the florists.

Richard Griffith reported on a visit made to Commissioner Greenalch, of the department of public works, to lay before the commissioner a complaint about out-of-town nurserymen planting trees on streets without first having obtained a permit. Commissioner Greenalch promised to have the matter investigated and the alleged abuse remedied.

A communication was read from Louis Menand, Sr., who handed in his resignation as treasurer of the club and also of the flower show committee. Mr. Menand explained that he has not been well for some time. A letter from the Albany Mothers' Club was read by the secretary, in which the officers of the Mothers' Club thanked the florists for their donations of white carnations for Mothers' day, Sunday, May 8.

The club accepted the invitation of President Frederick Goldring to hold the July meeting at his place, Font Grove station, Slingerlands, Thursday, July 7.

Greenwich, Conn.—R. A. C. Smith, of Smith, Gray & Co., the New York clothiers, is about to build a greenhouse and palm house on an estate which he owns here.

De Kalb, Ill.—The store of the De Kalb Greenhouses was threatened by fire June 13, the blaze doing considerable damage to the building. The contents and fixtures were, however, taken out with little loss.

THERE is not a house built today, that has the extreme lightness, beauty and practicalness of our U-Bar Curved Eave.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was fair last week. The weather is still unseasonable; it is cool and rains about every other day. Flowers are enough to go around. Brides, Maids and carnations are of exceptionally good quality for this season of the year. The school commencements called for quantities of flowers, and these, combined with the June weddings, help to clean up the market.

Various Notes.

At a meeting of the State Florists' Association last week it was decided to have a chrysanthemum show in this city in the fall. The executive committee was instructed to appoint the committees to manage the show, and these appointments will be made this week. Tomlinson hall has been engaged for the week commencing November 7.

Hans Kipke, of A. Wiegand & Sons, spent a few days in Chicago this week.

The Pahud Floral Co. reports a highly successful spring this year. Charles Pahud, of this firm, has purchased a motorcycle.

Mrs. E. A. Nelson is going to Denver to spend the summer.

Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson, Ind., were in the city last week to attend the meeting of the State Florists' Association.

Charles Vollrath, for many years with the Bertermann Bros. Co., but recently with the Roepke-Rieman Co., died last week. Mr. Vollrath had been ailing for a year or more, and had been confined to his home for about five months. His death was not unexpected.

Alfred Brandt has the automobile fever.

Frank Smith, of Smith & Fetters, Cleveland, stopped in the city for a few hours last Saturday.

C. Vanderbreggen, foreman for E. A. Nelson, leaves for a trip to Holland this week. He expects to return here next fall. H. L. W.

Ashland, Mass.—Ernest Warren, of the Union Street Greenhouses, is building another house, made necessary by the increase in his trade.

Chestnut Hill, Pa.—The Andorra Nurseries received a prize for a fine display of peonies at a special peony exhibition held by the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society on the evening of May 26. Premiums were also awarded to James Bell, gardener for Mrs. John W. Geary; John Little, gardener for Mrs. John L. Welch, and James Schneider, gardener for J. Snyder.

THE KEWANEE SYSTEM OF WATER SUPPLY

These Greenhouses are Equipped with The Kewanee System of Water Supply

This illustration shows the Riverside Greenhouses at Wichita, Kas. Though not connected with any city mains, they are provided with service equal to that of the best city water works system.

Mr. F. Kuechenmeister, proprietor of the Riverside Greenhouses, says: "The Kewanee Water Supply System I bought of you, gives entire satisfaction. The outfit works fine—no cost for repairs."

Good water service is appreciated everywhere. But nowhere is this service so essential, as it is for greenhouses, nurseries, truck gardens, etc. The water supply problem for these places has been successfully solved by

The Kewanee System of Water Supply

In the Kewanee System, there is no elevated tank to leak, freeze, overflow or collapse. Instead, the water is stored in a Kewanee Pneumatic Tank, and it is delivered by air pressure.

The Kewanee Tank may be located in the cellar or buried in the ground. It is completely protected from all extremes in weather. You will be sure of water of the right temperature during all seasons. This water will have strong pressure behind it—40 to 60 pounds is easily possible. 40 pounds is equal to the pressure from an elevated tank 93 feet high.

And you can have all the water you want, because Kewanee Tanks are made in sizes to suit any requirements.

There are nearly ten thousand Kewanee Systems in successful operation. They are being used for country and suburban homes, farms, green houses, truck gardens, public institutions, schools, etc.

Wherever city water service is not available or is unsatisfactory, the Kewanee System is the logical choice.

Let our engineering department solve your water supply problem. No charge for preliminary specifications and estimates. Satisfactory results guaranteed.

Write for our 64-page illustrated catalog which tells all about the Kewanee System. This book is free. Ask for catalog No. 55 .

THE KEWANEE SYSTEM OF WATER SUPPLY

These Greenhouses are Equipped with The Kewanee System of Water Supply

This illustration shows the Riverside Greenhouses at Wichita, Kas. Though not connected with any city mains, they are provided with service equal to that of the best city water works system.

Mr. F. Kuechenmeister, proprietor of the Riverside Greenhouses, says: "The Kewanee Water Supply System I bought of you, gives entire satisfaction. The outfit works fine—no cost for repairs."

Good water service is appreciated everywhere. But nowhere is this service so essential, as it is for greenhouses, nurseries, truck gardens, etc. The water supply problem for these places has been successfully solved by

The Kewanee System of Water Supply

In the Kewanee System, there is no elevated tank to leak, freeze, overflow or collapse. Instead, the water is stored in a Kewanee Pneumatic Tank, and it is delivered by air pressure.

The Kewanee Tank may be located in the cellar or buried in the ground. It is completely protected from all extremes in weather. You will be sure of water of the right temperature during all seasons. This water will have strong pressure behind it—40 to 60 pounds is easily possible. 40 pounds is equal to the pressure from an elevated tank 93 feet high.

And you can have all the water you want, because Kewanee Tanks are made in sizes to suit any requirements.

There are nearly ten thousand Kewanee Systems in successful operation. They are being used for country and suburban homes, farms, green houses, truck gardens, public institutions, schools, etc.

Wherever city water service is not available or is unsatisfactory, the Kewanee System is the logical choice.

Let our engineering department solve your water supply problem. No charge for preliminary specifications and estimates. Satisfactory results guaranteed.

Write for our 64-page illustrated catalog which tells all about the Kewanee System. This book is free. Ask for catalog No. 55 .

The Most Important Thing

About any statement in an advertisement is the truth or falsity of it. Some of the firms advertising their product are not over scrupulous as to keeping their claims within the bounds of truth and as a consequence the goods they sell offset the value of their advertising. This hinders the progress of their business. Let us say here that we are ready to stand back of every statement we have ever made in any advertisement and that we will guarantee our material to be all we claim it to be. You should investigate our material and get an estimate today on your needs.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS.

A steadily increasing number of people are learning to speak the language of flowers, and the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, finds it well worth while to assist in their education. This is done by means of the advertisement reproduced herewith. The reproduction is from a post card, but the same text is used in newspaper advertising, where it reaches a greater number of people.

ART IN MASSIVE DESIGNING.

Many Flowers to Make One Form.

Reviewing the two definitions given in the opening chapter of this discussion (on page 5 of The Review of June 9), that of the word "art," and that of the word "massive," we remember that art in massive design is really the expression of some idea by the use of many flowers or plants to make one form. Many forms of beauty are lost in one collection to produce a greater object, which shall be a reproduction of something seen or imagined. Beauty of individual flowers is deliberately sacrificed for what they can contribute to the tree or orchard. The separate flowers of any of the composite order are set closely together and you have the yellow center of the daisy or the brown center of the sunflower. That is massive designing with a vengeance. A grove or orchard is a massive design composed of massive designs, the individual trees.

Our massive designing, then, must take definite form, must mean something, must speak.

Of what practical value, then, is all this talk about massive designing? Having gotten this idea well in mind, not to lose sight of the individual beauty of the flower without finding for it a place in a mass which shall multiply its usefulness in its new location, let us mention a few instances where it will benefit us in our work.

Where Massing Is Effective.

If there are two or three hundred carnations available for a window display, collect them in one large vase or jar and display them as a mass rather than separate them into several groups or vases, aimlessly placed. In a church altar decoration where the flowers cannot be appreciated individually, mass them together at one point. How many times in a church the preacher must have his nerves upset and his attention distracted by an ambitious collection of yellow, red and green vases, with pink, lavender and white bouquets, upon a few square inches of pulpit desk space! Florists might help committees to simplify this matter and rule out miscellaneous contributions of this kind by suggesting coreopsis for one day's decorations, sweet peas for another, dahlias for another, pinks for another, etc.

Adhering to the Scheme.

In a decoration for a home wedding there are three points which should be treated—a convenient place opposite the entrance, where an attractive decorative feature should welcome guests as they arrive, the ceremony place, and the dining room. Other features should be helpers to emphasize the decorations of these points. They should harmonize with, yet lead up to the others.

Economize, not in the quantity of flowers employed, but in the variety of schemes employed. Some decorated rooms might be compared to a room decorated with many different styles of wall paper or different designs of frescoing, so little attention is paid to the style of arrangement of different decorative features. It should be one scheme, with every feature connected and related to every other.

Further, do not occupy every niche and corner that offers itself. Treat each room as a fraction of the whole, yet as a unit of itself. Neglect the majority of vacancies; indulge a few of them. In that sense, always mass.

Artistic Use of Short Stock.

Often a quantity of short stock is available for display purposes and a problem as to the method as often recurs. You may have dishes and dishes filled and set around, till you are weary and the people take no notice of them. They are as attractive as so much mud, as commonly displayed. But get out that set of rattan screens that have been forgotten for a while. Fasten some Kift vases on the back. Cover a screen with the short roses so that they appear as though growing on the front of the screen, either in spray patterns or solidly massed. Use two or three screens after this fashion. Set them according to the size of the window, with relation to each other and to the mirror. If properly arranged, the several sections will reflect indefinitely gates and gates of roses, and the people will stop and look, and remember, too. Besides suggesting that you have roses, it will also suggest that you have decorative sense.

Method in Massing.

A window filled with some kind of blooming plants in a commonplace manner will never prove so attractive as if a tall column of those same plants were seen rising alone and unrivaled in the window. Such groups of Easter lilies and spiræas have been seen this season. If enough space is available, have several columns, wide apart, and fill the floor space between the columns with plants individually displayed.

Mass with a purpose, and a very definite purpose, as you would scatter with a method in your madness.

Do not run massive designing or loose designing, or any other one style, to tiresome extremes. Alternate, combine, connect, hint at, flirt with the two. Occasionally cut loose from all restrictions and forget rules. Get away from everything and everybody and set your fancy free. See an image in your mind's eye and call in common sense to work it out.

Gertrude Blair.

BOOMING THE BUSINESS.

"Flower growers and sellers in England have not, on the whole, been having the best of times lately," says the Horticultural Advertiser, "and it would be well for the trade as a body to consider whether it is not in its power to do something to improve the demand generally.

"There are in England only two special seasons when flowers are so much in demand as to give the grower a chance of putting up his prices and making a little to compensate for slack seasons. In America there are not only these two, but also a great floral day known as Memorial day, which, we believe, is May 30. This began by quite a limited number of people taking flowers to the cemeteries to adorn the graves of the soldiers who fell in the great Civil war; but it has gradually spread until on that day nearly everyone decorates their family graves with wreaths and other floral emblems, so that a demand for flowers is created almost equal to that of Christmas or Easter. Then,

Do You Speak the Language of Flowers?

Flowers are the ideal medium for the expression of personal interest and may be made to speak in various degrees, from "Best Wishes" to "Tenderest messages of undying Love."

Mother; Wife; Sweetheart; Friend.

To each may be conveyed the most graceful expression of your sentiment by a box of well chosen flowers.

We make a practice of delivering boxes of flowers upon a standing order, at regular intervals, as desired. One dollar per box and upward. Haven't you someone to whom you would be glad to show your thougtful interest in this way?

again, our friends on that side have not allowed St. Valentine's day to pass unnoted as it now is with us, but by persistently drawing the attention of the public to it, and providing dainty boxes for postal dispatch [The editor of our British contemporary loses sight of the fact that there is no parcels post in the United States, necessitating delivery by special messenger.—Ed.], have created a large demand for violets and other suitable flowers.

"Still another flower day is now being engineered. The brilliant idea was mooted that it would be a pretty idea if every American citizen on a certain day would wear a flower in his coat as a tribute to his mother—a white flower if dead, or a colored one if living. Whether Mothers' day will catch on is not yet quite clear to the outsider, but the press, the parsons, and the mayors of towns are being stirred up to advance the movement, and it will not be the fault of the promoters if this day does not become another source of profit to the whole floral trade. These things seem to show that if the trade here would organize a little more, something might be done to improve the floral business in all its branches. Will some of our friends wake up and see how far the example set us can be followed here?"

THE ELEVATING INFLUENCE.

Did you ever have a premonition, just before you stumbled over a chair in the dark, that there was something impending? It is not at all that feeling A. Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., implies in the advertisement reproduced herewith. "Their presence can be felt as we enter the door of our home." It is the flowers. "Their gentle perfume refreshes after the weariest of days." It is good advertising talk and its publication over the name and address of the toniest of florists will detract nothing from the tone.

FLOWERS FOR THE LIVE ONES.

A retail florist has the following frequently expressed sentiment printed on his letterheads:

'Twere better to send a cheap bouquet
To a living friend, this very day,
Than a bushel of roses white and red,
To lay on his coffin after he's dead.

WEDDING WORK.

Canger & Gormley tell with pleasure of their having been called upon for two wedding decorations in the same Chicago family within three months. The second one, June 21, called for a church decoration with palms, smilax and banks and garlands of roses, a special feature being a row of natural rose trees on either side of the center aisle of the church. At the home of the bride, 1520 North State street, a large shower basket of White Killarneys was suspended from the ceiling so as to hang over the refreshment table in the dining-room. The bride carried a shower bouquet of swainsona. The maid of honor and six bridesmaids carried old-fashioned hand bouquets of Killarney rosebuds with the lace paper holders and ribbon.

THE BRIDE'S PARTY.

More than ordinary interest attaches to the illustrations of the bride and party on this page because of the fact that the principals are members of families well known in the trade. The photographs were made June 8 on the lawn adjoining the residence of the late Louis M. Noe, at Madison, N. J. The bride was Miss Lillian May Noe, and the groom Jefferson Leon Doremus, son of one of the veteran rose growers at that great rose producing center. The maid of honor was the bride's cousin, Miss Ada Ellouise Brant, daughter of D. Wood Brant, of Chicago. The bridesmaids were Wellesley college girls, and the flower girls were the Misses Helen and Ruth Pierson, daughters of Lincoln Pierson, president of the Pierson U-bar Co. Not often is there a wedding group in which so many of those pictured, or their families, are so widely known in the trade.

For those who are students of wedding flowers the bouquets carried by this party hold an interest because they are the work of one of the leading New York retailers. The ceremony was performed in the library of the Noe home, which was converted into a semi-chapel, palms and pink peonies being the principal materials used. The color scheme of the decorations throughout was pink and green.

CROPS FOR SMALL GREENHOUSE.

I have a small greenhouse, which is heated by stoves during spring and fall, but which cannot be used in the winter. What can I put in it for a summer crop? Also what could I run in it for fall? Should like to get something out of it if possible to do so. B. M. R.

You could raise a variety of bedding plants, such as asters, stocks, zinnias, etc., in such a greenhouse, starting these in March. You could also start such vegetables as cabbage, cauliflower, tomatoes, lettuce and celery in March and get a good sale for them if picked off into small boxes containing a dozen plants each. You could, if you wish, follow these plants with a crop of either tomatoes or chrysanthemums, whichever you would be likely to have the best sale for. If you do not want to grow bedding plants or vegetable plants for sale, it would be a good plan to take off a crop of lettuce first, and follow this with tomatoes. The latter could be put in the benches about the end of May, and would give a profitable crop before outdoor fruit comes in season.

PANSIES.

How many plants should I get from an ounce of pansy seed? When should they be sown, in Indiana, and transplanted to the field, to sell at wholesale in the fall and spring? R. F.

You should get 3,500 to 4,000 plants from each ounce of pansy seed if of good quality, and sometimes more. In your state, sow the seed on or about July 20 and transplant to the field when sufficiently large to handle, always selecting cloudy and moist days for the work. Transplant on ground with good drainage and where no water can possibly stand in winter. You can sow either outdoors or in coldframes. If outdoors, it is an advantage to mulch the seed bed with some light material until the seeds germinate. C. W.

GLADIOLI.

Kindly name some red, white and pink gladioli to grow in a carnation bench. Can the variety known as Baby be grown in carnation benches?

C. W. M.

A few good gladioli to grow in a carnation bench are: America, beautiful soft lavender pink; Augusta, pure white, blue anthers; Brenchleyensis, bright scarlet; Shakespeare, white suffused carmine; Octoroon, salmon pink; May, white, marked rosy crimson.

The so-called "baby" varieties of gladioli are useful for either bench culture or can be successfully grown in flats containing four inches of soil. These are procurable in October, and can be planted much earlier than the large bulbed sorts. A few desirable varieties are: G. Colvillei The Bride, pure white; Colvillei rosea, delicate pink; G. nanus Peach Blossom, delicate pink, the finest variety of all; Mathilde, white, tinged with delicate lavender; Blushing Bride, ivory white, with crimson flakes; Crimson Queen, orange scarlet. C. W.

TO DESTROY CUTWORMS.

What can I do to destroy little, dark colored, soft slugs in the soil? They get on my sweet peas at night and cut the tops of the tender shoots and leaves. The slugs are about three-eighths of an inch long. R. G.

The soft slugs referred to are undoubtedly cutworms, which are unusually destructive this year in many parts of the country. If your sweet peas are not yet in flower, spray them with arsenate of lead at the rate of four pounds to fifty gallons of water. This somewhat whitens the foliage and is adhesive, but it will effectually discourage the cutworms. Scattering soft coal soot freely around the plants and even dusting it over them acts as a deterrent. The soot is also a good fertilizer. A mash made of fresh shorts moistened with molasses and water, to which is added some Paris green or strychnine, will also poison many. Lay it here and there between the rows on a cabbage or lettuce leaf. C. W.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

The annual show of the Horticultural Society of France was held in Paris in the end of May. On this occasion more space than usual was devoted to the rose. This section was arranged by M. Gravercaux, the proprietor of the famous rose garden at L'Hay, and formed a complete history of the rose in all its forms and in its influence on literature and art. The first section dealt with roses of the ancient Greeks, the Rose of the Magi, roses of the middle ages, York and Lancaster types, the earliest known tea roses, all represented in plants or blooms, showing the development of the queen of flowers through many ages up to the modern rose of today. The second section dealt with the rose in botany, pharmaceutics and perfumery, in poetry, song and drama, in painting and sculpture, and finally in decorative and applied arts.

The international rose congress met at Paris May 26, M. Viger presiding, and during the week excursions were made to the Roseraie de L'Hay and the famous gardens at Versailles. The nurseries of Nomblot-Bruneau, Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Croux & Son, Truffaut & Sons and Moser & Sons were visited, a great host of horticulturists taking part in the proceedings.

Perhaps the most popular form of gardening in England at present is rock gardening, but this is being closely followed by a craze for Japanese gardens. There were many examples of both in the Temple Gardens show and exhibitors did a splendid trade in booking orders for rock plants, alpines, etc.

The centenary of Louis Van Houtte, born July 1, 1810, will be celebrated June 26 in Ghent, Belgium.

H. A. Dimmock, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., is running an extensive exhibit in London in conection with the Japan-British Exhibition. Japanese dwarf trees and Japanese stone garden lanterns are the outstanding features.

John Waterer & Sons, Bagshot, are running their annual exhibition of rhododendrons at the Royal Botanical Gardens, London, during the month of June. They are showing upwards of 2,000 plants from two feet to ten feet in height, in about 200 varieties, altogether about 50,000 blooms, and they claim that it is the largest flower show ever made by any one firm in the world.

again, our friends on that side have not allowed St. Valentine's day to pass unnoted as it now is with us, but by persistently drawing the attention of the public to it, and providing dainty boxes for postal dispatch [The editor of our British contemporary loses sight of the fact that there is no parcels post in the United States, necessitating delivery by special messenger.—Ed.], have created a large demand for violets and other suitable flowers.

"Still another flower day is now being engineered. The brilliant idea was mooted that it would be a pretty idea if every American citizen on a certain day would wear a flower in his coat as a tribute to his mother—a white flower if dead, or a colored one if living. Whether Mothers' day will catch on is not yet quite clear to the outsider, but the press, the parsons, and the mayors of towns are being stirred up to advance the movement, and it will not be the fault of the promoters if this day does not become another source of profit to the whole floral trade. These things seem to show that if the trade here would organize a little more, something might be done to improve the floral business in all its branches. Will some of our friends wake up and see how far the example set us can be followed here?"

THE ELEVATING INFLUENCE.

Did you ever have a premonition, just before you stumbled over a chair in the dark, that there was something impending? It is not at all that feeling A. Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., implies in the advertisement reproduced herewith. "Their presence can be felt as we enter the door of our home." It is the flowers. "Their gentle perfume refreshes after the weariest of days." It is good advertising talk and its publication over the name and address of the toniest of florists will detract nothing from the tone.

FLOWERS FOR THE LIVE ONES.

A retail florist has the following frequently expressed sentiment printed on his letterheads:

"Twere better to send a cheap bouquet
To a living friend, this very day,
Than a bushel of roses white and red,
To lay on his coffin after he's dead.

WEDDING WORK.

Canger & Gormley tell with pleasure of their having been called upon for two wedding decorations in the same Chicago family within three months. The second one, June 21, called for a church decoration with palms, smilax and banks and garlands of roses, a special feature being a row of natural rose trees on either side of the center aisle of the church. At the home of the bride, 1520 North State street, a large shower basket of White Killarneys was suspended from the ceiling so as to hang over the refreshment table in the dining room. The bride carried a shower bouquet of swainsona. The maid of honor and six bridesmaids carried old-fashioned hand bouquets of Killarney rosebuds with the lace paper holders and ribbon.

SNAILS.

Do you know of any practical way of getting rid of snails, either in glass houses or in the garden? I have tried practically every insecticide, but without results. Besides, I mixed the strongest poisons, like arsenic and Paris green, with bran, cornmeal and brown sugar, and all of no avail. I should be greatly obliged for knowing a mixture that would exterminate them. I also tried Aphine, Spramulsion, Slugshot and Nicoticide. E. N.

None of the remedies you have tried are of much avail against snails. They seem proof against all poisons and fumigations; even hydrocyanic acid gas seems to cause them little concern. In greenhouses they are specially destructive among adiantums. They can be trapped in large numbers by laying leaves of cabbage and lettuce, or slices of carrot and turnip, and examining these, especially at night; the snails can be plunged in hot water and destroyed. If your benches are badly infested, remove all the plants and either pour on boiling water, or give a dusting with air-slaked lime. A touch of the latter will kill the snails. Salt can be similarly used and it will pay to scatter either salt or lime, both on and below your benches. Snails cannot live long after coming in contact with either.

Outdoors, scatter lime or soot from soft coal freely around the haunts of the snails. They cannot travel over a line of either, and neither will harm any of your plants, the soot being specially beneficial. Salt can be similarly used, but is more likely to damage the plants. Scattered on walks or about any of their haunts, it will kill large quantities. A line of sawdust while it remains dry will act as a barrier to snails. I have frequently seen bands of this used outdoors to guard plants from the attacks of snails, with perfect success. C. W.

GERMINATING KENTIA SEEDS.

Please tell us how much heat kentia seeds can stand without being spoiled. Tell us, also, what degree of heat is most suitable for them. E. N.

Kentia seeds would stand a temperature of 100 degrees for a few days without serious injury, provided they were kept moist, but such a temperature is not necessary for the germination of these seeds. A temperature of 75 to 80 degrees is sufficient for the satisfactory germination of kentias, and this process may be accomplished in either light soil or a bed of sphagnum moss, as may be most convenient, the seeds being kept continually moist, but not sodden. W. H. T.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN SPRING.

The chroniclers of horticultural news in different parts of the country have been recording the fact of the chrysanthemum being on sale at different markets during the spring, and referring to it as something new, whereas, as a matter of fact, it is really as old as chrysanthemum culture. Every year for a long time, Charles Thorley, of New York, has had on sale flowers of a white variety, which I believe is the old variety Niveus, during the months of April and May, and some twelve years ago I recall growing a large batch of the old variety, J. H. Troy, for spring work.

Present-day growers are running more to Golden Glow, by the reports in The Review. It is a perfectly simple matter to get almost any variety in flower in the spring, if they are grown for that purpose, but the question is: Is it a good policy? I have always argued that one reason for the great popularity of the mum in the early fall was its reappearance after a good long spell of absence, and the average flower lover greets it like a long lost brother.

If we are going to have the chrysanthemum on sale all through the summer, we are going to kill the novelty and one of the mum's best assets for popularity will be crushed out. The writer, in conversation with a prominent grower a few days ago, was told that Golden Glow was going to kill the chrysanthemum business. Personally, I do not believe it is going to do any such thing, but that it will have some effect on the market until the craze for growing it has subsided, no one can for a moment doubt.

Golden Glow, even though it will flower at almost any season, produces the best flowers about the end of September or early in October. Much of the Golden Glow seen on the market at odd seasons is wretchedly poor, and about the only reason for the existence of a good deal of this stock is that the grower allowed the wood to get hard and could not prevent his plants from flowering.

If young plants of this variety are set out now, and left growing along until the middle or end of July before a bud appears, they will produce almost 100 per cent of beautiful flowers, and will be a standing refutation of the arguments of some growers that it cannot be made to produce a good, clean stem. Chas. H. Totty.

A GLIMPSE AHEAD.

The accompanying portrait of Thomas W. Pockett, of Melbourne, Australia, will give to many growers for the first time some idea of the man who has done possibly more than any other to bring the chrysanthemum to its present high standard, and a report just to hand of the annual autumn show held April 23 at Malvern, a suburb of Melbourne, gives a glimpse, six months ahead, of the things we shall hear more about when our own autumn arrives.

At the Malvern show, which was a notable one, "all the leading awards were won by W. T. Pockett, a son of T. W. Pockett, to whom the credit is due for establishing new seedlings. The well known curator of the Malvern public gardens has attained a stage which makes the cross-fertilization of chrysanthemums a work that will give immediate and certain results, as against the process of a few years ago, when the parents of the seedlings were not known. 'I know the fathers, the grandfathers and the great-grandfathers of the stocks on which I am working now,' Mr. Pockett said to the writer, when questioned regarding his advancement with hybridization. He has attained an even higher level than that of past successes with a new seedling, which has been named White Australia. Several blooms, pure white, with long drooping petals, were shown, and there is every sign of Mr. Pockett having produced a variety which will beat anything that has gone before it. There were large numbers of the newer chrysanthemums in the show, but while a specimen of the new pure white variety, Mrs. David Syme, was nearly equal to winning the award for the best bloom in the show, W. T. Pockett won with a Mme. Carnot, a result that was not begrudged by chrysanthemum enthusiasts, who recognize the remarkable manner in which this old favorite has maintained its vigor.

"That the work started at Malvern is established on a solid foundation is now an established fact. Speaking with Mr. Pockett on this subject, he said: 'I have accomplished the object I had in view when I first started. It was some time before my friends gave me encouragement. How could I expect to compete with America, France, Japan, Italy, England? How could I get plants to England in good condition? Now, all these difficulties have been overcome, with the assistance of those across the sea, and today the best growers and distributors of the two greatest flower loving countries in the world, England and America, can give them the greatest possible attention. It was thought when I raised two or three varieties some years ago that it was the luck that comes to most plant raisers, and that I would never get any more seedlings up to the same standard. However, I think I have forced that idea out of court by the number of other varieties that have since come to the front.' At the Malvern show there were a number of professional gardeners who did not hesitate to say that in White Australia Mr. Pockett has produced a new variety which promises to increase the interest in his seedlings on the other side of the world.

"To anyone taking up the raising of any new plant, Mr. Pockett's advice is to aim at something definite, and persevere along sound lines. More success, he asserts, will be gained by following this advice than by listening to every faddist, who knows what everybody ought to do, and advises accordingly.

"'All plants,' said Mr. Pockett, 'require certain weather at the various stages of growth, if the best results are to be obtained. After the season has gone, all observant growers of plants are able to give the reason why certain crops failed. This also applies to chrysanthemums. A certain kind of weather is necessary at the most critical time of the plant's existence, or else the time of flowering is somewhat changed, or the quality and quantity of blooms are not up to results obtained in ordinary seasons. Supposing the best exhibition blooms are required in this district (Malvern) about, say, the third week in April. Most of the buds would be selected from February 5 to 15, according to the varieties. If we get a few rather cool nights about that time the buds form naturally, and there is little trouble in getting the growth that will give the best blooms.'

"Mr. Pockett informed the writer that in raising new chrysanthemums it seldom happens that a good exhibition variety is also good as a decorative type. There are so many things to be considered, but the aim of a raiser is to combine as many good qualities as possible. One that has been somewhat neglected is the keeping quality of the bloom. Some are naturally good keepers, while others become good keepers owing to a comparatively early bud being selected, which causes a greater number of petals to form. In the latter case the flower is much slower in developing, which produces more substance in the petals, and consequently better keeping qualities. Mr. Pockett's present endeavors are centered in the raising of varieties in which the lighter colors will predominate. Good whites and yellows are always wanted, and the Malvern grower has every confidence in raising the standard of the lighter colored types. The dark colors were scarce a few years ago, but there is now a greater number, and there should be no lack in this class for some time to come.

"Of the many varieties at the show R. F. Felton must be noted as one of the most serviceable chrysanthemums raised by Mr. Pockett. In Mr. Pockett's winning collection of twelve Australian seedlings, the varieties were: Mrs. David Syme, pure white; Rose Pockett, light gold; Alice Lemon, pale heliotrope; Kara Dow, buff and yellow; Mrs. A. Henley, light heliotrope; Mrs. W. Knox, yellow; Pockett's Crimson, crimson and gold; Frank Payne, pale pink; Mrs. W. H. Read, deep red; Gladys Blackburn, yellow buff; Mr. F. T. Thompson, pure white, and Mrs. Lexford, brick red and yellow. Of this collection, and in others staged at the same show, Alice Lemon stood out as a particularly fine variety. A new white, exhibited for the first time among Mr. Pockett's seedlings, has been named Lady Carmichael."

T. W. Pockett.

Mr. Pockett's latest variety, which he has called White Australia, he describes in a private letter as running easily from ten to twelve inches in depth and nine to ten inches in diameter. This will give an idea of the improvement that is still going on, and the results that this noted grower is producing, by eternally concentrating his mind on chrysanthemum breeding.

It will be noted that the variety Mrs. David Syme has shown up wonderfully well in Australia, and C. H. Totty says he is looking to see just the same results with it here this fall. The White Australia will not conform to our florists' idea of foliage right up to the flower, as will Syme, but the enormous size will undoubtedly make it a leader in the short vase classes.

HE FOLLOWED DIRECTIONS.

I wish to say I followed the advice and instructions given me in The Review of June 9, for mildewed mums, and I am happy to say the mums today are entirely free from mildew and have that nice, healthy, dark green, growing color, as nice a lot of plants as one would wish to see. Thanks to the valuable Review and Mr. Totty.

Greenfield, Mass.—F. J. Yetter's store, in the Sheldon block on Main street, has been remodeled and enlarged. The vacating of a neighboring store, formerly occupied by a milliner, provided the room for this expansion.

SUMMER TREATMENT OF CALLAS.

The selling season for callas is now practically over. Of course, a few growers manage to market flowers the year around, but after the end of May they are really not wanted until October. The general method of culture is still in pots; probably nine-tenths of the growers under glass adopt this method, the balance using benches or solid beds. Each plan has its advantages. Where space can be spared, beds are excellent, but pot culture permits the grower to move his plants around as he deems fit, and for small growers is preferable to bench culture. The foliage will now show signs of ripening off, but it is unwise to dry off the plants too suddenly. Stand them outdoors. Let them get any moisture coming from the skies for a couple of weeks; then lay them on their sides and keep them there until time for repotting arrives in August.

Plants in beds should be dug up carefully and packed close together in boxes of loam. Keep these under glass a few days, even if it be in a coldframe. A too sudden drying off will injure the tubers. After the tops disappear, pack in dry sand and store in a shed or cellar. Small offsets can be planted outdoors and will make good sized tubers before the end of September, when they can be lifted and potted. The low price of Californian tubers has induced many growers to purchase fresh stock yearly, but good home-grown ones are vastly superior to any that can be bought and will last for a number of years.

Naperville, Ill.—Charles F. Rohr says that the Memorial day trade this year was the heaviest that he has ever seen in a town of this size.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS IN SPRING.

The chroniclers of horticultural news in different parts of the country have been recording the fact of the chrysanthemum being on sale at different markets during the spring, and referring to it as something new, whereas, as a matter of fact, it is really as old as chrysanthemum culture. Every year for a long time, Charles Thorley, of New York, has had on sale flowers of a white variety, which I believe is the old variety Niveus, during the months of April and May, and some twelve years ago I recall growing a large batch of the old variety, J. H. Troy, for spring work.

Present-day growers are running more to Golden Glow, by the reports in The Review. It is a perfectly simple matter to get almost any variety in flower in the spring, if they are grown for that purpose, but the question is: Is it a good policy? I have always argued that one reason for the great popularity of the mum in the early fall was its reappearance after a good long spell of absence, and the average flower lover greets it like a long lost brother.

If we are going to have the chrysanthemum on sale all through the summer, we are going to kill the novelty and one of the mum's best assets for popularity will be crushed out. The writer, in conversation with a prominent grower a few days ago, was told that Golden Glow was going to kill the chrysanthemum business. Personally, I do not believe it is going to do any such thing, but that it will have some effect on the market until the craze for growing it has subsided, no one can for a moment doubt.

Golden Glow, even though it will flower at almost any season, produces the best flowers about the end of September or early in October. Much of the Golden Glow seen on the market at odd seasons is wretchedly poor, and about the only reason for the existence of a good deal of this stock is that the grower allowed the wood to get hard and could not prevent his plants from flowering.

If young plants of this variety are set out now, and left growing along until the middle or end of July before a bud appears, they will produce almost 100 per cent of beautiful flowers, and will be a standing refutation of the arguments of some growers that it cannot be made to produce a good, clean stem. Chas. H. Totty.

A GLIMPSE AHEAD.

The accompanying portrait of Thomas W. Pockett, of Melbourne, Australia, will give to many growers for the first time some idea of the man who has done possibly more than any other to bring the chrysanthemum to its present high standard, and a report just to hand of the annual autumn show held April 23 at Malvern, a suburb of Melbourne, gives a glimpse, six months ahead, of the things we shall hear more about when our own autumn arrives.

At the Malvern show, which was a notable one, "all the leading awards were won by W. T. Pockett, a son of T. W. Pockett, to whom the credit is due for establishing new seedlings. The well known curator of the Malvern public gardens has attained a stage which makes the cross-fertilization of chrysanthemums a work that will give immediate and certain results, as against the process of a few years ago, when the parents of the seedlings were not known. 'I know the fathers, the grandfathers and the great-grandfathers of the stocks on which I am working now,' Mr. Pockett said to the writer, when questioned regarding his advancement with hybridization. He has attained an even higher level than that of past successes with a new seedling, which has been named White Australia. Several blooms, pure white, with long drooping petals, were shown, and there is every sign of Mr. Pockett having produced a variety which will beat anything that has gone before it. There were large numbers of the new chrysanthemums in the show, but while a specimen of the new pure white variety, Mrs. David Syme, was nearly equal to winning the award for best bloom in the show, W. T. Pockett won with a Mme. Carnot, a result that was not begrudged by chrysanthemum enthusiasts, who recognize the remarkable manner in which this old favorite has maintained its vigor.

"That the work started at Malvern is established on a solid foundation is now an established fact. Speaking with Mr. Pockett on this subject he said: 'I have accomplished the object I had in view when I first started. It was some time before my friends gave me encouragement. How could I expect to compete with America, France, Japan, Italy, England? How could I get plants to England in good condition? Now, all these difficulties have been overcome, with the assistance of those across the sea, and today the best growers and distributors of the two greatest flower loving countries in the world, England and America, will give them the greatest possible attention. It was thought when I raised two or three varieties some years ago that it was the luck that comes to the plant raisers, and that I would not

A new white, exhibited for the first time among Mr. Pockett's seedlings, has been named Lady Carmichael."

T. W. Pockett.

Mr. Pockett's latest variety, which he has called White Australia, he describes in a private letter as running easily from ten to twelve inches in depth and nine to ten inches in diameter. This will give an idea of the improvement that is still going on, and the results that this noted grower is producing, by eternally concentrating his mind on chrysanthemum breeding.

It will be noted that the variety Mrs. David Syme has shown up wonderfully well in Australia, and C. H. Totty says he is looking to see just the same results with it here this fall. The White Australia will not conform to our florists' idea of foliage right up to the flower, as will Syme, but the enormous size will undoubtedly make it a leader in the short vase classes.

HE FOLLOWED DIRECTIONS.

I wish to say I followed the advice and instructions given me in The Review of June 9, for mildewed mums, and I am happy to say the mums today are entirely free from mildew and have that nice, healthy, dark green, growing color, as nice a lot of plants as one would wish to see. Thanks to the valuable Review and Mr. Totty.

SUMMER TREATMENT OF CALLAS.

The selling season for callas is now practically over. Of course, a few growers manage to market flowers the year around, but after the end of May they are really not wanted until October. The general method of culture is still in pots; probably nine-tenths of the growers under glass adopt this method, the balance using benches or solid beds. Each plan has its advantages. Where space can be spared, beds are excellent, but pot culture permits the grower to move his plants around as he deems fit, and for small growers is preferable to bench culture. The foliage will now show signs of ripening off, but it is unwise to dry off the plants too suddenly. Stand them outdoors. Let them get any moisture coming from the skies for a couple of weeks; then lay them on their sides and keep them there until time for repotting arrives in August.

Plants in beds should be dug up carefully and packed close together in boxes of loam. Keep these under glass a few days, even if it be in a coldframe. A too sudden drying off will injure the tubers. After the tops disappear, pack in dry sand and store in a shed or cellar. Small offsets can be planted outdoors and will make good sized tubers before the end of September, when they can be lifted and potted. The low price of Californian tubers has induced many growers to purchase fresh stock yearly, but good home-grown ones are vastly superior to any that can be bought and will last for a number of years.

Naperville, Ill.—Charles F. Rohr says that the Memorial day trade this year was the heaviest that he has ever seen in a town of this size.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

In poinsettias, the old stock plants are now yielding an abundance of cuttings. Be sure to look over these twice a week, so that they cannot become too long. Three inches is a nice length for cuttings. In making them, take the leaves off tolerably bare. Leaving on a lot of foliage simply means that a large part of it will decay and probably cause the rotting of the cuttings themselves.

Early propagated cuttings, which would grow too long to be of any use for pan culture, must be kept potted on. Or, better still, if bench space allows, plant them out in five or six inches of good loam; soil such as you would give to chrysanthemums will answer admirably. When quantities of late cuttings are wanted for pans, it is a good plan to plant the stock outdoors, where, with a little warmer and more summer-like weather, cuttings will be produced in quantity.

Eucharis Amazonica.

Both when grown in pots and in benches, Eucharis Amazonica usually gives a second crop of flowers in June. If in pots, as soon as the flowers are cut give the plants a top-dressing and, in order to get an excellent growth on them through the summer months, place the pots in a coldframe, plunged to their brims in a mixture of strawy manure and leaves, which will provide a gentle bottom heat. Place shaded sashes over the plants, spray and shut them up sufficiently early in the afternoon to bottle up a brisk heat. Treated thus, eucharis will make a grand growth, and, if placed in a dry, moderately cool house about the end of September and given a few weeks' rest, they can be started in heat to furnish a crop of flowers for Christmas. Do any necessary potting before placing the plants in the frames, but always remember that they flower best when well potbound, in which condition they should have an abundance of liquid manure.

Late Bedding Plants.

The unseasonably cold weather prevailing over a large part of the country has considerably delayed bedding-out. Particularly is this true of subtropical varieties, which simply starve when the weather is cold and wet. There is always more or less of a demand for bedding stock right through the month of June. It is a good plan to see, first, that we have a sufficient quantity of each variety reserved and planted out for ourselves, and then get the remaining batches of plants gathered together in frames, where they can be readily watered. Far too often do we see a few plants here and there, scattered all about, and entailing considerable scurrying around when any order is received. If all the plants are kept together, it is easy to see whether an order can be filled or not. Do not leave empty pots lying above and below benches and outdoors, wherever plants sold may chance to be. Gather them up and stack them away neatly according to their sizes.

Show Pelargoniums.

As the show pelargoniums pass out of flower, stand them outdoors. Reduce the water supply gradually and, as the foliage begins to take on a golden hue, lay the plants on their sides and keep them dry for a few weeks. If extra good sized plants are desired for next spring, cuttings can be obtained in abundance now. As a general rule, it is better to wait until August for these, when the wood is somewhat firmer and less liable to damp off in case of very hot weather.

Propagating Flowering Shrubs.

There are many deciduous shrubs which can now be propagated, while the wood is in a half-ripened condition. As a general rule, small growers prefer to buy these plants from some of the big specialists, rather than bother with it themselves. The best propagating place for shrubbery is in a coldframe. A little warm manure, to give a gentle bottom heat, is an advantage. The soil should be fairly sandy for cuttings and not too heavy. Movable shades should be used and air should be admitted carefully at all times.

The following are some of the varieties of flowering shrubs which may now be propagated: Hydrangea paniculata and arborescens, weigelias, Philadelphus Lemoinei and coronarius, deutzias, lilacs, ligustrums, loniceras, kerrias, symphoricarpos and viburnums. Some of these varieties come readily from seed and are therefore of easy propagation. Others, like the lilacs, root slowly, and not at all if the wood is not in exactly the proper condition of firmness.

CALCEOLARIAS.

When should I sow calceolarias for winter flowering? A. O. C.

It is rather early yet to sow seed of herbaceous calceolarias. During the hot summer months the seedlings are liable to damp off. I always have the best success with seed sown about August 1, in a coldframe facing the north. Cover the sash with a board shutter to keep it cooler in the frame until germination takes place. A lean-to greenhouse facing north is also a suitable place to put the seed pans. Calceolarias cannot be classed as winter-flowering plants. Their real blooming period is April and May. The rugosa section can be flowered a little ahead of the herbaceous varieties. It is impossible to force these calceolarias. Heat will speedily ruin them. They must be grown cool all the time if good plants are wanted.

CARNATIONS

ADDING LIME TO BENCH SOIL.

Can I safely mix lime with my carnation soil before wheeling it onto the benches? If so, how much lime should be used for each wheelbarrow load? Will it improve the soil? J. M.

Whether the adding of lime will improve your soil cannot be determined without more knowledge of conditions than your letter gives. Under certain conditions, lime will improve almost any soil, but this cannot be said in any and all cases. If your soil is inclined to be soggy and sour, lime will certainly sweeten and improve it. But if it is of good texture and in good mechanical condition, I would not add any lime to it at this time. It will be better to wait until your plants have made some growth, and you can soon see whether the soil is deficient in potash. If the stems come weak under normal culture, then you can add lime or wood ashes with good results. To add potash to soil which is already well supplied with potash would cause the stems to come brittle, and the flowers to lack substance. So do not add anything to your soil unless you feel sure it is needed.

See that your soil is rich in nitrogen, by adding to it a liberal quantity of humus before you house your carnations. Potash and phosphoric acid can be added at any time their need is detected, in the shape of top-dressing, etc.

THRIPS ON OLD PLANTS.

Please inform me as to the best remedy for thrips on carnations. We have been troubled with this pest lately, and as we are about ready to empty our houses, we should like to kill those that are on the old plants, even if we kill the plants too, so as to have the house clean for the new crop. We intend to burn all the old plants, but should like to kill the pests in the house before we remove the plants.

thrips, I would fumigate with sulphur by burning a liberal quantity in the house. If you fumigate your houses before you take the plants out, I would suggest that you repeat the treatment after the houses are all cleaned out. You will be far more certain to get them all after the plants have been removed. Burn the old plants as you take them out, to destroy any that may have escaped the first dose.

CARNATION SHOW IN LONDON.

The spring show of the English carnation society was fixed for May 19, but owing to the funeral of King Edward it was postponed and held June 9. Perhaps the postponement detracted a little from the attendance, but all round it was the finest as regards exhibits ever held under the society's auspices, and the later date enabled E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., who had just landed in England, to put in an appearance. He received a cordial reception and expressed himself gratified with the general excellence of the blooms. He was particularly impressed with three British varieties, Engelmann's Carola, Burnett's Marmion and Smith's Empire Day, which secured the prize for the best vase in the show. John Evans, representing a ventilating apparatus factory in Indiana, also was a visitor and in addition to fixing up his system at Rochford's big glass establishment he is bringing it to the notice of other greenhouse firms in England.

The interest of American growers doubtless will center on the class for the America cup, donated by the American Carnation Society. This was offered for the best exhibit of three American varieties and was won by W. E. Wallace, of Eaton Bray, with May Day, Afterglow and Pink Delight. Among the other varieties of American origin, and these made up a large part of the show, were Beacon, President, Sarah Hill, Victory, Winsor, Fair Maid, Robert Craig, White Perfection, Pink Delight, Winona, Aristocrat, Enchantress and one or two others. These were all shown in good form.

For the recognition of American varieties a new rule has been introduced and came into force for the first time. It reads: "All American raised novelties exhibited in competitive, and non-competitive exhibits, at each show to be judged by a special committee of six judges appointed yearly to act in conjunction with the floral committee; first-class certificates and awards of merit to be awarded according to the society's scale of points; no entries necessary; the names of the varieties and the raisers' names to be published each year in the 'Year Book,' but not the names of the exhibitors." The following awards were made: First-class certificate to May Day; award of merit to Pink Delight; award of merit to Superior.

The principal exhibitors were: W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey; C. F. Waters, Belcombe; A. F. Dutton, Iver, Bucks; W. H. Page, Hampton; S. Mortimer, Farnham; W. E. Wallace, Eaton Bray; C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden; G. Lange, B. E. Bell and H. J. Dunday.

Dinner table decorations with carnations were effective and formed a pleasing feature of the show, but in decorative baskets, bouquets, etc., the competition was somewhat limited.

I want to grow a few roses this year and I should like to know the best variety of white and pink for a beginner. I shall plant them on a solid bench, and I should like to know how many inches of soil is required, how far apart each way and what size plants I should get. J. E. S.

Killarney and White Killarney are both good varieties and not difficult to grow. On a solid bench the depth of soil can range from four to six inches. The plants should have at least one foot of space each way, and fourteen inches is not any too much. The plants should be from 3-inch or 3½-inch pots.

THE NEW ROSE PRINCETON.

The illustration gives an excellent idea of the new rose, Princeton, grown by Stockton & Howe, Princeton, N. J. This rose, which has been described in The Review, is so highly prized, both by the growers and by their commission merchants, Berger Bros., Philadelphia, that a wide 300-foot house will be devoted to it next season. Size, color, vigor, freedom of bloom are all strongly in favor of the new aspirant. Should Princeton make good, it is proposed to send it out in the spring of 1911.

APHIS ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

I am sending you some leaves from a rambler rose bush. The plant is attacked by aphis. Is the discoloration caused by the aphis, or is it some fungi? Will nicotine clean off the aphis? Please give me some advice, so that I can bring the plant back to normal conditions. G. H. H.

The attacks of aphis cause the leaves to become discolored in this way. Nicotine extract diluted in water is an excellent remedy to apply. Usually cans containing these give the proportions of water and nicotine to use. Whale Oil soap, one pound to eight gallons of water, kerosene emulsion, one part to twenty parts of water, and Ivory soap, one pound to eight gallons of water, are all excellent for controlling aphis. In applying use a syringe or force pump, and be sure to wet every portion of the plants. The aphis cannot be poisoned, but may be killed by contact with any of the solutions named. C. W.

ROSE MRS. AARON WARD.

A great attraction in some of the best Boston retail stores during the present season has been the beautiful new hybrid tea rose, Mrs. Aaron Ward, grown by William H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., at his big Madbury, N. H., rose growing establishment. This rose, often erroneously called Mrs. Humphry Ward, was sent out by the French firm, Pernet-Ducker, in 1907, and was first listed in America by the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., from whom Mr. Elliott procured his original stock. He planted it on a small scale, and during the season of 1908-9 sold it in small quantities in Boston. The color took people's fancies at once, so that a much larger lot was planted last summer, and some thousands are now growing and blooming profusely at Madbury, N. H.

The color of the flower can best be described as a rich Indian yellow, occasionally suffused or washed with salmon rose. The flower is full and the petals are of excellent substance. Mr. Elliott has shipped consignments as far as Atlanta, Ga., where they were received in first-class shape. The foliage is noteworthy on account of its rich, shiny appearance and standing out so stiffly. The plant with Mr. Elliott has proved an excellent grower and continuous bloomer, carrying plenty of 18-inch stems. The best proof to be had of its selling qualities is to be found in the fact that it will be much more largely grown at Madbury the coming season. The plants, from which flowers are still being cut in large quantities, started to produce in late September, and the rose looks as though it might prove a good summer variety. W. N. Craig.

IDENTITY OF ROSE.

We send you the bloom of a rose we wish to identify, thinking probably it is Vick's Caprice. This rose is perfectly hardy here in central Illinois, the bush from which this flower was cut having stood in the open for twenty years or more. A. & C.

The rose sent by this correspondent is York and Lancaster, a very old English sort, which was scattered over this country some forty or fifty years ago. It has peculiar spreading habits; that is, it will branch off and come up from the roots and in this way become scattered. This rose is not grown or sold in this country any more at all, but you will find it described in most of the standard works on roses.

ROSES CHANGING COLOR.

A customer has had four pink rose bushes for the last seven years. This year I moved them to another place, and now they have changed their color to dark red. And a coppery yellow has changed to a cream color. Can you state why they change their color?

should come the same color each year. Brilliant sunshine fades out colors and shady locations prevent fading out. Certain soils intensify colors, but never to the extent of turning a pink into a dark red. In dull weather outdoor roses have a higher color than under brighter conditions. Is it not possible that the influence of sunlight may be accountable for the pinks having a deeper shade? Similarly, the coppery colored one will probably become deeper colored as it becomes established. Apart from sporting, there is no reason why roses should change their color, and the sporting is not likely to affect whole bushes. C. W.

THE TEMPLE SHOW.

The Temple show, the great horticultural event of the year in London, seems this year to have surpassed even its former great record. The leading nurserymen and gardeners of England and a few from the continent of Europe brought together the finest plants and flowers that cultural skill can produce. They were arranged in spacious marquees and in open-air groups in the Temple gardens, right in the center of London. Every available inch of space was occupied with exhibits, many of them of such merit as has never previously been seen in Europe.

The main features were magnificent collections of orchids, grand banks of multicolored and many-shaped blooms, baffling description; roses in grand profusion, especially ramblers; choice carnations, superb tuberous begonias and numerous rock-gardens and Japanese gardens.

Notable orchid growers, such as Sander & Sons, Bruges; Charlesworth & Co., Hayward Heath; Mansell & Hatcher, Rawdon, and Ch. Vuylsteke, Ghent, surpassed all previous efforts. In the collection of the last named some of the specimens were valued at £1,200 each, and a special policeman stood guard over them day and night.

The banks and bowers of roses in pots were undoubtedly a grand feature. The best collections were contributed by W. Paul & Son, Waltham Cross; G. Paul, Cheshunt; Hobbies, Ltd., Dereham; G. Mount & Son, Canterbury, and Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., Newtownards. The first three were noteworthy on account of the fine profusion of ramblers in each, many of them tall standards with huge heads, carrying masses of bloom, such as Hiawatha, Coquina, Delight, American Pillar, Excelsa, etc. The last named, in the collection of Paul & Sons, received an award of merit. A similar award was given to Duchess of Westminster, in Dickson's collection, a rich mauve pink hybrid tea, with large, smooth petals. Remarkably fine culture and exquisite arrangement were demonstrated in Mount's pyramidal groups of Frau Karl Druschki, Mrs. John Laing, Ulrich Brunner and Lady Hillingdon, the new yellow at present in great demand. Claudius, one of last year's hybrid teas, was well shown by B. R. Cant & Sons.

In carnations the flower of the day was Engelmann's Carola. C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, has exhibited vases on several occasions during the last two years, but his tall stands of mammoth 5-inch blooms created all-round amazement and admiration; everybody wants Carola. Next in gen-

The Market.

This week opened with business a little better, school and college commencements and graduation exercises being mainly responsible for the improvement, but by Tuesday, June 21, the heat reached 93 degrees and the market weakened again. Last week was, on the whole, a poor one. The weather was damp and disagreeable nearly every day and many outdoor flowers had a speckled and spotted appearance. Roses had a poor week, but from now on their numbers should rapidly dwindle, with growers pulling out crops preparatory to replanting. Carnots continue popular, as do Killarneys. Beauties of good quality sell well, but they are not plentiful. Bride and Maid still hang fire. Outdoor hybrid perpetuals, such as Jacqueminot and Luizet, are coming in and are a welcome addition; they sell well.

Carnations are moving moderately well, but a great proportion of the flowers arriving are of poor quality and dear at almost any price. Outdoor sweet peas have been affected by the constant dampness prevailing, whites especially coming badly spotted. Good Spencers still bring $1 per hundred, but there are quite a few poor indoor flowers arriving. Peonies are at their flood tide. Good white and pink flowers have sold readily, but for the red and purple shades there is little call. There are plenty of good gladioli, lilies and stocks. Lily of the valley is enjoying an unusually good sale, thanks to numerous weddings. Of these latter Boston has an extra heavy crop at present. Such hardy flowers as sweet-williams, digitalis, etc., are in light demand. There has been a good trade in asparagus and adiantum.

Club Meeting.

Ladies' night June 21 attracted an attendance of 250 and all present had an enjoyable evening. Four new members were elected. The solos of Miss Margaret Alexander were specially well rendered and enthusiastically encored, but the other soloists, John Miller and George Collins, had a warm welcome. Dances by Misses Ferguson and Boyd were a great hit. The committee on S. A. F. national show entertainment reported favorable to a banquet. There seemed to be some doubt, however, as to the wisdom of this on account of the impossibility of securing a fully representative attendance on any one day. The Rochester convention was boomed; a good delegation is certain. Well wishes were enthusiastically voted Mrs. E. M. Gill on the occasion of her eightieth birthday.

The coming club picnic at Pine Banks park, July 27, was boomed and contributions for special prizes are coming in well for it. Short addresses were made by several members, including one of farewell from E. O. Orpet, who leaves for Lake Forest, Ill., July 1. Other speakers were Messrs. Stewart, Westwood, Wheeler, Downs, Miller and others.

FOR A BEGINNING.

I want to grow a few roses this year and I should like to know the best variety of white and pink for a beginner. I shall plant them on a solid bench, and I should like to know how many inches of soil is required, how far apart each way and what size plants I should get. J. E. S.

Killarney and White Killarney are both good varieties and not difficult to grow. On a solid bench the depth of soil can range from four to six inches. The plants should have at least one foot of space each way, and fourteen inches is not any too much. The plants should be from 3-inch or 3½ inch pots. Ribes.

There was an excellent floral display on the exhibition tables, sufficient to provide a bunch for all ladies present, William Sim's sweet peas being much in evidence, as usual. Among the notable exhibits were splendid Cattleya gigas from William Downs, perennials from J. Huerlin, Dahlia Jack Rose from W. C. Ward and collections of strawberries from Wilfred Wheeler. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, strawberries, cake, etc., were served. The club will hold its next meeting September 20.

Various Notes.

The sympathy of a host of friends goes out to George Gordon, head gardener on the Dudley L. Pickman estate, Beverly Cove, Mass., in the loss of his daughter, Mabel, by drowning in Jamaica Pond, Boston, June 17. The deceased young lady was 29 years of age and graduated from Wellesley college a few years ago. She had gone to a Jamaica Plain hospital for treatment for nervous troubles a week before the drowning and destroyed herself, it is thought, while temporarily unbalanced. The body was recovered from forty feet of water and had been heavily weighted down with stones. Mr. Gordon is a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and one of the most respected members of the profession in the neighborhood of Boston. He has the sympathy of everyone in his sad bereavement.

A successful flower and fruit show was held in Milton, June 18, roses, peonies, irises, miscellaneous hardy perennials, shrubs and strawberries being features. J. K. M. L. Farquhar and W. N. Craig officiated as judges.

Charles Evans is one of the latest to get the automobile fever and talks of disposing of horses and teams in favor of a horseless vehicle.

W. F. Chase, the popular salesman for Julius H. Zinn, is enjoying a needed vacation at Ogunquit, Me.

A. G. Lake, of Wellesley Hills, has a new forcing tomato, which for cropping qualities and perfectly shaped fruit will take a lot of beating.

Charles E. Robinson, of H. M. Robinson & Co., has been busy handing out cigars during the last week. It is a fine boy this time.

Miss Lillie Mary Neil, the eldest daughter of Samuel Neil, the well known Dorchester florist, was married at the home of her parents, 501 Park street, June 22, the fortunate bridegroom being William Thornton Decker, of New Jersey. The house was beautifully decorated for the wedding and the happy couple were the recipients of a host of valuable presents.

The annual rose show of the North Shore Horticultural Society will be held on Vine street, Beverly Farms, June 29 and 30. Many Bostonians will attend.

Rain has fallen here on fourteen out of the last nineteen days, the aggregate precipitation being six inches. Trees, shrubs and lawns never looked more luxuriant and, while the continual dampness has greatly hindered the extensive spraying operations, it has been unfavorable for the hatching of insect pests, for which we are duly thankful.

Charles E. Robinson and William Penn are among those who are planning European trips at an early date.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. have a grand display of peonies at their Dedham nurseries at present. The collection includes a choice lot of Richardson seedlings, in addition to some fine ones of their own raising.

In the Arnold Arboretum at present the display of Kalmia latifolia at the base of Hemlock Hill is unusually fine. Syringas of the Lemoinei varieties are also beautifully flowered.

E. J. Shaylor, of Wellesley Hills, in his extensive peony collection has a charming pure white named Le Cygne, one of Lemoine's newest introductions. His own seedling, Georgianna Shaylor, is also grand.

Miss Mary Florence Pettigrew, daughter of J. A. Pettigrew, was married at the home of her parents June 18 to George Wright Hinckley, of New York. Quite a number of local prominent horticulturists were included among the guests. The newly married couple were well remembered by a host of friends.

Mrs. E. M. Gill, of Medford, will celebrate her eighties birthday June 28. Mrs. Gill was a prize winner at the recent peony exhibition.

Visitors last week included W. J. Bean, of Kew, England, a noted writer and authority on hardy plants, and George W. Strange, of Summit, N. J.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Last week was commencement week with us. Everybody had his share of work and is well satisfied. There are a few complaints of how flowers are handled at the theaters by those who take care of them. It is truly a shame how bouquets and baskets are piled up and walked over by indifferent stage help. It is time for the florists to get together and try to arrange some plan with the school board or those that have charge of each commencement to take proper care of flowers for these occasions. It certainly does not do the florist any good to have a basket or bouquet, which he has taken great pains to make, sent on the stage looking as if it had been through a threshing mill. It is too late for any remedy this year, but it is none too early for the next year, while things are still fresh in the minds of all concerned. Besides, the Kentucky Society of Florists may take a hand in this most important subject, which affects both grower and retailer.

June is certainly proving true to its name as the month of weddings. A few good ones have taken place every week, and some nice ones are booked for the latter part of the month. Sweet peas figure prominently for these, although white roses and valley are the best bet for the bride. Peas were a little scarce the first part of the week, but after Wednesday they were plentiful. Almost everybody has bundles of them, and the prices have taken a tumble. Roses are in fairly good shape, but the warm weather is telling on them. Carnations are more than plentiful; the heat is also getting the best of them. Outdoor stock, such as phlox, iris, sweet williams, etc., is arriving regularly. Outdoor ramblers were never prettier here than this season, and some remarkable plants are to be seen.

Planting out is about completed, and the greenhouse men are getting the mums in as rapidly as possible. K. R.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

There is not much doing outside of funeral work, but this has been quite plentiful of late, helping to get rid of a lot of surplus stock. Flowers are abundant just now, both from indoors and outdoors. Carnations are now retailing at 35 and 50 cents per dozen; roses, at $1.50 per dozen. Outside sweet peas are just commencing to bloom. Lilies sell at $2 per dozen. Outdoor roses are in full bloom and present a fine sight wherever seen.

There is still a good call for geraniums and other bedding plants. Aster plants sell well, as also do marigolds, cosmos and a whole host of flowering annuals.

Young carnations are about all planted out for this year. Mum stock in general is looking well. Hardy ferns of good quality are coming in now. Some fine peonies are to be seen just now in this section; they are now in full bloom.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, Mass., has just received a big importation of palms, etc., from the other side.

S. S. Peckham is still cutting some nice ten weeks' stocks. W. L.

NAME OF PLANT.

I am sending a flower for name. I found this flower in a cemetery used as a decoration, in a dry state. I judge it to be a hardy plant. W. W. W.

One of the sea lavenders, or statices. The best hardy variety is S. latifolia. The variety enclosed seems to be S. Holfordi, a greenhouse variety. All the statices can be cut and treated like everlastings. C.

Mount Gilead, O.—The trustees of the bankrupt estate of Armondo L. Munk filed their final report June 14. June 27 was fix d as the date for the final meeting of the creditors.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Martins Ferry, O.—Jack Beck has opened a branch store in the room adjoining Ralston & Parker's drug store.

Peoria, Ill.—James C. Murray has removed from his store on Main street and is now well established at his new location, 302 Fulton street.

Portland, Ore.—J. G. Bacher is manager of the Swiss Floral Co. The landscape department is in charge of Charles Welty and H. Graf.

Monongahela, Pa.—The I. Shelby Crall Co. has let the contract for a new Lord & Burnham semi-iron greenhouse, 40x100 feet.

St. Paul, Minn.—Holm & Olson have begun the erection of eight greenhouses, at Duke and Pleasant streets. Five of the new houses will be 22x98, two of them 17x97 and one 9x124.

Ironwood, Mich.—R. Lutey, proprietor of the Ironwood Greenhouses, says business last season was the best ever, and is now busy building two more greenhouses.

Guanajay, Cuba.—Arthur Brant, who has been superintendent of the plant growing department of the Cuba and U. S. Fruit and Nursery Co., has returned to the United States.

The Dalles, Ore.—The first year's business at the Jewell Greenhouses has far exceeded the expectations of the proprietor. Memorial day trade was especially satisfactory, with the demand fully equal to the supply.

Macomb, Ill.—At Bonham's flower store there recently was a display of 100 varieties of peony blooms. The exhibitor was Charles Wettengel, of Emmett township, who has an extremely large collection.

Cuyahoga Falls, O.—O. C. Barber, the millionaire match manufacturer, is building eleven greenhouses, each 30x156, which are intended as the beginning of a range which may eventually cover about fifty acres of his model farm.

Muskogee, Okla.—W. H. Mitchell, formerly connected with Shaw's Gardens, at St. Louis, Mo., has charge of the new greenhouse which has just been completed at Hyde park and which is said to be one of the largest houses of the kind in eastern Oklahoma.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Ira J. Marvin, who opened a branch wholesale store last winter in Scranton, Pa., is now also erecting a small greenhouse in that city. He is building the greenhouse at North Garfield avenue and West Gibson street, opposite the main entrance to Cathedral cemetery.

Pomfret, Conn.—A greenhouse is being built on Rathlin Farm, the estate of Mrs. George Bradley.

Lawrence, Mass.—E. W. Blair is erecting a greenhouse on Lowell street, between Warren and Milton streets.

Piqua, O.—Ira Carpenter has purchased an interest in the business of W. F. Frisch, and the firm name will be Frisch & Carpenter.

Dallas, Tex.—The Lang Floral & Nursery Co. has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $46,000, by Otto Lang, W. W. Robinson and A. B. Mayhew.

South Sudbury, Mass.—Howard C. Burr has sold his greenhouses to Fred N. Eaton, who will take them down and rebuild them near his present houses.

Pittsburg, Kan.—J. C. Steinhauser is improving and enlarging his range, on South Broadway. The new buildings will include a rose house, two carnation houses, a lettuce house and a brick boiler room.

Dixon, Ill.—C. H. Fallstrom, of the Dixon Flower Shop, invited the public to a special exhibit of flowers at his store June 14. The display was a fine one, especially in the line of peonies, iris and oriental poppies.

Springfield, Ill.—The contract has been let for the remodeling of the store occupied by A. C. Brown, at 217 South Fifth street. A new front and display window will be constructed and other improvements will be made.

Webster City, Ia.—James Follett, in the south part of the city, is building another greenhouse, 30x60, and expects to begin work on a second addition soon. Still other improvements will be made, at a total cost of several thousands of dollars. His trade is steadily increasing.

Marysville, Cal.—The Marysville Flower & Seed Store, conducted for several months by J. W. Evans, has been closed, at least for the summer season, when the abundance of outdoor flowers here makes business somewhat dull. Mr. Evans decided to return to Sacramento and all his stock has been shipped, but it is possible that he may open a store here again later in the year.

Canon City, Colo.—J. T. Calvert, a successful vegetable grower in the Hot Springs district, has let a contract for a $5,000 greenhouse. D. E. Goodnight, in the same locality, is arranging to cover an acre of ground with canvas, in order to produce early vegetables. Last year Mr. Calvert realized $1,000 an acre from celery grown in the open and sold $8,500 worth of vegetables from his ranch.

Waverley, Mass.—Edgar Bros. are building another greenhouse on their farm.

Highland Park, Ill.—George Collins, formerly of Ravinia, Ill., has started business here on his own account.

Cleveland, O.—The Ohio Floral Co. has reduced its capital stock from $50,000 to $10,000.

Newton, Kan.—Fritz Hasler is now the sole owner of the business formerly conducted under the name of Hasler & Hasselmann.

Glenside, Pa.—Victor Roekens, of the Edgewood Greenhouses, is building an addition which doubles the width of one of his greenhouses. He will also install a new horizontal boiler this summer.

Dayton, O.—Harry Tredway is building another house. The spring of this year, he says, has been a banner season for him, and he sold everything out so completely that he will be obliged to buy most of his stock plants.

Rockford, Ill.—It was recently reported that Wm. C. Rowley, a florist whose mother lives here, had disappeared and his mother was anxious to have him located. He left Fort Russell, Wyo., March 31, and was later supposed to be in Denver.

Relay, Md.—J. A. Bryne, of this place, began in the first part of June his annual work of laying out and planting the beds at various stations on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. He has been attending to this work since 1898, making yearly calls at about forty-five different stations.

Newton Falls, O.—C. E. Tinker, formerly of Garrettsville, O., has moved his greenhouses to this place and is also bulding another house, 28x100, of the Lord & Burnham semi-iron construction. His trade this season has been the best he has experienced since entering the business.

Halifax, Mass.—A field of rhubarb belonging to the Halifax Garden Co. was considerably damaged by a recent storm. Superintendent W. E. Lenk says he is glad to report, however, that only a few panes of glass were broken in the greenhouses. Business is good, with a heavy demand for rhubarb and cucumbers.

North Abington, Mass.—It was stated that the selectmen would offer a reward for the arrest of the persons who destroyed a large quantity of valuable shrubs at the Bay State Nurseries, as reported recently in The Review. Private citizens also expressed their willingness to add to the reward, in the hope that the offenders might be caught.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Collections in the trade are reported slow. Those who have their money coming from the public should get after it before vacation time.

Why not start now to grow some stock for wholesaling? Why be content with a local trade when there is easy access to the florists of the entire country?

The fertilizer markets are reflecting in prices a seasonable slackening in demand. Bone meal, which was in short supply, is beginning to seek a market.

F. R. Pierson says everything points toward the National Flower Show at Boston next March being the most successful exhibition ever held in this country.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

Wertheimer Bros., New York, wired the change of copy for their advertisement in last issue of The Review and the telegraph operator made the word distributors read contributors, thereby obscuring their meaning.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The officers of the American Gladiolus Society are extremely busy these days. The large volume of inquiries and requests for membership application blanks demonstrates the great popularity of the gladiolus and the demand for such a society.

The interest in this movement is not confined to America, for two of the great specialists of Europe are among our charter members, and our first meeting, at Boston, developed a strong sentiment for an international society. There is much encouragement in the fact that the amateurs have taken hold of this movement enthusiastically. This was evidenced by the large enrollment of amateurs on the charter list at the Boston meeting.

Since I sent in the list of prizes offered last week for the Rochester exhibition, the following have been received:

Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, $10 in gold for the best twelve shades in any variety.

Weeber & Don, New York, $10 in gold for the best ten varieties, to include Baron Hulot, Princeps and Contrast, three spikes each.

A. L. Miller, Brooklyn, $5 in gold for best display of pink and white varieties, three spikes each of at least six varieties.

F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., $10 in gold, the class to be decided later.

E. H. Cushman, Sylvania, O., $5 in gold for vase of best twenty-five spikes, white, any variety.

A. T. Boddington, New York, $10 in gold, the class to be decided later.

John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., $10 in gold for best collection of gladioli, Childsii varieties, three spikes each, to include Attraction, Blanche, Cardinal and Wild Rose. Also $5 in gold for best vase of America, not less than twelve spikes.

I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y., $5 in gold for best vase of Contrast, not less than twelve spikes.

J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, silver cup for best collection of gladioli, Primulinus type and hybrids, exhibited by an amateur.

L. Merton Gage, Cor. Sec'y.

WHEN IN DOUBT—

Ask The Review.

"We believe in 'When in doubt, ask The Review,' so we are bothering you with a question." It is from a reader who hasn't access to certain trade records. But it isn't any "bother" to The Review to answer legitimate questions. A live trade paper must necessarily have in its files and indexes a fund of information not required in the conduct of an ordinary business, and the thing The Review likes best to do is to help its readers.

Q.—Kindly give us the name of the manufacturers of tiles for greenhouse benches. Ans.—Probably the bench you have in mind is the one made by the Camp Conduit Co., 718 Garfield building, Cleveland, O. This is the flat tile bench used quite largely around Cleveland.

Q.—Wish you would give me the address of the American Agriculturist. Ans.—439 Lafayette street, New York city.

Q.—Who makes recording thermometers? Ans.—The Standard Thermometer Co., 65 Shirley street, Boston; Draper Mfg. Co., 152 Front street, New York city. Mention The Review when you write.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business ran downhill rapidly last week. The weather became excessively hot, which served to still further augment the heavy supplies of stock and to deprive much of it of the fine quality which has been characteristic of the flowers in this market during the cool spring. Shipping trade continued fairly active, but it was necessary to sort over great quantities of stock to get out the comparatively small quantities required for the out-of-town orders. City business of the better class became extremely light, and the only outlet for the great accumulation of soft carnations and open roses was through the cheap-sales people. It was their harvest time. They could buy the lower grade flowers at their own prices, and there seems never a time when it is impossible for these salesmen to do business.

For many weeks business in the Chicago market had been running well ahead of previous records for corresponding weeks. Last week was almost the first one of the year when the money income has fallen below the record of the year before. This was generally the case, in spite of greater quantities of stock than the market ever before has had in mid-June.

The heat brought on the local peonies with a rush, and it undoubtedly cost the growers large sums of money. Coming on so rapidly, it was impossible to cut the buds in shape for storage, thereby increasing the quantities of open flowers usually found on the market in the height of the peony season. The quality also was below normal, because of frost injury, and the salability of the flowers was still further impaired by the enormous quantities of roses and carnations on the market at the same time. All the peonies that were in a condition for storage were put away in the freezer, but reports are to the effect that the quantity stored is not as great as other years, and that the quality of much of the stock is doubtful.

Certainly it was a tough week for peonies. The local cut is now practically ended, but receipts are coming in from the north.

Practically all flowers shared with the peony the depression of last week. There was a fair demand for the best roses, but much of the stock was open and almost unsalable. Carnations did not have an equally good demand, and fared even worse than roses. There still are some really good carnations, but most of them are poor. Outdoor sweet peas have arrived to compete with the last of the indoor product and prices are at the lowest of the season. Gladioli, lilies and valley all accumulated.

This week finds the market in much the same condition as last week. Growers already are beginning to throw out unprofitable stock, and it is thought the heat will soon drive off the heavy crops, so that wholesalers are looking for a change for the better before many days have passed. The anticipated improvement relates rather to decreased receipts and a somewhat better average grade of flowers than to any improvement in demand. Yet the prospect is thought to be for a better summer business than in any previous year, and preparations have been made for it.

By general consent, the wholesale stores will close at 5 p. m. during July and August.

As bearing on the general condition, one of the leading retailers states that his June business this year will not go much more than half what it was in the exceptionally good June of last year. The difference he attributes to the fact that his wealthiest customers, the steady buyers, went to Europe or their summer homes earlier this season than before.

Various Notes.

It is reported from Springfield that application has been made at the office of the secretary of state for the incorporation of the E. C. Amling business.

William Homburg, after a term with the J. B. Deamud Co., and later with J. A. Budlong, is again with John F. Kidwell & Bro.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. is constructing a hot water boiler that is said to be the largest ever built. It will be used in connection with their new tubing system in the range of B. Eldridge, Belvidere, Ill., and is capable of heating 80,000 square feet of glass to the temperature required for carnations.

An unusual order was that filled by the E. F. Winterson Co. one day last week for six wire frames in the form of elephants, each frame being nine feet long.

Hoerber Bros. report that Harry Manheim and the tom-cat are keeping bachelor's hall these days, Mrs. Manheim and the three children having gone to Indiana for a visit with Mrs. Manheim's parents.

Charles Klehm thinks the prospects are excellent for those holders of peonies in storage who have really first-class stock. He thinks it will be only a few days before the low-grade stuff will be off the market.

Allie Zech, who now makes his headquarters at Indianapolis, is here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Zech.

Frank Schramm says he will be in the market for carnation plants this fall, as he lost a considerable part of his stock in the April freeze.

N. J. Wietor never has succumbed to the automobile fever. He still drives one of the fastest horses on the north shore. Wietor Bros. are cutting White Killarney from the young stock.

says that in his opinion growers of Victory have taken off more money per plant than has come from any other variety this season.

Frank Johnson has gone on a western trip for the A. L. Randall Co.

Tim Machen says Peter Reinberg tells him it will be at least another week, and probably a fortnight, before the present heavy cuts pass off.

John Sinner says it beats all the way the White Killarney plants are growing at his firm's place.

O. Johnson says there was, after all, much damage to peonies west of the city because of the April freeze. With the Batavia Greenhouse Co. many of the best varieties did not bloom at all.

will continue active to the end of the month. The call for flowers for graduations and weddings has exceeded all past records with them.

C. A. Samuelson has had some good wedding orders this month. For one decoration June 21 he used eighty dozen peonies.

Martha C. Gunterburg was maid of honor at the wedding of her sister June 15.

Vaughan & Sperry report the presence in town of Joseph Schuler, grower for William Dittman, at New Castle, Ind.

The A. L. Randall Co. has stored a large part of the peony crop of the Peterson Nursery.

A baby boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Fink, June 16. The happy father says the boy is to be named for E. E. Pieser.

A. L. Vaughan is planning a vacation in northern Wisconsin.

These are the harvest days for the flower stores that cater to the demand for low-priced flowers. Such places as the Busy Bee, at the corner of State and Monroe streets, are veritable hives of activity. They can buy for $25 a wagonload of such stock as they require, and are doing a big business. It is stated that this Busy Bee store pays $1,000 a month rent, and that the proprietor admits to having cleaned up and invested elsewhere $6,000 since the opening, less than two years ago.

Invitations are out for the marriage of George Heidenreich and Elfrieda Prillwitz at St. Anne, Ill., June 26. The groom is one of the old store employees of Bassett & Washburn, and Joseph Einweck, who will be his best man, is also employed there.

C. M. Dickinson says that the house of E. H. Hunt is more than pleased with the way the trade has taken to its latest specialty, the new brand of glazing putty.

C. W. McKellar says the demand for orchids for weddings is keeping pace with the supply.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says the shipping demand is holding up much better than the city trade. This house is looking for the summer business to be much better than in previous years, and is growing considerably more stock to meet the anticipated demand.

John Mangel has a broken show sheet of plate glass to repair in his big windows.

Strail & Hahn have completed the fitting up of their store in the Wellington hotel. Guests in the main dining room get a view into the flower store.

A. L. Randall has been ill.

FALL RIVER, MASS.

According to the local newspapers, the florists of this city have lately been engaged in a conflict with the park commission, on account of a certain feature in the commission's management of the cemeteries. In spite of the florists' protests, the commission persists in the practice, only recently introduced here, of filling and caring for cemetery vases belonging to owners of lots not provided for from perpetual care funds. The florists, having failed to secure satisfaction by their own efforts, have called upon the mayor to assist them. If this effort fails, they propose to go to the courts in an action against the commission for alleged illegal interference and competition with them in their business.

One of the special grievances against the commission is that it is attempting to win patronage by offering to keep the plants watered, while the vases not filled by the department are not watered.

A committee of the florists appeared before the commission. In answer to the complaints, the commissioners declared that they have the right to increase the revenues of the cemeteries in every way possible and that the filling of vases is one of the ways adopted. Then the florists took their case before the mayor. He informed them that the commission had full authority to do as it saw fit in the matter, but agreed to do what he could to adjust the trouble.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

At the June meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club the members reported stock practically sold out, all having enjoyed an unprecedented demand for all lines of stock. The quantity of roses unsold will be just about sufficient to cover the fall sales of the retail catalogue houses.

Frank M. Day, local freight agent of the Erie railway, and S. M. Wilcox, import freight representative of this line, located at New York city, appeared before the club with a view to securing joint action of the several local houses accustomed to make large annual purchases from Holland, so that uniform and minimum charges might be secured and prompt transportation and clearances arranged for. The prospect seemed to be that the line mentioned would secure this business, having handled it in a quite satisfactory manner last season and having promised several improvements in the service.

The Saturday afternoon holiday went into effect with the beginning of this month.

B. C. Blake recently added a house, 10x65, to his plant and has become the local Rex begonia specialist, having between forty and fifty varieties, which he is constantly propagating and shipping to all parts of the country.

A fourth house, 30x300, of Dietsch construction, is now being erected by the Leedle Rosary, in which smilax, asparagus and carnations will be grown as companion sellers to their line of roses, to which the American Beauty has been added. To provide for future enlargements, two and three-quarter acres of adjoining land were recently purchased from the parent concern, the Leedle Floral Co.

The local craft is pleased to note the complete registration of Nephrolepis Roosevelt by the American Rose & Plant Co. This is a new sport from the Boston fern. Its distinguishing features are the broad and uniform fronds and decidedly crinkly leaves, all of which combine to give a symmetrical and stately appearance to each specimen.

Joseph Hill and Earl Mann, of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., were recent visitors.

Gus. Meier, president of the Hyde Park Rose. Co., of Cincinnati, spent June 18 in Springfield, with a view to introducing his new rose, Taft, a cross between Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and Mme. Cusin. In color it is quite similar to Bridesmaid, with a rich yellow at the base of the petals, and it is fully as double as Bridesmaid. This rose is entirely different from the one of foreign origin already introduced and named President Taft, and it was suggested to Mr. Meier that a distinct name, such as Queen City, might be advisable under the circumstances.

The Market.

As soon as the warm weather set in, the latter part of last week, business seemed paralyzed. Since then stock has moved slowly and only at buyers' prices. Many flowers go to waste. The change in the weather has had a telling effect on the quality of flowers. Indoor stock as a whole suffered, while the outdoor blooms were never better. An oversupply of all kinds was on hand.

In roses, Beauties, Killarneys, My Maryland and Kaiserin are holding their quality the best, especially the last mentioned, which is excellent. Carnations are somewhat off in size and color. Sweet peas are good, but are nevertheless accumulating. Good longiflorums, candidums, gladioli and valley are offered. A few early asters and feverfew are seen. The supply of decorative greens, including plumosus, Sprengeri and smilax, is more than sufficient to meet the demand.

The Jabez Elliott flower market was not especially active last Saturday. Bedding stock, sweet peas and lilies sold slowly. Carnations were, however, cleaned up before the evening was over.

Various Notes.

Albert McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., left June 18 for Atlantic City to attend the seedsmen's convention.

B. P. Critchell reports that he has placed orders for about 40,000 plants of various kinds for use in the decorative scheme of the Ohio Valley Exposition.

C. E. Critchell is receiving large consignments of excellent valley from George & Allan and longiflorums from other growers.

Weiland & Olinger have decided to discard their corrugated paper boxes, in shipping stock from the greenhouses to the sales office, for wooden ones during the summer months, and instead of having two shipments a day, one at noon and one in the evening, they will have only one, in the evening. By this method the stock will be in the boxes for the least possible time. William Gardner was down from New Castle last Sunday and is enthusiastic over the prospects at the greenhouses.

Meyer Heller, of New Castle, was a caller at E. G. Gillett's last week. He says Heller Bros. will have large quantities of Beauties throughout the summer. Mr. Gillett will handle their consignments to this market.

William Murphy is finding a heavy request from the shipping trade for red carnations. He is offering candidum lilies, cut hardy hydrangeas and outdoor Kaiserin roses.

L. H. Kyrk is receiving large consignments of sweet peas and Kaiserin roses.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson are on a short trip in the upper Ohio valley. Mr. Peterson is calling on his trade.

The street fakers are surely shouting some. Last week two of them had orders for brides' bouquets.

Miss Mae Carroll will leave in a few days on a trip through the central and southern states, representing D. Rusconi. Miss Carroll has the unique distinction of being the only member of the fairer sex representing on the road any firm in the floricultural or allied trades.

Al. Murphy has completed his new greenhouse. In it he will plant carnations in practically solid beds. These beds are raised above the walks and are well drained. By this method Mr. Murphy expects to improve the blooming qualites of the stock.

Al. Heckman, at C. E. Critchell's, has moved to the country, at Crescent Springs, Ky., because of the poor health of his wife. Since they have become ruralites Mrs. Heckman's health is much improved. Hayden Beach and Lawrence Fritz, also of the same concern, are the star boarders.

Mrs. Garges states that she received a telegram from Barnum & Bailey's circus, showing out in Iowa, ordering flowers for the funeral of an acrobat who died at a local hospital.

J. T. Herdegen, of Aurora, Ind., has been a heavy buyer, specially of flow-

BEAUTIES Best on the market.

We have a range of Beauties grown specially for a cut in summer. These have much better substance, color, stem and foliage than from plants that were cut from all winter. Try them; they're good.

ROSES Five Summer Favorites.

We have five summer roses hard to beat—Kaiserin, Jardine, Killarney, Maryland, Field—but if you want other varieties we can supply them, cut from grafted plants, better flowers than own root plants give at this season.

CARNATIONS Really Good.

We grow the fancy sorts, like Aristocrat, Victory, Winsor, White Perfection, Enchantress, etc., and we are one of the few who are now getting really good carnations.

SWEET PEAS Fancy Butterfly.

Fancy stock in best selling colors. Enchantress-pink, lavender, white, pink and blue, or violet shade. You will say these peas are all right. The blue is an ideal pea that takes the place of violets and gives better satisfaction. Also fine outdoor peas now ready.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Summer has come on us all at once, and naturally has a tendency to depreciate the value of flowers and reduce the size of carnations and roses and rob them of their natural radiance. However, trade held up remarkably well last week, and no serious complaints are being offered. Last week's business was partly due to the commencement exercises, which cleaned out all red carnations at 75 cents per dozen.

The rose crop is quite abundant at present, but the exceedingly hot weather has had a telling effect on them, and in spite of a good demand some will spoil on our hands. My Maryland is quite a favorite among the trade at the present time, as it seems to withstand the hot weather remarkably well, and, at the same time, holds its color nicely.

There is an overabundant supply of Lilium giganteum in the market at present, and although there is a fair demand for them, only a comparatively small quantity is kept on the move; as to quality, they could not be better. Lilium Melpomene and L. speciosum are also in stock, but not so plentiful; consequently none of them suffer. The demand for valley is good, probably due to the June weddings. The calla lily season is ended, as they have been turned down for their annual rest; in fact, we are beginning to feel the usual summer decline in practically all lines.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. had the order to furnish 2,000 red carnations and badges to be used in the large democratic convention which was held in this city June 21 and 22.

The Dayton Florists' Club has adjourned for the summer.

L. A. Thomas, Troy, O., visited this city June 19 and says that business is good. Mr. Thomas is building quite an extensive addition to his present range.

Paul M. Halbrooks, of the Columbus Floral Co., Columbus, O., visited Dayton June 19, with his wife. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Bartholomew. R. A. B.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Sanders-Granger Floral Co., at 276 South Main street, has been doing some well planned and attractive advertising in the local newspapers.

Danvers, Mass.—E. & C. Woodman, whose greenhouses are on Holten street, Tapleyville, do a considerable shipping business, in addition to their steadily increasing local trade. Their stock is in remarkably fine condition.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The graduating class of the Girls' General High School in this city selected the American Beauty rose as the class flower. This selection will explain to would-be Beauty buyers why it was so extraordinarily difficult, it may be said to have been well-nigh impossible, to fill their orders for the queen of roses on the day preceding the longest of the year.

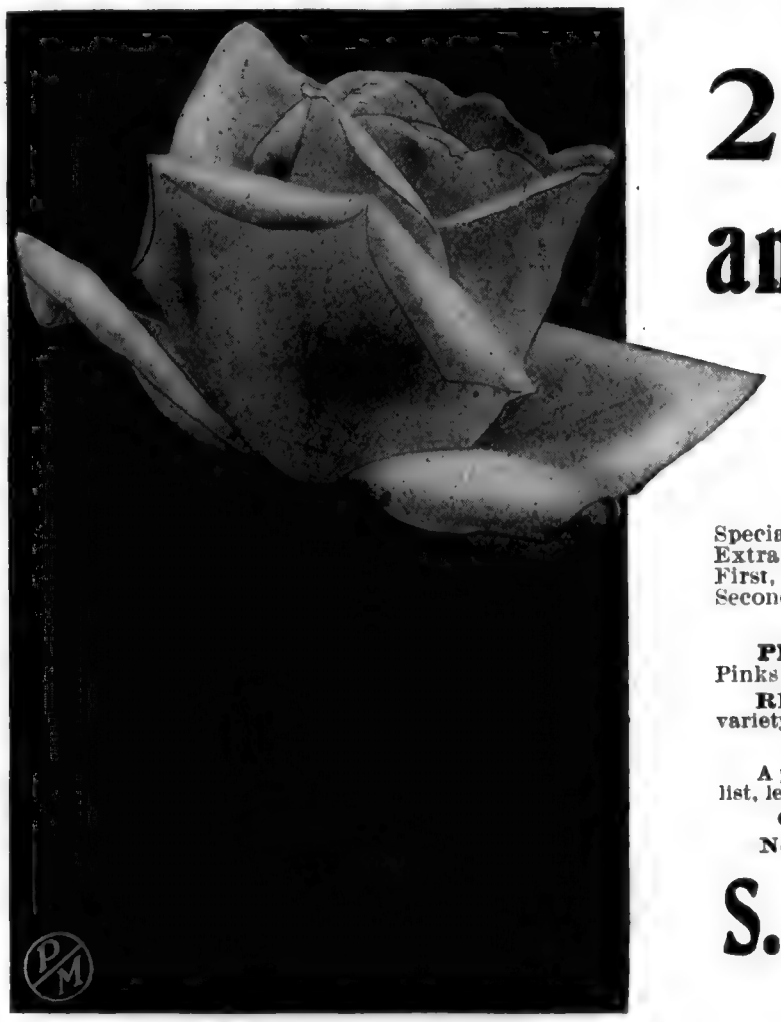
The change from ideal shipping weather to a temperature higher, perhaps, than usual for the third week in June has made the work of the wholesalers extremely difficult. To get just the right kind of flowers in just the right condition is no easy matter when it is so awfully hot. The wholesalers have spared no effort to retain the confidence of their customers in other cities and where they have succeeded it has been a genuine triumph of judgment.

Beauties and sweet peas have been strong factors in a rather dull market. The price of Beauties advanced on all fine stock, the demand far exceeding the supply, Richmond coming in for a share of benefit from the excess Beauty orders. The supply of sweet peas increased enormously during the last half of the week ending with Wednesday, June 22, but where there was quality the demand nearly equaled the supply. Prices have, of course, fallen, but they are fully up to those of former years at this season.

When writing of other flowers the question of their condition on arrival in the city is an important factor. Some growers have the knack of getting their stock to market in the best possible condition—this certainly is a knack, with the work piling up as high as the thermometer. The changes in the rose market are the increased importance of My Maryland and Kaiserin, now rivaling Killarney and its white sister in popular favor.

Carnations have been seriously affected by the warm wave. Only select stock of certain varieties, or the product of particularly skilful growers, is equal to shipping requirements.

Peonies are still obtainable from cold storage and have helped many an important decoration.



Cattleyas are a little scarcer, with prices higher. Gaskelliana is the principal variety. Gardenias have been in better demand. For some reason Easter lilies have not sold well just when it was expected they would be wanted for the weddings. Valley has been in good demand, while on certain days, noticeably on Saturday, June 18, there was an excellent call for white flowers, for which pyrethrum, candytuft, white sweet peas and white roses, which by the way have been scarce, were freely used.

To sum up, the market is good for the season, the week a trifle ahead of the week preceding.

Mr. Heacock's Plans.

Philadelphia, or that part of the floral community whose business interests are in the center of the city, will be interested in the plans of the Joseph Heacock Co. that are about being carried into effect. In reply to a question from the representative of The Review Mr. Heacock said that the new house 55x600, just completed at Roelf Station, will be, or more correctly speaking is now being, planted with Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, much the larger number of the Irish rose, while the smaller number is of the Indiana favorite, White Killarney occupying the place between. A rough estimate of the size of the house, with Mr. Heacock's known methods of planting, shows that this house will contain about 15,000 roses.

Mr. Heacock further said that the roses at Wyncote would be cut down to a couple of sections of Killarney. This will give needed room for the expansion in palms, in orchids and in carnations. Referring to the carnations, Mr. Heacock said that Dorothy Gordon will be largely planted. I am sure that he said as largely as last season, and think he intimated there would be an increase. More orchids have already been added. This new branch of the business evidently has prospered.

Mr. Heacock's many friends wish his company every success in the new ventures at Roelf Station; they feel sure that his roses grown there will be the credit to Philadelphia that his roses at Wyncote always have been.

Cyclamens.

The growing of cyclamens is an art. Anybody can grow a few fair, even good, plants, but it takes a real grower to produce fine cyclamens in quantity. It was with this thought that a representative of The Review glanced with genuine pleasure over a number of houses of beautifully grown cyclamens one afternoon this week.

It is difficult to put into words the impression created by a well grown batch of these plants. They have a deep, lustrous green look, are short and stocky and wonderfully even when compared one with another. The science of cyclamen growing, as explained by an expert, consists firstly in getting good seed of a really choice strain; secondly in never allowing the seedlings to suffer for one moment after they come up—a check in cyclamens, as in many other things, means the difference between poor plants and good. The third and final point of importance is to get the plants in a certain condition when the blooming season is at hand. These three points are what may be called the past-master's guide and must not be confounded with the rudiments of cyclamen growing, which are too well known to require description.

I am indebted to Robert A. Craig for these ideas and if they are not properly expressed it is not his fault, but mine. The cyclamens that he has grown this season are superb.

Various Notes.

Among the visitors in this city recently were J. Van Lindley, of Pomona, N.C., and John Paul, of Cumberland, Md.

M. Rice & Co. have received between 300 and 400 cases this week from incoming steamers, the forerunners of the big army to follow.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer Co., says that the displays of hybrid tea roses made in their windows have attracted widespread attention, bringing many orders for next season's delivery.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. promise some extremely fine novelties for the coming season. Increased importations of the French flowers in orchids, carnations, roses, etc., very durable, are noted. A new make of wire scissors promises well.

Philip Freud has a taking window at Henry F. Michell's this week. It represents a girl on a stepladder tying bags over the grapes to prevent loss from insects. Mr. Freud has the paper bags ready for those who take alarm for the safety of their vineyards.

To sum up, the market is good for the season, the week a trifle ahead of the week preceding.

Mr. Heacock's Plans.

Philadelphia, or that part of the floral community whose business interests are in the center of the city, will be interested in the plans of the Joseph Heacock Co. that are about being carried into effect. In reply to a question from the representative of The Review Mr. Heacock said that the new house, 55x600, just completed at Roelf Station, will be, or more correctly speaking is now being, planted with Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, more the larger number of the Irish rose, while the smaller number is of the Indiana favorite, White Killarney occupying the place between. A rough estimate of the size of the house, with Mr. Heacock's known methods of planting, shows that this house will contain about 15,000 roses.

Mr. Heacock further said that the roses at Wyncote would be cut down in a couple of sections of Killarney. This will give needed room for the expansion in palms, in orchids and in carnations. Referring to the carnations, Mr. Heacock said that Dorothy Gordon will be Cyclamens.

The growing of cyclamens is an art. vbody can grow a few fair, even od, plants, but it takes a real grower produce fine cyclamens in quantity. was with this thought that a repre ntative of The Review glanced with ruine pleasure over a number of uses of beautifully grown cyclamens e afternoon this week.

It is difficult to put into words the impression created by a well grown batch of these plants. They have a deep, lustrous green look, are short and stocky and wonderfully even when compared one with another. The science of cyclamen growing, as explained by an expert, consists firstly in getting good seed of a really choice strain; secondly in never allowing the seedlings to suffer for one moment after they come up a check in cyclamens, as in many other things, means the difference between poor plants and good. The third and final point of importance is to get the plants in a certain condition when the blooming season is at hand. These three points are what may be called the past master's guide and must not be confounded with the rudiments of cyclamen growing, which are too well known to require description.

I am indebted to Robert A. Craig for these ideas and if they are not properly expressed it is not his fault, but mine. The cyclamens that he has grown this season are superb.

Various Notes.

Among the visitors in this city recently were J. Van Lindley, of Pomona, N. C., and John Paul, of Cumberland, Md.

M. Rice & Co. have received between 300 and 400 cases this week from incoming steamers, the forerunners of the big army to follow.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary of the Henry A. Dreer Co., says that the displays of hybrid tea roses made in their windows have attracted widespread attention, bringing many orders for next season's delivery.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. promise some extremely fine novelties for the coming season. Increased importations of the French flowers in orchids, carnations, roses, etc., very durable, are noted. A new make of wire scissors promises well.

Philip Freud has a taking window at Henry F. Michell's this week. It represents a girl on a stepladder tying bags over the grapes to prevent loss from insects. Mr. Freud has the paper bags ready for those who take alarm for the safety of their vineyards.

Charles E. Meehan moved to his Ocean City cottage June 22.

William C. Harrie, of the Sign of the Rose flower shop, reports that Charles Henry Fox is happily convalescing from his recent illness.

The Market.

Prices for a limited quantity of the best of anything held last week, but when the early morning demand ceased the clean-up was made at about any offer, full slips of roses seldom going above $10 per thousand, and immense quantities later in the week going at half that price. Killarney and Kaiserin are abundant. The best carnations sold Saturday at $1 per hundred. The street men are making their last stand before leaving for their usual seashore fruit selling, so this source of relief is over.

There is no scarcity of anything, even orchids sharing in the general recession. Lilies are lower. Valley has fallen to 2 cents for the best, and only the indoor sweet peas are now available. Peonies have departed. Stocks, snapdragons, etc., do not sell at all, not even for enough to pay express charges.

Following the great storm of June 18, the menace of a market flooded with blooms of shrubs and roses is for the moment removed.

The weddings are about all in. Wadley & Smythe drew the prize in the Roosevelt venture, and Beauties and orchids were the flowers. All the leading retailers have had a satisfactory June to date, but there is nothing now to relieve the summer dullness. Everybody, wholesale and retail, has settled down to the inevitable quiet and recuperation of the holiday season.

Public Market Seems Assured.

As a result of the public hearing given June 20 by the aldermanic committee on streets, the flower market at Fifty-ninth street seems assured.

There was a large attendance, including members of the board of aldermen, property owners in the neighborhood of the proposed market, and florists, many of the prominent growers in addition to those speaking being present. It developed that the principal opposition comes from the florists of Staten Island. Their objections were presented by the president of the borough of Richmond and by Florist Hunt, who declared the distance from the ferry made the project impossible for Staten Island growers. He said that if the city would build a market on the Canal street site he would guarantee a revenue of ten per cent on the investment.

A. L. Miller, president of the New York Florists' Club; John Birnie, Anton Schultheis and Attorney Siebrecht all made strong addresses in favor of the proposed market and the project also was endorsed by several members of the board of aldermen, by property owners in the neighborhood, and by those interested in the improvement of conditions on the east side. "The greatest good to the greatest number" was the argument.

After the hearing it was stated that the aldermanic committee in executive session voted to report favorably to the full board of aldermen at its next meeting.

Various Notes.

The outing season has begun in earnest. The dates of the Greek florists' picnic and the annual reunion of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association fall on the same day, July 7. The Greek society will celebrate at Wetzel's, 500 strong; the plant growers are lovers of novelties, not only in plants but in outings, and will gather at Lake Hopatcong, via the D., L. & S.

Tuesday, June 28, the New York Florists' Club will enjoy its annual outing at the old stand, Wetzel's Grove, via the steamer Isabel, the start being made promptly at 10 a. m. from the foot of East Thirty-first street, New York.

H. A. Bunyard, the secretary of the Sweet Pea Society, is busy preparing for the annual convention and exhibition in July. The money prizes and valuable cups secured for competition indicate a wide interest and a splendid exhibition.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society is congratulated in securing as the manager of its $3,000 exhibition this fall Arthur Herrington, of Madison.

I. S. Hendrickson, the president of the new Gladiolus Society, is much pleased with the outlook for the exhibition at Rochester in August, in connection with the convention of the S. A. F. Many valuable prizes have already been offered, and the exhibition promises to be one of the entertaining features of the meeting.

A number of seedsmen from New York are enjoying the convention and the ocean breezes this week at Atlantic City.

Mr. Kervan, Sr., of the Kervan Co., is at Syracuse this week attending the Grand Army reunion, of which he is one of the leading officials from New York.

The Forster Mansfield Co. is making and installing the big ice-box in George Saltford's new store. This company has several large contracts for florists, and has been forced to add a lumber yard to its conveniences.

W. J. Elliott closed this season's auction business with a big sale of palms, etc., June 21. There was a full house, and the veteran says the year's volume of sales is far in excess of any in his experience, while the attendance has fully doubled.

The Astoria bowlers celebrated the close of their season with a theater party and dinner Saturday, June 18, seventeen of its members attending. The club's team for Rochester will continue practice. It will probably include W. Siebrecht, Sr., Donaldson, Miesem, Kessler and Siebrecht, Jr., with two or three reserves, including Einsman. The same evening H. E. Froment entertained the press at dinner and bowling.

Sidney Nash, son of Jonathan Nash, and Miss Ferry were married June 15. The young folks are enjoying their honeymoon in Canada.

Mr. Geller and his family have moved to their country home near Jamaica Bay for the summer.

P. J. Smith, the latest graduate to the wholesale business, is delighted with his success to date and enthused by the generous and fraternal spirit of his competitors.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., contemplates a trip to Europe for his summer recreation.

Expensive alterations are being made in the new store of George Cotsonas & Co.

Traendly & Schenck and Walter Sheridan have not yet put in moving sidewalks in their big new stores, but the offices do not seem as far from the doors as at first.

Charles Millang has fully recovered from his recent illness, and finds his cozy store on the ground floor of the Coogan building smaller than it should be for the volume of his trade.

M. C. Ford's new store will be completed about July 1, and there then will be none more modern and convenient.

Kessler Bros. will devote their attention to their new place at Secaucus after July 1 and maintain only an office in the wholesale section until fall, when they will open their new plant store and wholesale cut flower business. They have been sending seedling ferns as far as Seattle, Wash.

J. K. Allen has added to his force Charles Logan, formerly with John Young, of Bedford Hills.

William Reed, of Reed & Keller, who is touring Europe with Mrs. Reed, is expected home early in July.

John F. Sharkey, of East Twenty-eighth street, reports a good trade in steamer flowers and baskets. All the retailers have had their share of these windfalls this summer. European travel is enormous.

The New York branches are all now open at Newport, where a strenuous social season has begun.

honored by a visit of Mayor Arthur B. Seymour, of Orange, who complimented the society upon the excellence of the exhibits.

The society is proud of the fact that five of its members carried off important prizes at the national orchid show, which was held in Boston recently. A standing vote of thanks was extended to them for the courage they displayed in going to Boston and cleaning up the boards. Henry Hurrell responded, saying: "I don't see why it is necessary for us to go to Boston for an orchid show. Why can't we have one here in New York or New Jersey? There is a tremendous loss realized in shipping the flowers for so great a distance." Joseph A. Manda responded in like manner, and said that "there was no reason why the idea could not be successfully carried out. New Jersey did itself proud; ninety-five per cent of the exhibitors were Jerseymen and ninety per cent of the prizes were carried off by the growers from this state."

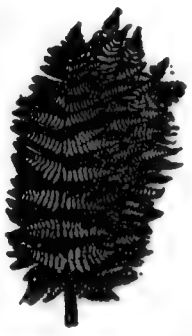
John J. Dervan, gardener for A. C. von Gaasbeck, read an instructive paper on "Growing Roses Under Glass," which was well received. He is a most successful rose grower. He recommended propagating about January 15, using heel cuttings for that purpose, and, when rooted, using a mixture of one part manure and eight parts loam, putting them in 2-inch pots. At the next shift he places them in 3-inch pots, using a mixture of one part manure to six parts loam. Finally he puts them in 4-inch pots, using one part manure to four parts loam. He advised planting about June 15, on raised benches, in one part cow manure to three of good, fresh loam, filling the benches two-thirds full and pressing it down firmly. Before planting in the benches, he advised giving the houses a thorough cleaning and a good fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas, which kills all insect life.

The awards in competition for points were as follows: Roses—S. M. & A. Colgate, Wm. Reid gardener, 95 points; A. B. Jenkins, Albert F. Larson gardener, 85; A. C. von Gaasbeck, John J. Dervan gardener, 85; Thos. Edison, Frank Drew gardener, 80. Carnations—Chas. Hathaway, Max Schneider gardener, 85 points; William Reid, 80; John J. Dervan, 78. Flowering plants—William Reid, 95 points; John J. Dervan, 60. Foliage plants—William Reid, 85 points. Orchids—Lager & Hurrell, 98 points; Wm. Runkle, gardener for D. Kindsgrab, 95.

Certificates were awarded as follows for the exhibits not in competition for points: Joseph A. Manda, orchids, certificate of merit; Wm. Reid, roses, cultural certificate; Chas. Ashmead, strawberries, certificate of merit; Max Schneider, strawberries, cultural certificate; Max Schneider, cauliflower, cultural certificate; John J. Dervan, roses, certificate of merit; Dederich Kindsgrab, roses, certificate of merit.

Fritz Berglund, gardener for the Essex County Country Club, showed gladioli and carnations.

The society will not meet again until September. William Reid, Sec'y.



PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Last week marked one of the most disagreeable in the history of June, with cool, rainy, drizzling weather. In fact, this has been the tale to be told regarding the last five or six weeks. This being the season of commencements, however, there was more activity than would otherwise have been the case. A few weddings and receptions, with a good demand for funeral work, all contributed to rounding out a good week.

The unseasonable weather has been injurious to bedding stock, and there is a good demand for plants to replace those previously set out, which have failed to start off well, but the local supply of good, sturdy plants is nearly exhausted. One of the noticeable improvements this season has been the large number of rose bushes that have

Notes of the Societies.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has postponed its rose and strawberry exhibition. At the meeting of this society, held June 15, one new member was elected, and it was announced that the outing of the society this year would be an excursion to Seaconnet, Friday, June 24.

At the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society June 14, C. Oscar Schultz was awarded a certificate of the first class for a remarkably well-grown plant of Cattleya Mossiæ, in an 8-inch basket, carrying thirty-one open flowers, besides buds; and nine blooms had already been cut. An offer of a silver cup by Henry A. Dreer, Inc., for a collection of from fifteen to eighteen species of herbaceous cut flowers, to be shown at the September exhibition, was accepted. The cup must be won twice before becoming the property of any competitor. The annual June exhibition is scheduled for June 23 and 24, and will be benched under the direction of James McLeish and Andrew S. Meikle.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island is arranging to make a visit to the Rhode Island college at Kingston.

Various Notes.

This city was visited by a disastrous hail storm Saturday, June 18. Nearly three-fourths of the glass was shattered in the range of Geo. Johnson & Sons, and practically all the plants in the open air, including 1,000 choice asters, were cut down. Considerable damage was suffered by Charles Hunt, Burnside street, and George B. Winter, Public street, and the new Melrose rose gardens, at the corner of Wilson street and Elmwood avenue, were stripped as thoroughly as if they had been pruned. Hundreds of dollars' damage was done to foliage, shrubbery and hedges, and outdoor stock of all kinds suffered greatly.

Bert West, for several years associated with Thomas Curley, has accepted a position with William Hay at Oaklawn.

J. A. Budlong was a recent visitor in New York city.

Burke & Burns will be the style of the firm that will conduct the greenhouses at 548 Dyer avenue, Arlington, formerly owned by William Hay, after July 1. They will continue the growing of roses for wholesale, Bride, Bridesmaid, Killarney and Richmond being the leaders. They will also grow carnations and violets.

S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, had the decorations recently at the dedication of St. Joseph's church at New London, Conn.

Mary Pollock, 8 Franklin street, this city, has been doing an unusually large business this spring.

Ralph Armstrong, of Wadley & Smythe, Newport, assisted with the decorations for the marriage of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., in New York city.

Charles Hunt had the decorations for the Firemen's Memorial Sunday exercises of the Providence Veteran Firemen's Association June 12. They consisted of three large floral arches with settings of palms.

Thomas Curley is bringing in some excellent phlox that finds ready sale.

R. Higgins is doing a big business this spring.

E. R. Seymour, of Warren, will make several improvements in his range by tearing down some of the old houses and replacing them with new ones of modern design.

The windows of Johnston Bros., on Dorrance street, are among the best seen in the city. They are always artistic and novel.

Joseph Kopelman is making extensive alterations and improvements in his store on Washington street. He has just commenced the erection of a new greenhouse 30x200 for violets and sweet peas at his place in Oaklawn.

Hoffman, at Pawtucket, is about to tear down and enlarge his office building and one of his houses.

Edward Murray, formerly with Johnston Bros. and later with Joseph Kopelman, has taken a position with William Hay, succeeding John Burke, who has been with Mr. Hay for sixteen years.

James B. Canning and Johnston Bros. had several of the fraternity decorations and receptions at the Brown University commencement last week.

Fitchburg, Mass.—On account of a change in the ownership of the greenhouses leased by W. H. Ritter, on View street, Mr. Ritter finds it necessary to seek another location for the growing end of his business. He will continue to occupy the present houses, however, until December, and meanwhile he will build a new range. He is planning to erect two or three large greenhouses in West Fitchburg, on land which he bought some time ago, off Westminster Hill road. He will also erect a smaller greenhouse on Wood's Hill, near the residence which he recently purchased for a home. His present store, at 70 Main street, will be continued in conjunction with the new greenhouses, and he will be better equipped for business than ever before.

The Market.

The conditions at the wholesale houses are excellent as far as stock is concerned. There was plenty of it all last week, but the demand was not heavy enough to consume half of the consignments that came in daily. Roses are becoming soft, with Richmond and Killarney wide open. In fact, all the rose stock shows the effect of the hot weather. Carnations, too, are suffering, and are hard to keep over a day; even Boston Market, which is considered the best keeper, looks bad before night.

Sweet peas are a great glut just now, and the supply from Kirkwood numbers many thousands daily. Extra fancy flowers do not bring over $3 per thousand; the bulk of them are sold at $1.50 to $2 per thousand. Gladioli sell well; also cornflowers and valley.

With the passing of the social season, weddings and school commencements, the trade is placed on the summer-time basis, and funeral work is all that is looked for from now until fall.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. John Connon celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary last week at their home in Webster Groves.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Meinhardt spent last week fishing at Chautauqua, making their stay at their own cottage.

Mrs. William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., will leave this week for her usual summer trip among the northern lakes.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, Ill., was a visitor Saturday, June 18. He was buying supplies, and says the Belleville florists put in a busy week in the cut flower line.

Mrs. J. Austin Shaw, wife of the New

The local nurserymen and florists are much pleased with the selection of St. Louis for the next meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen; also with the selection of our friend, W. P. Stark, as president.

Ernest Strehlie has been appointed superintendent of public parks, to fill out the term of the late George Ostertag. The appointment has been approved by the mayor. A better selection could not have been made.

The consignment of carnations by Henry Baer, of Peoria, Ill., which is handled by C. A. Kuehn in this market, continues of extra good quality. This stock has always had a good call in this market.

My advertisement in The Review has kept me in trouble right along. The first insertion brought so many orders that I was sold out in a short time. I had the advertisement omitted a week to catch up, then started again, and the first insertion once more cleaned me out, one mail bringing orders for over 3,300 and every day more orders. I was more than pleased; I was surprised; I did not expect anything like such prompt answers. I had orders from Georgia, North Carolina, Illinois, New York, Massachusetts and other states besides my own. I returned checks for at least $70 because I could not fill the orders brought by the advertisement.—E. Bushyager, Jeannette, Pa.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23, 1910.

W. Atlee Burpee and Mrs. Burpee will sail for Europe on the Empress of India, leaving Quebec July 1.

Growers of lilies for Easter are no longer clamoring for Harrisii; they want, instead, giganteum and Formosa bulbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vile announce the marriage of their daughter, Edna, to Waldo Rohnert, on Wednesday, June 15, 1910, at San Felipe, Cal.

Landing at Liverpool June 20, Walter P. Stokes and E. S. Willard will spend two months in visiting European seed growers, and in recreation.

The Great Western Seed & Produce Co., of Salt Lake City, Utah, has been incorporated, with a capital of $3,000, all subscribed. Peter Frost is president; Alvin Johnson, vice-president; A. R. Poulton, secretary and treasurer.

Iowa seedsmen are well pleased with W. B. Barney, the new State Food and Dairy Commissioner. They say he is a man of broad mind and thoroughly conversant with the Iowa pure seed law and its relation to both dealers and planters.

CALIFORNIA CONDITIONS.

Writing from Gilroy, Cal., June 14, Waldo Rohnert had this to say of the condition of seed crops:

"In regard to present crop prospects will say that several weeks ago we had some very hot weather. The thermometer went up to 105 degrees and this was almost too much for some of the crops, especially on the high land.

"Sweet peas were probably injured the most. I should estimate the loss at about twenty-five per cent. The crop will not be so large as was at first estimated, but I think, though, there will be enough to fill all orders.

"Radish went out of bloom with the warm weather, but the stalk is still green. Many of the plants are loaded with pod and seem to be filling nicely. The crop will, I think, be a fair one.

"Lettuce, being a deep rooter, was not affected by the hot spell. The crop will be a good average.

"Onion is looking fine. So far no damage has come that will interfere with a good, heavy yield. This crop, though, is not out of danger and will not be until the seed is in the bag. The weather at present is rather cool and we all hope for a cool summer."

THE SEASON AT ROCKY FORD.

"The season just closed has been a satisfactory one with us," says the Ebbert Seed Co., of Rocky Ford, Colo. "Our mail-order and retail trade shows an increase of over 100 per cent over former seasons, while our growing contracts for vine seeds are ten times as heavy as in any previous year, with many inquiries and belated orders yet coming in.

"The weather has been cool and unfavorable for the starting of vine crops, so our growers have experienced considerable trouble in getting a stand. More replanting has been required than for several seasons. While crops are backward as a whole, we never had finer prospects and, with a favorable season, this district will make full deliveries this fall."

ATLANTIC CITY CONVENTION.

Seed Trade in Annual Session.

Members of the American Seed Trade Association to a goodly number, a larger proportion than usual being accompanied by their wives and families, gathered at Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 for the twenty-eighth annual convention. It was an especially important meeting in the view of most of the members, because of the flood of seed legislation which has come upon the trade within the last two years, and which was the principal theme of discussion. Only within the last few months has real progress been made in stemming the tide, but it was the consensus of opinion that the greatest menace has been overcome and that seed laws henceforth can be shaped toward uniformity and reasonableness.

Seven years ago the association held a meeting at Atlantic City, at which time Walter P. Stokes, of Philadelphia, was the president, and S. F. Willard, secretary. Mr. Willard was then elected to the position of president, and he was highly commended by Mr. Stokes in installing him to that office. Both these gentlemen are now away in Europe, it being perhaps the first meeting that Mr. Willard has ever missed. The weather throughout the dates of the meeting was delightful, and all other conditions favorable. There was a representative attendance, and under the leadership of J. C. Robinson, and the influence of his genial personality, every feature of the proceedings moved along smoothly and harmoniously. He called the association to order in the Hotel Strand and, after the usual formalities, delivered the presidential address, reviewing the principal events of the association's exceptionally active year. It was one of the most comprehensive documents of the kind the association ever has listened to, and was received with warm applause. The address, as far as it pertained to the paramount issues, is printed in full on following pages of this issue.

Growth of the Seed Bean Industry in Southern California

A Story of Forty Years

From a contract calling for the delivery of 100 bushels, the seed bean business on the Pacific coast has grown to orders aggregating several millions of pounds of choice hand-picked seed beans. To Henry Fish belongs the credit of inaugurating the great industry of growing seed beans in southern California. Starting away back in the 70's, Henry Fish, senior member of the Henry Fish Seed Co., recently incorporated, planted the first crop of Lima Beans to be sold for seed purposes, and he has been in the business continuously ever since, witnessing an infant industry develop into a great business.

The beginnings of the industry are interesting; doubly so because they go back to the days when the agricultural possibilities of California were in the experimental stage. Gold had been discovered some twenty years or more before, but the dream of the golden harvests that were likewise to attract worldwide interest in California was only just beginning to take definite form in the minds of a few earnest workers. In the agricultural and horticultural world of California it was a period of discovery and adaptation. New fields of soil endeavor were opened up, and to the faith and works of the pioneers we owe much of our present-day development.

The Beginning

The growing of the Lima Bean as a field crop had its humble beginning in the year 1872. In the fertile Carpinteria Valley one Robert McAllister tried it as an experiment. It worked. The soil was of virgin richness, the months between seed time and harvest were without rain, so no "poling" was necessary and all danger of rotting done away with. Coming to Carpinteria about that time, Henry Fish became at once interested in the new crop. In an eastern state he had tasted the succulent legume and as a storekeeper had sold packages of Lima Bean seed to his customers, and his mind was quick to grasp the possibilities of bean growing under the seemingly perfect conditions met with in this new country.

D. M. Ferry is Interested

Writing to D. M. Ferry & Co., the great seed house of Detroit, whose seeds he had handled in the East, he secured a contract to furnish them in the fall with 100 bushels of seed beans. So interested was the firm in the opening up of the new venture that D. M. Ferry visited in person the new field of operations, and the totally different conditions under which the new crop was to be raised aroused the keenest interest and curiosity of the seedsman. The faith of Mr. Fish in the future of the Lima Bean never wavered, and his early judgment has been more than vindicated by the test of years of growing the Lima Bean. In no other spot do they grow under such ideal conditions.

The result of the first year's venture was so satisfactory to both grower and buyer that a second contract followed, and since then, for thirty-five years, Henry Fish has had among his contracts a yearly one from D. M. Ferry & Co. for seed beans. This is a high tribute to the integrity of the seeds sent out by Mr. Fish from year to year.

The Day's of Hard Labor

The days of the first crops were in the time when machines and labor-saving devices for the ranch and ranch work were but little known. When dry, the beans were placed in an enclosed corral. A vaquero drove a bunch of wild ponies around on them to tramp them out, doing the work of the modern threshing machine, and a hand fanning machine was used for cleaning the beans. Methods of handling the beans changed, but the same painstaking care to produce dependable seeds that characterized the first crops raised by Henry Fish was exercised year after year and has become one of the cardinal principles of the Henry Fish Seed Co. Perhaps in no other business does the reliability or dependability play so important a part as it does in the seed business. Good and poor seeds may not look so dissimilar, and that is why the integrity of the man behind the seeds counts for so much. The natural explanation of the growth of the seed bean business of Henry Fish is found here.

A look at the different varieties of beans is interesting. Of Lima Beans alone the Henry Fish Seed Co. handles some twenty or more varieties, and they handle a larger number of varieties of Kidney Beans. Each variety has its special points which differentiate it from all others. A number of new varieties are of recent introduction, and mark an epoch-making advance in bean values. The Henry Fish Seed Co. has been foremost in originating and introducing new and superior varieties. Now the mere fact of introducing a new variety is not in itself a great achievement. The new candidate, to win recognition and favor and enjoy widespread popularity and sale, must be an improvement over all others in its class or type.

Valuable New Sorts

Nor does the originating of a new variety come through luck or accident. Few people realize that it often takes years of patient and intelligent work to produce a new variety of value. A number of years ago Henry B. Fish, general manager of the new firm, while removing strays and sports from the growing crop, found several plants that, from his expert knowledge of beans, seemed to embody latent possibilities. Experiments were made. A process of rigid rejection and selection took place, and as a monument to his genius, which is "capacity for taking pains," three new and splendid types of Lima Beans have been given to the world. Burpee's Improved and Fordhook Bush Limas and the Carpinteria Pole Lima all originated on the trial grounds of the Henry Fish Seed Co. A hint of the value of these new varieties is given when it is said that the first carload of Burpee's Improved and Fordhook Bush Limas sent to the eastern seed house that bought them constituted the most valuable carload of seed beans ever shipped from California—that is to say, they were the highest priced beans ever sent east from this coast.

More Good Things in Prospect

Some promising varieties are now in the development stage and will be heard from later, if past achievements of the Henry Fish Seed Co. are any criterion. On account of their success in producing valuable new varieties, eastern seedsmen, when they find what they think will be the start of an improved variety, frequently send it to the Henry Fish Seed Co. to be developed.

Every precaution is taken to preserve types, even after they are established, and even in fields of old and established varieties grown on contract for the Henry Fish Seed Co., the fields are gone over during the growing season and inferior plants, sports, and beans of other varieties weeded out.

A Model Warehouse

Last year this firm found their business to be so much greater than their facilities for handling it that a new warehouse was imperative. Their years of familiarity with the needs and requirements of the seed business have enabled the firm to bring to bear in the new building a knowledge of warehouse construction that has resulted in a seed house that is a model of convenience and which admits of the quickest dispatch in handling the seed beans. Indeed, there is not on the coast another seed bean warehouse that embodies so many features of merit.

Personnel of the Fish Firm

An interesting feature of the new firm just incorporated lies in the fact that it is strictly a family firm. Henry Fish is founder and president of the new company. Two sons, Henry B. Fish, who is treasurer and general manager, and Thomas N. Fish, who is vice-president, have been brought up in the business and by heredity and environment may be said to know beans. Henry B. Fish has charge of the warehouse business, and Thomas N. Fish manages the seed farm. Hester S. Fish, who is secretary, and Julia Fish, the assistant secretary, are members of the new firm and daughters of the founder. Juliette G. Fish, the wife of the veteran seedsman, completes the list of stockholders. It has always been the habit of these seedsmen to welcome visitors, and eastern seedsmen on their rounds of crop inspection often stop off at Carpinteria and are hospitably received. A visit to the warehouse in the fall and winter, when the busy season is on, is an educating experience quite worth while.

Report of Committee on Legislation.

George S. Green, chairman of the committee on seed legislation, submitted a comprehensive report showing the condition of present and probable future legislation and work done in enlightening legislatures and congressmen as to the true conditions of supply. He recounted work done in Boston last December by the conference of representatives of various seed trade organizations and the National Association of Official Seed Analysts. At this meeting it was the unanimous conclusion that if seed legislation is enacted in various states it should be reasonably uniform in character, so that interstate trade shall be restricted as little as possible. It was quite generally conceded that if reference to germination can be kept out of seed laws it will tend to unify efforts all along the line to protect the public, and trade as well. The committee believes that restrictions should be only such as are necessary to protect against fraud, but should leave commerce free. A bill was prepared, and it is being considered, that will include these views, and it is hoped will tend to uniformity in legislation of seed subjects.

Correspondence was read showing a liberal attitude on the part of congressmen and a desire to inform themselves fully before enacting laws which otherwise, without due consideration and information, could not help but be hurtful to all interests and fail to safeguard the public. Representative Mann expressed a determination to refrain from hasty and ill-considered action, and is willing to receive seedsmen.

Any legislation should not include under the same provisions the widely different classes in production and use, such as garden seeds and bulbs, on the one hand, as opposed to grass and clover seeds on the other. Arbitrary standards are declared against for reasons given. The best methods of testing seeds for purity and germination which are now in use are not sufficiently uniform and accurate, and the vitality of the seeds not sufficiently stable to warrant imposing heavy penalties for the sale of seeds falling below a certain arbitrary standard. While purity and germination constitute the only basis available for arbitrary standards, they are by no means a complete or accurate measure of the actual value of seeds to the user thereof. Many other qualities enter into the value of seeds, such as color, size, locality of production, trueness to type, excellence of strain, etc. These considerations make it manifestly unjust to allow the term "United States standard" to be applied indiscriminately to all classes of seeds of certain varieties which might reach certain standards of purity and germination.

It is believed that under conditions where the apparatus and methods for making tests are only now in process of evolution and not by any means perfect, no legislation should restrict or prohibit exportation of any class of seeds having commercial value in any foreign country. For example, there are climates and countries where dodder does not thrive and there is no sound reason, either commercial or moral, for absolutely prohibiting exportation on such seeds. On the contrary such prohibition would tend to cause such seed to be resown within our own country. If the original Mann bill had become a law it would have absolutely disorganized all existing methods of handling the seed business. If any large proportion of the many state laws proposed had passed it would have had the same result. But the prospects are that future state laws will be guided by a system and this is ardently to be hoped for.

Charles N. Page, vice-chairman in charge of state seed legislation, in his report dealt with the state aspect. He declared that seed dealers have never seriously objected, as a class, to reasonable legislation which was intended to serve a good purpose, but most of the earlier bills introduced were unjust, ill-considered and unfair and therefore met merited condemnation, as the proposers of such bills showed ignorance of conditions under which the seed trade is conducted and it would have been absolutely impossible for seed dealers to carry out the provisions in many cases. But the seed trade protests against any legislation which would make criminals of honest men who are engaged in a reputable and useful calling and who are willing at all times to assist in the preparation of reasonable legislation.

Dues Increased.

In order to carry out the work already under way, it was proposed to raise the annual dues to $20, double the former dues. This was amended to $15 and adopted.

Various Reports.

For the committee on customs and tariffs, J. C. Vaughan, chairman, reported that he had received no complaints as to the workings of the present Payne law, though average advance in duties is probably thirty to thirty-five per cent over what was paid on the ad valorem basis. The customs operations as to seed importations are being handled with less friction than ever before.

No reports came from the committees on irrigation of old eastern farms or the committee to confer with nurserymen and florists.

The auditing committee, Simeon F. Leonard, John W. May and Harvey Mixson, reported books correct.

Delegates to the National Council of Horticulture presented a report through Secretary Kendel showing continued good work and progress, and the usual sum of $200 was voted for the use of the press bureau of the National Council of Horticulture in the interest of seed trade.

National Board of Trade.

Albert McCullough, one of the delegates to the National Board of Trade, the other being W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, presented their report in part as follows: "It is the aim of the National Board of Trade, of which the American Seed Trade Association is a constituent member, to keep all of the trade bodies supporting the Washington headquarters informed of what is going on. This will enable every commercial organization in the United States to come in direct contact with the various committees of Congress to arrange for hearings before committees of the House of Representatives and Senate and coöperate with respective committees of National Board of Trade so that opinion and influence of business men of the country may be exerted during entire session of Congress. The transportation interests, conservation of national resources, diplomatic and consular service, banking and currency, renewal of trade treaties and political affairs are among the important questions and subjects taken up at the last meeting. Mr. Frank D. La Lanne, president National Board of Trade, has been appointed by Secretary of State Knox as delegate to represent the United States at the fourth international congress of Chambers of Commerce and commercial and industrial associations to be held in London, England, June 21 to 23, 1911. The questions to be taken up by the congress are many and all of national interest. W. Atlee Burpee has been appointed a member of the council and Albert McCullogh one of the managers on the National Board of Trade. The National Board of Trade under President La Lanne is taking on new life and, through its commissioner, Mr. Anderson, its work will be felt this coming year more than ever before. The American Seed Trade Association is at liberty at all times to call upon the commissioner for information as to what is going on in Congress and in this way keep posted and properly advised when there is any bill introduced in which we are directly interested."

Committees Appointed.

Charles H. Breck, C. H. Coy and W. F. Jones were appointed as an obituary committee.

Charles H. Breck, E. L. Page and C. F. Wood were named as a committee on recommendations in president's address.

Development of Varieties.

Commenting on the paper of W. Atlee Burpee, on the Spencer sweet pea, W. W. Tracy said: "It is especially interesting because it brought out some principles of seed growing which are not generally recognized, namely, that there is a gradual development in a species as a result of which we have a sudden break in varietal character. Such breaks may occur in a number of different locations, identical in each case, the same variation, and when occurring it is comparatively easy to establish an entire new race based on such variation. The same principle is illustrated as developed in the case of beans, where there is an occurrence of the dwarf form of lima beans which was previously unknown and in a single year developed in a number of different places and from a number of different varieties the same dwarf habit.

Grass Seed Dealers Meet.

The Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, organized last year at Niagara Falls, held a meeting at Atlantic City after the adjournment of the Seed Trade Association on the evening of June 21, Albert McCullough in the chair, and a large representation of its membership being present. Secretary C. F. Wood's report of the year's work showed the new organization to be getting under good headway.

Directors elected June 22 for three years were: Chas. D. Boyles, Chicago; John A. Smith, Toledo; A. E. Reynolds, Crawfordsville, Ind.

Hospitalities.

The annual banquet was held as usual, on the evening of the second day of the convention. The attendance was large. There was no set program of toasts. Five-minute talks were given by a number of prominent members.

There was a yacht ride on the ocean Wednesday afternoon.

W. Atlee Burpee announced a special train leaving Reading Terminal, Philadelphia, at 10:50 a. m. Friday, June 24, for the trip to Fordhook, arrival to be in time for luncheon.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

An Able Document.

It has been the good fortune of the American Seed Trade Association to have had many presidents who put into its work much thought backed by ability, but seldom has the occupant of its chair given the convention a stronger document than the address of President Robinson, presented at the Atlantic City convention June 21. It contained over 5,000 words. In its more important features it was as follows:

President Robinson prefaced his paper with a word as to the prosperous condition of the trade and with reference to the year's necrology. Then he said:

"The last year has been a somewhat strenuous one in matters of public policy affecting our business; while we have been trying to attend strictly to our own affairs, and in a law-abiding and honorable manner, yet the public eye has been on us, and it is evident that the public intends sooner or later to have a word to say in the conduct of our affairs. Between legislation that has been offered and a new interpretation or ruling of an old law, we have been kept busy in sustaining the principle of our association, 'The Advancement and Protection of the Interests of the Seed Trade.'

The Official Seed Analysts.

"A year ago there was organized an association known as the Association of Official Seed Analysts. The object of this, in matters of interest to us, was to secure a more uniform analysis of seed and to assist in securing uniform legislation. Our association appointed a committee to meet these gentlemen and to confer with them on points of mutual interest, the most important of which was seed legislation. Chas. N. Page, vice-chairman in charge of state legislation, was made chairman of the committee. Prof. Chas. D. Woods, of Orono, Me., was chairman of the legislative committee of the Association of Official Seed Analysts, and called for a conference of his committee with our association committee at Young's hotel, Boston, December 27, 1909. As many important matters were to be brought up at that time, and it was hoped that some understanding could be arrived at that would be mutually beneficial, our two committees were requested to be present. As the date chosen was near the time when it was customary for the executive committee to meet and arrange for the annual convention, and as several members of the executive committee were also members of the other committees, it was decided to call a meeting of this committee at the same place December 28. As the Wholesale Seedsmen's League and the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association were also represented, the meeting was a well attended and most important one.

"Prof. Woods presided at the conference, and I cannot pass this point without mentioning the spirit of fairness and equity in which he met our members. The meeting was inspired by a desire on the part of each to learn of the other, and to search for that happy medium of proposed legislation that on the part of seed analysts would protect the public against unscrupulous and fraudulent dealers, and against all sale of pernicious and noxious seed to an innocent purchaser, and yet would allow the seedsman latitude enough to secure his unmilled stocks, and, after proper preparation, to place them on the market, on their merits, without becoming a criminal in the eyes of the law.

Results of the Boston Meeting.

"It is not my purpose to trespass on our various committees' reports, and they must pardon me if I touch lightly on some points that properly belong to them, but the results of this meeting were so important that no harm will be done if brought to your attention twice. In my judgment the Boston meeting, as it is known, will have more far-reaching results toward attaining uniform legislation, and also legislation that will be fair to all and that can be consistently complied with, than any action previously taken by the association The work of this meeting has been printed in form for limited distribution, and a copy has been sent to every member of our association in states where legislation has been proposed. Concessions were made on each side, and there is no doubt that a mutual respect and good will were established that will materially assist in adjusting matters that may come before the two associations in the future. The omission of all viability standards, and time limitation of liability, are necessary and important matters, especially in business handled as rapidly as is the grass seed business, the interests of which were most closely affected. The seed analysts consider it desirable for the committees to meet occasionally, oftener than once a year, and I desire to recommend that our committee be continued and that funds be provided, so that they can be reimbursed for expenses while attending to matters of such vital importance to the association.

The Wave of Pure Seed Legislation.

"The meeting at Boston was not much more than adjourned and its work rounded out for dissemination before we were deluged with a wave of pure seed legislation in various states that gave our officers and committees all the work they cared for. Our counsel had his lines so well laid that notices of all bills were sent to him at once, and he immediately notified all members in states where new laws were proposed; he also sent prompt notices to your officers, who otherwise might have been slow in hearing of the matters. I personally followed these notices with correspondence with each member, urging the desirability of uniform laws and suggesting the substitution of the Boston bill if legislation could not be avoided.

"Bills were introduced in fourteen states during the last winter, only about five of which became laws, including the New York state law, which I understand has practically passed both houses. Some of these were comparatively harmless, but all were introduced by men not familiar with the requirements of the seed trade, and for that very reason would, if enacted into laws, fail to meet the very conditions they were designed to cover, while the so-called Boston bill was carefully thought out in every detail, our counsel and some of our most experienced and interested members having given their time and study to many of its provisions. On the other hand, its provisions were agreed to by the very men in whose hands the protection of the people lay.

Need of Uniform Laws.

"Doubtless the uniform law might be more acceptable with some slight changes, but, considering that bills offered in some of the states would practically put the seedsmen out of business, if enacted into laws, we can welcome this proposed uniform law as being one that we can comply with as honorable business men, without jeopardizing our business or disturbing our consciences. I therefore wish to urge upon our membership that every effort be made, where legislation can not be avoided, to see that we have such legislation as will eventually become uniform throughout the various states and that will be along the line of the Boston bill. If bills are introduced, offer this as a substitute and see that the lawmakers are supplied with copies.

"It looked at one time as though our busy national legislators would have their hands so full that such a minor thing as national seed legislation would be overlooked. If pure food laws have been good, then pure seed laws should be equally good, and just as easy to comply with, in the opinion of some, even if one does represent an entirely manufactured article and the other is one of nature's products. Congressman James R. Mann, whose bills have been before us at other times, prepared a draft of a bill that was printed by congress, and then, according to promise, submitted to Mr. Green, chairman of our legislative committee, for his criticism. Some of its provisions were such that it seemed best to call the legislative committee together for consultation. This was done, the committee and some others meeting in Chicago, at La Salle hotel, February 9, 1910. The work done there was only secondary in importance to that accomplished at the Boston meeting, and will be fully reported by Mr. Green.

"Those of you who have followed the work of these committees during the last year will readily see the amount of time and thought that has been expended in the work for the trade in general, but more especially for the association, and your thanks are surely due these gentlemen."

Speaking of the tariff, President Robinson expressed the trade's satisfaction with the principle of specific duties embodied in the present law.

The Association's Attorney.

"At our last annual convention, responding to a strong demand of circumstances amounting to a necessity, this association employed counsel from April 1, 1909, to July 1, 1910. It is hardly necessary to repeat what those circumstances were, because not only the officers of our association but also individual members were more or less justly alarmed by the wave of so-called pure seed legislation which was sweeping through the legislative halls of the various states. So many of these seed bills appeared unreasonable, and showed such lack of understanding of the nature of seeds and the sale thereof, that something had to be done; first, to obtain early information about these bills, and, second, to secure competent legal advice. Then, again, it was conceived to be of advantage to individual seedsmen to have an attorney acquainted with and constantly increasing his knowledge of the technical features of our business, and to supply legal advice to these members without charge. By this service, which I am confident that no other association outside of the seed trade gives to its members, it was hoped to further the objects and benefits of this association. The duties of counsel were, therefore, twofold; namely, legislative information and advice, and confidential legal advice to members.

"That suitable data might be obtained upon which our president might base his calculations, reports were asked and filed with the president and secretary. Of course, counsel's services to members, being confidential, were not, either as to persons or the nature of advice, reported."

President Robinson then went on to show how heavy had been the work put upon counsel, how promptly and effectively it had been done and how valuable to every seedsman had been the results. Then he said:

"On the showing of results obtained from employment of our counsel during the last year, not mentioning the evident possibilities of future benefits to be secured from an attorney who is proving himself interested in our cause, I strongly recommend retaining the same attorney for another year. I further call attention to the fact that during this next year the legislatures of about thirty-six states convene, and it is not unreasonable to believe that many seed bills will be introduced.

"In connection with this legislative service I desire to call the convention's attention to several matters which deserve attention and possibly action.

Supplementing the Attorney's Work.

"During the last year counsel has reported the introduction of seed bills to all members of this and allied associations in each state in which a bill was filed. While I recommend the continuance of this policy, I suggest the advisability of perfecting this scheme by the election, or preferably the appointment by the president or executive committee, of some association member in each state, on whom the responsibility of seeing that action is taken in regard to these bills will rest. During the last year our counsel has been uncertain to whom to address necessary reports and recommendations. Seedsmen have expressed a hesitancy in taking any responsibility in acting for other seedsmen. While of course important questions could be submitted by this, let us say, state legislative chairman, much of the always necessary routine and initiative work could be promptly and efficiently performed by this chairman. This recommendation is simply one to perfect an organization, much of the routine work being performed by the counsel.

"Another matter I call to your attention is the advisability of some arrangement whereby, in necessary cases, the local state chairman or seedsmen in a state may have the benefit of the association's counsel at their capitol. At present counsel is paid an additional fee in case of his being called outside of his home city. During the past legislative season he was asked to assist seedsmen by appearing before committees, but it was not convenient for local seedsmen to pay counsel's traveling expenses and per diem fee. I can understand how, in some extreme cases, it might be best to send counsel to a state or to be in attendance upon our legislative committee. Perhaps some arrangement could be made whereby the local seedsmen and the association could divide or, in the case of our legislative committee, could pay these expenses. Naturally the discretion in such cases, in so far as the association is concerned, would rest in the proper officers or committees of our association.

"It has been customary to pay the traveling expenses of the executive committee, less $10, but no provision has yet been made to care for the expenses of other important committees."

President Robinson then showed the reasons for which the executive committee had recommended increasing the dues to $20 a year.

The Opaque Packages.

"A perfectly innocent but unfortunate incident in one of our western cities has been instrumental in calling out a ruling from our postoffice department that is destined to be rather embarrassing to our mail order houses.

"It seems that during the progress of a fight over the appointment of a postmaster at Shenandoah, Ia., the old postmaster, who was a candidate for reappointment, fancied he had a grievance against a certain seedsman of that town, and in an effort to get back at him called the attention of the postoffice department to Par. 5, Sec. 496, Postal Laws and Regulations, which reads, 'Seeds or other articles not prohibited, which are liable, from their form or nature, to loss or damage unless especially protected, must be put in sealed envelopes made of material sufficiently transparent to show the contents clearly without opening.' The attention of the department had not been called to the fact that seedsmen had looked after the quality of paper suitable to their use, rather than what the law intended should be used, and were generally using paper too opaque to meet the requirements of the department.

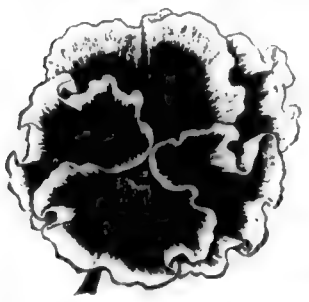
"Our committee, as well as individuals, have had this matter under advisement, and you will have their report in due course, but there seems to be only one thing to do, and that is to meet the requirements of the department.

"I have heard some criticism offered the Shenandoah seedsmen. I can only say that these gentlemen appear to have been entirely within their rights as citizens, and only doing what anyone might do under similar circumstances, and are in no way responsible for this ruling."

Referring to the free seed evil, he said he hoped the time will come when the congressional distribution of common varieties will cease.

The Disclaimer or Non-Warranty.



"The value of our disclaimer has been brought forcibly to your attention during the last year by the ruling of Judge McHenry, of the Iowa District Court, in a case entitled A. A. Geil vs. Iowa Seed Co., in which the court entirely upheld our disclaimer.

"That you sell seed with an absolute non-warranty clause does not prevent your trying to rectify all mistakes that can reasonably be traced to you, but the average planter will always try to throw his own blunders on your shoulders, and it is therefore necessary to surround yourself with safeguards against unjust claims, as well as against the mistakes of others. The disclaimer is like a good insurance policy that serves you in time of trouble. Protect your business by having it displayed prominently in your stores, on your billheads, labels, etc. Its uniform wording cannot be urged too strongly. When the courts have once passed on the phraseology of a non-warranty clause, it becomes a precedent and authority for future decisions."

President Robinson then addressed himself to the subject of irrigation, and expressed his hope that the project broached by Capt. Landreth last year will be pushed through.

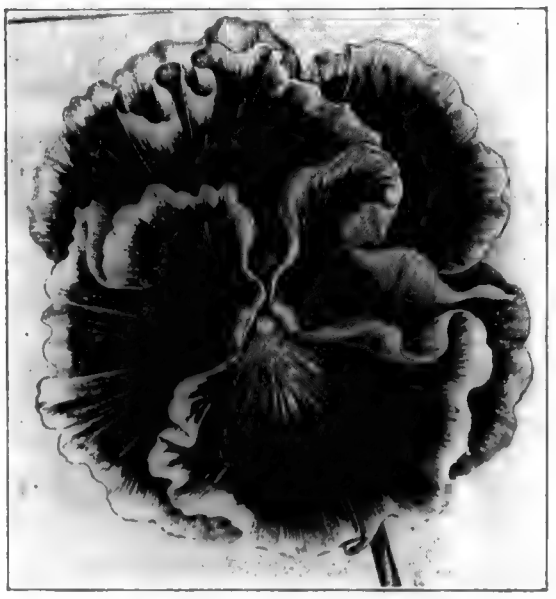
custom that prevails among the seed trade, and which seems entirely unnecessary. It is the long term credit on garden seeds. There really is no reason for this custom, more than there is for long time on grass or field seeds. All start out from the initial point, the farmer, on the same terms, i. e., cash. Where is the dividing point that throws one into the cash ledger and the other into the June 1 ledger? It may give the old, well-established house a little advantage that his newer competitor finds hard to meet, but the dealer to whom such time is extended, if worthy of the credit, will take advantage of the liberal discount offered for cash, and thus cut down a profit that is none too large at the best, while the firms taking advantage of the long time will show entirely too large a percentage of actual losses. This is a relic of the old days, out of line with present-day business methods, and is well worthy of your serious consideration."

After a word of appreciation for the work of the association's committees, President Robinson concluded:

"Our association represents a body of high-minded business men. The very character of our business calls for a high degree of intellect and discernment. Let our efforts ever be toward improvement. Let honesty and fair dealing be our high ambition. Let us work together for the common good. Our country is large and yet in its infancy. There is a mighty work before you. Material prosperity rests in the quality of the seeds you sell, and I am sure you are equal to the responsibility."

SEEDS AND THE LAW.



States Have Limited Powers.

Curtis Nye Smith, of Boston, who is the attorney who has served the association and its members so successfully for the last year, was on the program for a paper, "The Relation of State Seed Laws to Interstate Commerce." He first showed how far the U. S. Supreme Court has sustained state legislation affecting interstate commerce, continuing:

The obvious conclusion from this brief discussion is that states, in the absence of prohibitory enactments by Congress, may pass and enforce reasonable laws regulating commerce in seeds, even if incidentally such laws may affect interstate commerce. Mark the importance of the word "reasonable," for most of the present seed laws would not fall within the class denoted by that adjective.

If I am not taxing the patience of my listeners too much, perhaps a few practical, general suggestions to seedsmen regarding this interstate commerce in seeds may be of some interest.

It is profitable, briefly, to note what these state seed laws pretend to regulate:

What State Laws Regulate.

Most of these laws regulate "the sale" or "offer or exposing for sale" to which some state laws add restrictions to the mere "distribution" or "giving away" of seeds, and some states go so far as to attempt to regulate the "delivery" or importation of seeds in or into the state. One state even prevents having possession of specified seeds. Then some states specifically limit the operation of the law to those "sales" or "offers" "within the state," while some state laws narrow this limitation even more by adding the further restriction, "for seeding purposes within this state."

It almost seems too simple even to state that a seedsman of one state receiving an order for seeds from a customer in another state and completing the sale by delivery f. o. b., is not selling or offering for sale in the other state, and consequently has no interest in that state's law. Yet during the last year we were amazed to note that a high official of a state expected to reach such a transaction under the law of his state. It is needless to add that such claims are not tenable. A fortiori, if the statute limits the offers or sales "within the state," and for "seeding purposes within the state," the ex-state seedsman is distinctly uninterested in the seed statute. Indeed, there can be no ex-state statute which can affect him in a sale of this nature. Of course, the purchaser must protect himself from the law, which, as noted, in some states restricts "importation" or "possession" of seeds. Such law, in my opinion, is so

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns it kills flat-leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours, and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich, green growth of lawn grasses, which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

harsh that there may be grave doubts of its constitutionality.

Point of Delivery the Key Note.

Questions have been asked, under the above statement of facts, whether payment for the seeds is an issue. It is not. A sale on credit creates simply the relationship of debtor and creditor. An interesting side issue on this question is how does a c. o. d. sale affect the responsibility of the seedsman under the seed law of the foreign state? As above suggested, f. o. b. means the delivery to the transportation company. Such delivery passes the title to the goods and further risk and ownership (except stoppage in transit for insolvency of buyer) is in the buyer. Delivery, therefore, is the key note of the question. In c. o. d. sales does the vendor still retain title, risk and responsibility, on the ground that the carrier is his agent, or does the buyer assume such rights and responsibilities? The courts of the several states have been in irreconcilable conflict on this question, but the weight of authority favors the proposition that the buyer assumes all those risks and that the carrier is simply the agent of the seller to collect the purchase price. Because of the decisions of the state supreme courts it is inadvisable for seedsmen to sell c. o. d. to customers in the states of Iowa, Missouri, Georgia and Vermont, and possibly Colorado. C. o. d. sales are safe in Alabama, Arkansas, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Texas, West Virginia. The Supreme Court of the United States in effect follows the decisions of the latter states. (Caldwell vs. No. Car., 187 U. S. 622.)

The arrangement of attaching sight or time draft to bill of lading in consignor's name obviously discloses the situation where the seller postpones the time and place of delivery, consequently the title to the goods, until within the boundaries of the foreign state, and the seedsman naturally falls within the purview of the statute, for there is no such thing as a sale unless there be a delivery. An arrangement securing the protection of these methods of collecting the purchase price without assuming the risks is not under discussion.

What Constitutes an Offer.

The practice of shipping seeds to the foreign state to abide the purchaser's right of inspection and acceptance also postpones the time and place of delivery to the foreign state.

Is the general advertising of an ex-state dealer in another state an "offer" within the meaning of the seed statute of the foreign state? No.

Is the solicitation of orders by an agent under above stated laws which are sent to the home office by the customer or by the agent, where they are accepted or rejected according to discretion, an "offer" by the ex-state seed dealer in the foreign state? No.

Can the seed merchant himself solicit orders in another state having seed laws of the above stated character without offending said laws? Yes and no, depending on the facts of the case and the jurisdiction. The decisions in various jurisdictions are conflicting on this point. It often happens that the merchant himself takes orders in other states, which orders he sends to the home office for execution. These orders are taken subject to examination of credit or of a supply of article on hand, and so forth. Under the advisable conditions of delivery above indicated there is no sale or offer of sale in the foreign state. Solicitation of orders, whether by principal or agent, is not a "sale" or an agreement to sell, or an offer or exposing for sale.

The foregoing remarks and suggestions, which I have perhaps miscalled practical, are not intended to cover every situation, for perhaps the most important thing in deciding a legal point is to have all the facts. A slight variation of facts may swing the decision from one result to another. Then, again, your counsel, if he covered every situation, would not have the pleasure of hearing from seedsmen.

THE TEMPLE SHOW.

eral interest came the collection from H. Burnett, Guernsey, with fine blooms of Marmion, Mikado, R. F. Felton and others of his own raising. Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, struck an artistic line in the arrangement of their vases and baskets of flowers. A. F. Dutton, Iver, the pioneer exhibitor who created a sensation not more than eight years ago, when he first exhibited, has now many rivals, but he still holds his own, and put up a good collection, as did also W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey; S. Mortimer, Farnham; W. H. Page, Hampton, and several others. Varieties strongly in evidence in all the collections were the British raised Britannia and Mrs. Burnett; also Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Perfection and Winsor.

Blackmore & Langdon, Bath, and T. S. Ware, Ltd., Feltham, fully maintained their positions as the leading begonia growers with grand groups of well-grown plants, carrying gigantic, beautifully proportioned blooms. A large carmine-rose variety, with fine, full, double flowers, named Rose Queen, in Blackmore & Langdon's collection, received an award of merit. Many others had been similarly honored in previous years. T. Rochford & Sons, Ltd., Broxbourne, exhibited a number of good commercial varieties of ferns. Fine specimens of new, rare and old varieties were exhibited by two of London's best growers, H. B. May & Sons and J. Hill & Son. Sarracenias in variety from A. J. A. Bruce, Manchester, were most interesting. As a hybridizer he had previously earned distinction, and on this occasion S. Willmottæ was honored with an award of merit; it is a cross between Tolliana and purpurea. One of the most popular awards was to the Mrs. F. Sander marguerite, from Sander & Sons, Bruges and St Albans. It is a chaste white, large double flowered marguerite, for purity and size of bloom the best introduction in this line, and the plants are of good decorative habit.

R. P. Ker & Sons, Liverpool, were again in the front rank with amaryllis. Tulips, May-flowering varieties, were staged by Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., Newtownards; R. H. Bath, Ltd., Wisbeck; Hogg & Robertson, Dublin; Barr & Sons, London, and several others. The best tree peonies were put up by Kelway & Sons, Langport. Frank Lilley, Guernsey, made a nice show with early gladioli, anemones and irises. Rhus typhina laciniata, a pretty decorative shrub from R. C. Notcutt, Woodbridge, received an award of merit.

In azaleas and rhododendrons, fine collections were arranged by Jas. Veitch & Sons, Ltd.; R. and G. Cuthbert and John Waterer & Sons, Bagshot. Azalea Floradora is a bright and interesting addition to its class; the flowers are a golden reddish shade, spotted dark red, and it received an award of merit as exhibited by R. & G. Cuthbert. Rhododendron Princess Juliana, already honored at German and Dutch exhibitions, also received an award, as did also Rhododendron Alice, exhibited by J. Waterer & Sons, Ltd. The trusses of flowers are carried very uprightly and the color is a rosy pink.

NITRATE OF SODA.

Will you kindly inform us if we can use nitrate of soda in liquid form for tomatoes, and in what quantity?

W. W. F. C.

Yes, you can use the nitrate of soda on tomatoes, either in dry or liquid form.

If put on dry, it should be watered in well soon afterward and it should not be thrown upon the lower leaves or stalks, as it burns them. I run it through a sieve first, so as to have no large lumps. Then I scatter it broadcast over the beds, as a farmer would sow grain by hand.

It is a powerful fertilizer and must be used sparingly. It is quick in action and will put new life into old plants, but other fertilizers, that contain the other two chemicals, potash and phosphoric acid, should be used also for feeding tomato plants. Nitrogen makes a healthy growth, but the other two fertilizer ingredients do more toward making a successful crop.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week showed an improvement. Stock of all descriptions was plentiful, including sweet peas, which are of the finest quality. Roses, both indoors and outdoors, are also abundant and the parks and yards are a mass of blooms, yet the florists secure a good price for choice stock.

The school commencements put a little energy into the demand, with the call for red flowers predominating. Peonies are almost a thing of the past; only a few can be had. The fourth annual rose show came to a close Saturday evening, June 11, and completed a week of gaiety which also reaped a harvest for the florists.

Various Notes.

Many florists from Seattle attended the Portland rose festival. Among them were Thomas Pritchard, W. R. Gibson, F. Felix, L. Walz and wife, and Mrs. L. W. McCoy, who came in her automobile.

E. Scuchiewicz and F. W. Winters, of Spokane, and D. M. Kersey, of Bellingham, Wash., spent a few days in this city recently. W. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The weather continues remarkably cool and the indications are that it will remain so for some time. This is a great assistance to the florists in several ways. Seldom have flowers been known to keep so well and there is no difficulty in having a good window display; also the general public does not show as great a desire to leave town as is usual at this time. These are small considerations, no doubt, but they have quite a bearing on the retail trade nevertheless, and it must be admitted that business is better than it usually is at this time. Cut flowers of all kinds still show the results of the recent hot spell and, although somewhat more plentiful than they were a week ago, they are far from being abundant. Roses more than anything else exhibit this in the mildew on the foliage, so that it is safe to say that there is really no first quality stock to be bought. Carnations are much more numerous, but the prices remain practically the same. Sweet peas are not brought into town in large quantities and the stems are not as long as the retailers would like to see, but they are quickly sold and there does not seem to be quite enough to fill all requirements.

In other classes of hardy stock there is little to spare and the growers cannot complain of difficulty in disposing of it. In the surrounding towns much the same conditions prevail and business is much better than it generally is in the month of June.

Various Notes.

Oscar Morris and son, from Los Angeles, are in town for a few days' recreation.

F. H. Hunter has returned from a two weeks' trip through southern California.

ROSE FESTIVAL AT PORTLAND.

The great rose festival at Portland, Ore., has just concluded, after delighting several hundred thousands of visitors. The weather was most favorable and roses were in great profusion for decorative purposes. The rose show held in the big Armory hall June 7 and 8 was one of the most interesting features of festival week. It is estimated that 50,000 people went to see this grand display. No admission was charged. The great mass of roses on display were all outdoor grown and competition between amateurs was keen for the many handsome prizes offered by Portland's fashionable rose society. The new varieties of French and English origin attracted much attention, not to overlook E. G. Hill's varieties, which are certainly equal to the best foreign kinds. The precocious spring brought many of the best roses ten days ahead of the rose show, but there were plenty left to fill the space.

In the nursery class only three firms exhibited. These were Clarke Bros., Bay Tree Nurseries and the Swiss Floral Co. The first named staged a beautiful group of palms and ferns, with many vases of cut flowers. The first prize of $100 was awarded for this exhibit. The Swiss Floral Co. had a tastefully arranged group of their new petunia, Irvington Beauty, which won the admiration of all visitors for its large size and beautiful color, resembling that of the La France and Testout roses. Many orders were received by the firm. The Bay Tree Nurseries exhibited specimen plants in tubs of bay trees and evergreens, with samples of topiary work well done. The third prize of $40 was awarded this exhibitor. An entry for nurserymen for the best collection of correctly named roses had no competitor, a poor showing for the professional rose growers.

The best rose in the show was a specimen flower of J. B. Clark, about eight inches in diameter, with Florence Pemberton as a close second. Mildred Grant distinguished itself for size, also for form and beauty. Mme. Melanie Soupert, Dean Hole, Joseph Hill, Frau Karl Druschki and Lady Ashtown were remarkable. Many other fine varieties were exhibited, only too numerous to mention, while many of the finest varieties were past their best condition.

Carloads of cut roses were used for decorative purposes, also for decoration of automobiles and carriages during the parades. All were supplied free of charge by the enthusiastic citizens. At the railroad depot all incoming travelers were presented with roses, and plenty of them. For the automobile parade many fine decorations were executed by local talent in the trade.

Business men are highly enthused over the results of the festival, which means a greater display will be freely forthcoming for another year, and rose planting will continue unabated, with the demand for rare and fine varieties considerably augmented. All residence districts are a perfect mass of roses during the month of June, and "Rose City" is truly the characteristic name for Portland. J. G. Bacher.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.: Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, has bought a 5-ton road roller of the Kelly-Springfield Co., Springfield, O., for its landscape department. The machine is of the latest type, propelled, not by steam, but by gasoline, just like an automobile.

THERE are interesting tales of the fine sums the southern growers of peonies for cut flowers received from some of the northern markets at Memorial day this year. Peony planting is going merrily forward in the borderland, just between the north and the south.

THE Tyler Bros.' Nursery, at Heyburn and Kimberly, near Twin Falls, Idaho, has been sold to a company composed of John Hardin, John Henning, William Durkee and C. E. Wright, who are reorganizing the business as a stock company, with $50,000 capital and with John Hardin as president.

WHILE the members of the American Association of Nurserymen were at Loveland, Colo., on the trip "around the Horn" after the Denver convention, one of the automobiles provided for the nurserymen ran down a 12-year-old boy, who was seriously injured. The hat was passed and $250 is said to have been raised for the lad.

MASSACHUSETTS NURSERYMEN.

The Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association was chartered June 21. There are twenty charter members and it is stated that the purpose of the organization is to advance the mutual interests of the nurserymen of the state. The officers are: President, W. H. Wyman, North Abington; vice-president, Theodore Borst; secretary and treasurer, A. E. Robinson; executive committee, C. R. Fish, John Farquhar, Julius Huerlin, W. B. Whittier.

MAKING A MARKET.

[A paper by James M. Irvine, of St. Joseph, Mo., read at the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, at Denver, June 8 and 9, 1910.]

For a number of years the American Association of Nurserymen has discussed plans to secure general publicity which would stimulate the sale of nursery stock, but the idea has never been carried out. Some members have hoped that the news matter furnished the press by the National Council of Horticulture would accomplish this result, but it is evident that this plan is a failure. It has been contended by others that the publicity committee of the association should prepare articles to be furnished the agricultural papers, to help stimulate demand for certain lines of stock; but this plan, too, will likely fail. If a really good article is furnished, one paper will print it, perhaps, but only one, for when once printed it is no longer news, and other papers will not want it.

I believe that if this association should decide upon a general publicity campaign, the advertising must be in the form of good display advertising, good copy must be prepared, and space must be bought in papers which are really worth using. This is the plan which other organizations follow to create a demand for their respective products, and it is one which can well be considered by nurserymen.

Oranges and Canned Goods.

A few years ago the production of oranges had increased to such an extent that the market would not consume the crop. Did the orange growers cut down their trees to decrease the supply of fruit? No, indeed. Instead, they outlined an elaborate advertising campaign to increase consumption, and their plan succeeded. We all remember the advertisements which appeared in the daily papers, which told of the health enjoyed by those persons who consumed the greatest quantities of oranges. These advertisements dwelt upon the wholesomeness of the fruit as an article of food, not merely as a luxury. Attention was also called to the low price of the fruit, and the price of oranges was compared with the price of apples, to the disadvantage of the latter fruit.

The raisin growers of California have also carried on a limited campaign of this kind.

Perhaps the most recent campaign of this kind was that of the different companies engaged in the canning of fruits and vegetables. With the enforcement of the pure food law it developed that

Hydrangea Arborescens Grandiflora

THIS fine American shrub is superior in value to the well known Hydrangea Paniculata Grandiflora in more symmetrical, beautiful habit of growth, in extreme hardiness, and its unusually long season of continuous bloom, extending from mid-June until September, and on young plants until killed by frost in mid-October. The flower heads are of the largest size, often 6 or 7 inches in diameter, and of the purest white, keeping after being cut a week or more in perfect condition.

We have for fall a large stock of strong, bushy plants, 2 and 3 years old, at attractive prices.

We also offer a fine stock of Berberis Thunbergii, Hardy Privets, Spiraea Van Houttei, Clematis Paniculata, Iris, Phlox, Callas, Gladioli, Vinca Minor. Strong transplants.

some canners used preservatives of various kinds in their food products, and the discussion of benzoate of soda, formaldehyde and other preservatives became so general in magazines and newspapers that the person known as the "ultimate consumer" became suspicious of all canned goods, except the home-made brand, and the canners felt the effect of the agitation.

A Campaign of Education.

Accordingly, the association representing this industry outlined a campaign of education to offset this condition. The advertisements have appeared in publications of general circulation and have set forth the fact that the really reputable canners have no need of preservatives in their food products; that where proper methods are used, and where clean and sanitary conditions prevail, such preservatives are unnecessary.

In the case of the orange growers, the advertising campaign was intended to create a greater demand for oranges. In the case of the canners, the campaign was intended to prevent the decrease of a demand which already existed. It is believed that both campaigns have been successful. The orange growers have spent more money in the campaign recently closed than in the first one, and this is evidence that they have found the expenditure profitable.

Now, are there not times when certain lines of nursery stock are slow sale, and when a well directed advertising campaign can increase the demand? Take the case of cherry trees during the season just past. Nearly every nurseryman in the country seemed to be overstocked with cherry trees; if these trees could have been sold every firm could well afford to have contributed to an advertising campaign which would help close out the stock.

Could the demand for cherry trees have been increased by an advertising campaign? I believe it could.

A Surplus of Cherry Trees.

What was the matter with the demand—or, rather, the lack of demand—for this kind of stock? In the first place, cherry trees have been rather high in price for a number of years, and some farmers have felt that they could not afford to buy. They really have not heard that prices have declined, and a general advertising campaign would have informed them as to true conditions. Again, many farmers have become discouraged in trying to grow cherries. They have planted the wrong varieties, and have failed; they have planted on poorly drained land, and have failed; a succession of wet seasons in parts of the country has caused an unusually severe outbreak of shot-hole fungus, and their trees have died.

A well-directed advertising campaign would have enlightened the farmers as to the better varieties of cherries; would have given proper directions for planting, and have told why failure has resulted in many cases; this advertising could have explained that the new lime-sulphur mixture, when properly used, will prevent the shot-hole fungus and save the trees.

Cherries are really a great crop for the farm and city yard. Indeed, there is no other tree fruit which is of more general adaptability than the cherry, and the objections which farmers have made against planting them could have been removed by a well-directed advertising campaign. Every nurseryman in the country would have been benefited, whether his stock is sold through salesmen or through catalogue, for the effect of the campaign would have been to create a general demand for cherry trees. The sale of a small part of the cherry trees which remained unsold at the close of the season would have borne the expense of the campaign.

A Distinction in Methods.

From time to time the demand for other lines of nursery stock will need stimulating in this same way, and I believe a general publicity campaign will do the work. This sort of advertising is intended to create a demand for a certain commodity, and this is the form of advertising which is recommended for nurserymen.

The best kind of advertising which can be done by individual nursery firms, also, is that which creates business. And yet I venture to suggest, with all due respect to the men who write the nursery advertisements, that most advertisements of this kind are not calculated to create business; they are, rather, designed to attract orders which might otherwise have gone to another firm. And this is not good advertising.

Advertising experts continually assert that the cost of advertising is not an expense, but this kind of advertising is certainly an expense, and an unwise one. The really good advertising by nurserymen is that which creates new business. And yet, most nursery advertising fails to do this. Look through the trade papers and the farm papers and see if this is not so. Advertisements reading like this are all too familiar:

FLORISTS' REVIEW

of Nursery Stock. Peach Trees a Specialty.''

Persuasive and Creative.

Have you ever read any advertisements which sounded like that? Years ago advertisements of merchants read much like the average nursery advertisement of today: ''John Jones, Dealer in Dry Goods, Hats and Caps, Boots and Shoes.'' The up-to-date merchant has greatly advanced in his advertising methods, and his advertisements now literally coax the money out of one's pocket by reason of their powers of persuasion. They create a demand for the goods he has for sale.

The time has come for nurserymen to adopt better methods of advertising. Creative advertising is profitable, but that form of advertising which coaxes an order from your competitor simply increases the cost of doing business. The advertisements which create business will have the effect of getting one's share of this business, anyway.

It is not the purpose of this paper to lay down any set rules for the preparation of copy for nursery advertisements; the writer does not pretend to know how to prepare this sort of copy, but he does want to give it as his opinion that better copy should be used than is now generally employed.

Preparing and Placing the Ads.

Advertising space is expensive, and it costs as much to fill it with poor copy as with copy which will create a demand for nursery stock. If you cannot prepare good copy yourself, get the services of men who can. Such men are available; they have had experience, and their services are well worth using. In your advertising campaign use fewer publications, perhaps, but use good copy in the papers used. Direct your advertising toward creating new business, rather than try to entice from your neighbor the orders which are headed his way.

This paper does not plead for more advertising on the part of nurserymen; that will come later, perhaps. The need now is for better advertising—advertising which will create business for nurserymen generally, in specific lines, when the demand needs stimulating—and for individual firms always to have in mind that the best advertising, and the most profitable, is that which creates new business, and not that which changes an order from one firm to another. The latter kind of advertising is an expense; the former kind is a permanent investment in building up a profitable business.

A BLUE ROSE

The Greatest Rose Novelty of the Century

It flowered with us this season and was greatly admired.

The New Rambler (Violet Blue), hailed by the German rose growers as the forerunner of a genuinely cornflower blue rose, is a seedling of Crimson Rambler, very vigorous and hardy, and free blooming.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

The hot weather is upon us and, as usual, has caused a decline in business. From now on, till trade opens up in the fall, there will not be much doing, only an occasional call for flowers for socials, etc. Of course, there is always about the same demand for funeral flowers, no matter what the season. Roses and carnations are rather soft, owing to the extremely warm weather during the last week. Sweet peas are plentiful and can be bought for 5 cents per bunch of fifty.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports some good weddings and receptions. They are cutting some good carnations and roses. Their sweet peas are extra good for outdoor stock. They have planted three houses of carnations and one house of Beauties. This firm does not plant carnations in the field, if intended for inside, but keeps them growing in pots till the houses are ready. A large field of carnations is planted for summer bloom, however, from which they usually get good flowers.

Royston & Fenton have torn out all the old roses and will get the young stock in this week. They rebuilt all the benches, every board in the old benches being rotted out. E. L. F.

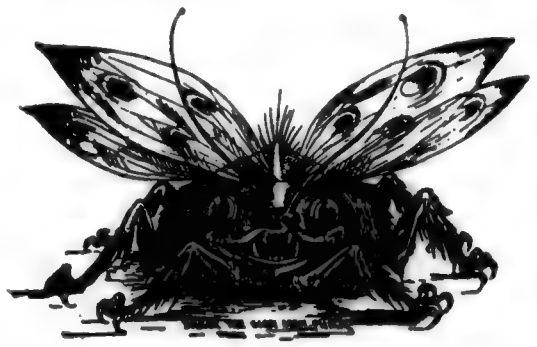
PORTLAND, ME.

At the St. Lawrence church, June 4, we had an especially pretty wedding. The beautifully curved altar was banked with bloom. Hydrangeas, spiræas and maidenhair ferns were the plants used. On the right side of the altar was an immense bank of palms; on the left side were hydrangeas and ferns. The front of the altar was draped with southern huckleberry, which hung to the floor. The huckleberry also outlined the arches above the organ and the choir rail. Beginning with the choir rail, which was massed with spiræas and ferns, row after row of blooming plants and ferns were massed, making the altar a solid bank of flowers.

A new feature was the separate altar rail, made specially for the church weddings. With its white satin cushion and its rail of maidenhair and white sweet peas, it was a pretty innovation. The pews for the near relatives were marked with great bunches of roses, tied with pale green gauze ribbons. A new and pretty feature of the aisle decoration was the use of hats for baskets to hold pink and white sweet peas as seat decorations. The bride's bouquet was of valley and her attendants carried roses.

The decorations were planned and executed by A. W. Dyer, who receives orders for many of our best weddings and always has pretty decorative schemes. O.

SHALL do no more advertising this season; we are buried with orders. Shall be very glad to remember The Review again next season. — Sterling Emery Wheel Mfg. Co., Tiffin, O.



THE good people keep sending me their money and, much as I hate to do it, I have to send it back, for the advertisement in The Review sold all the stock.— J. L. Johnson, De Kalb, Ill.

PITTSBURG, PA.

The Market.

Pittsburg has just had a bad week as far as the wholesalers are concerned. Such great quantities of flowers are rarely seen; all of the outdoor roses, peonies, delphiniums and iris came in at once and on top of them came an avalanche of roses, carnations and lilies from the inside, all of which usually come much earlier; the result has been much more really good stock than it was possible to dispose of.

The retail stores are doing about the usual amount of June business, but the commencement trade, which at one time was among the most important business of the year, has fallen off until now it is scarcely considered. Those handling bedding plants are still doing more than is usual at this late date.

Various Notes.

Saturday, June 18, a number of hail storms visited this section, some portions having as many as three separate storms that day. Although the hail was of good size, the only damage reported was the beating down and spoiling of the outdoor flowers in bloom; in fact, it finished the peonies.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. had a leak in the ammonia tank recently which put them all out of the building and, while there was no serious loss or damage, it caused them considerable inconvenience.

Wanted, a watchdog, one not too big, but with plenty of bark to it, to protect the home of John Bader, which w: visited a short time ago by a burglar. The burglar was captured, however, an< all the jewelry recovered, the only loss being some gold coins which he had evidently spent before he was caught.

T. P. Langhans has now moved to his bungalow at Allison Park for the summer. One should hear about his flock of white chickens; they can do nearly everything except whistle.

Greenhouse stock in this vicinity is in finer condition than ever was seen before at this time of year. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is cutting as fine Killarney and White Killarney as one ever sees in the winter and all the other roses are equally good. Hoo-Hoo.

We are pleased to advise that we have had the best results from our adv. in The Review, and have sold an immense lot of stock during the past winter and spring. We will certainly need your services again in the near future.—Shepard's Garden Carnation Co., Lowell, Mass.

DENVER.

The Market.

Trade last week was dull. With the exception of a couple of days, when there were some funerals, it was the regulation summer business. With the graduation exercises over and few weddings taking place, comparatively few flowers are called for, and the quality of such as have been on the market is not first-class, although there are a few exceptions, of course.

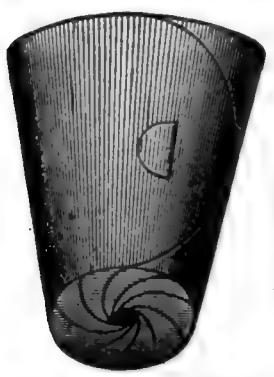
Carnations have held up well. Roses are not so good, as some are getting smaller and a few are coming in mildewed. Long-stemmed Beauties are good; in fact, they are the only ones that are good, medium and short ones being second-class.

Sweet peas are fairly good, although no outside ones are yet being picked. Peonies are mostly a thing of the past, though an occasional dozen of late ones may be seen. Good lily of the valley is seen, but outside of that there is considerable poor stock arriving.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine and N. A. Benson have returned from a fishing trip and are now off for another one, up the Gunnison river.

John Berry, state vice-president for Colorado, is reminding the members of the S. A. F. that the convention at Rochester is near at hand, and he asks for as large a delegation as possible to go.



Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., was calling on the trade here last week.

The largest decoration of the season was at the University Club ball. Some say it was the finest yet done for that annual event. It was the work of B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co.

The Colorado Florists' Club adjourned for the months of July, August and September, to meet on the second Thursday of October, when the election of officers will take place. E. S. K.

HORTICULTURAL BOOKS

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price

Beautifying Country Homes.

By Weidenmann. This is the most useful work on the subject ever issued in this country. It is beautifully illustrated with numerous fine wood engravings, and with 17 full-page and 7 double-page colored lithographs of places already improved. It contains general directions for lawns, roads and drives, walks, hedges, trees and shrubs, gardens, ornamental grounds, hints on burial lots, etc. The beautifully colored plans of improved places are accompanied by descriptions giving the names and position of the various trees and shrubs employed in planting, thus providing a complete planting map. Cloth. $10.00

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.

By Peter Henderson. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. Bailey. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalogue of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By Alex. Montgomery, Jr. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting, with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

Hedges, Windbreaks, Shelters and Live Fences.

By E. P. Powell. A treatise on the planting, growth and management of hedge plants for country and suburban homes. It gives accurate directions concerning hedges; how to plant and how to treat them; and especially concerning windbreaks and shelters. Cloth. 140 pages. Illustrated. 50 cents

Landscape Gardening.

By Samuel Parsons, Jr., ex-Superintendent of Parks, New York city. Practical hints on lawns, the laying out and arrangement of large and small parks, cemetery plots and railway station lawns, also on the subjects suitable for planting. Illustrated. $3.50

NEW ORLEANS.

With the month of June comes the dull season of the year, and outside of a few weddings and some funeral orders there is little business. All the markets are at a standstill and many florists have ceased going to them till early in the fall. A little recreation will be a necessity and the local society is contemplating an outing or a dinner, to celebrate its organization and the election of the new officers for the next year.

Abele Bros. are the originators of a new fern of the nephrolepis family, a sport of the well known Barrowsii. The ends of the fronds are finely divided into five or six and form quite a distinct variety, which remains true, since the firm has had it for over two years. It is without doubt a good acquisition. They report a fine lot of carnations and pot plants. This is surely something unusual down here at this time of the year.

R. Eichling, with U. J. Virgin, says his aster crop is ahead of last year. The culture of this plant has so far been quite uncertain in New Orleans, and fair success has often been followed by failure.

B. M. Wichers, of Gretna, the fern specialist, always has an eye open to new productions. His last one is the rearing of a kind of turtle which abounds in the lagoon around New Orleans and is relished by epicures and in demand in different markets. He seems satisfied with his new enterprise. In fact, some florists give attention, as a side line, to dogs, chickens, goldfish, etc., and we do not see why the terrapin business should not be as good. We have even heard that someone in the craft is contemplating the starting of a lizard-egg hatchery.

J. C. Quinette, long established across the river as a nurseryman, has moved his store in town from Carondelet street to 727 Common street. The location is more central and a better one for his increasing trade. He intends to start a cut flower business in the near future.

Fred Dumoy and John O'Doberts made application to be received as members of the New Orleans Horticultural Society. M. M. L.

PLANT FOR NAME.

I am sending under separate cover a hardy lily bloom and leaves for name. The stem is flat and it blooms during May and June. It is perfectly hardy and blooms at a season when flowers are scarce in the open. I should like to know the name of this plant, so that I can obtain a stock of it.

N. E. D.

It is a form of Lilium elegans, of which there are quite a number of varieties. The flowers most nearly resemble those of L. elegans aurantiacum, yellow spotted black. Other useful varieties are: Atrosanguineum, deep crimson, dark spots; Prince of Orange, apricot; venustrum, buff, dark spots. Planting should be done in late fall, November being a suitable month, covering the bulbs to an average depth of eight inches. C. W.

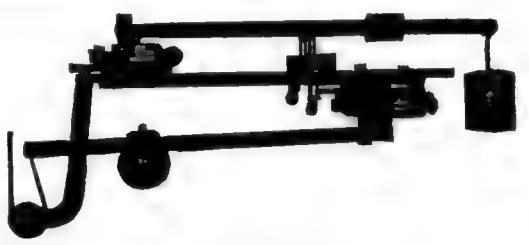
Would You Save One-Quarter of Your Coal Bill?

INSTALL



A Kitts Improved Hydraulic Damper Regulator.

Florist Peter Crowe, Rose Place, Utica, N. Y., voluntarily writes:—

"I am very much pleased to let you know that the Damper Regulator I bought from you last fall is by far the best apparatus for greenhouse purposes. I had my book-keeper compare my coal bill of last with that of this year and I find a saving of one quarter the amount of this year's coal over last year's; also the past winter was a great deal colder and longer than the winter before.

"There is another very good feature about the Damper Regulator, as it keeps a uniform heat in all the houses at all times by putting on and shutting off pipes. And I find that my Roses and Ferns did far better this winter than any winter so far, as the temperature was so uniform at all times.

"My reason for writing you is to let you know, and also to thank you for bringing my attention to the Regulator, and I assure you I cannot speak too highly of this machine."

Greenhouse Heating.

THE REVIEW is glad to answer in this department any inquiries concerning the heating of greenhouses. Give all the facts.

YOKING BOILERS.

Kindly give me information as to the best way to pipe my new houses, and also the best way to hitch my two boilers, so that they may be used either as a battery or independently. The boilers are of the locomotive type, seventy horse-power each. The boiler pit is in the middle of the range, and is sufficiently low. The two new houses run east and west, and are 27x200 feet each. They have forty inches of glass on the sides and gables. We will use 20x20 double strength A glass.

Please state how large a discharge pipe I need to heat with steam in the coldest weather, which in this part of Montana is 20 degrees below zero only for a day or two at a time; also how many 1¼-inch returns are required. There will be eight 5-foot cement benches in the two houses. The boilers are in the center, on the south side of these two houses. There will be a division walk in the center of the houses, running crosswise. The houses are for carnations. M. N. C.

The question does not state clearly whether there are more than two houses, but from the size of the boilers it is inferred that there are several others.

If the boilers are side by side, all that is necessary is to run up a 4-inch pipe from each and at some convenient point connect them to a 5-inch main, from which the other feed pipes can be taken. The main return should be 2½-inch, with a 2-inch connection to each boiler. Between the boilers and the main pipes there should be gate valves on both flows and returns, as well as swinging check valves on the returns.

For the houses mentioned, use one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and eight 1¼-inch returns in each.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I shall be thankful to you if you will be so kind as to give me some information concerning the proper heating of a greenhouse, 20x75, running north and south, with the boiler house at the south end. The walls are four feet ten inches high, with two feet of glass. How much radiation and how large a boiler will I need? How would a sectional water boiler do, or a sectional round boiler? Which would you prefer? Please give me some idea about the piping, stating the number of flows and returns. The house is for carnations and bedding plants. You know just how cold it is here, in Massachusetts. E. J. S.

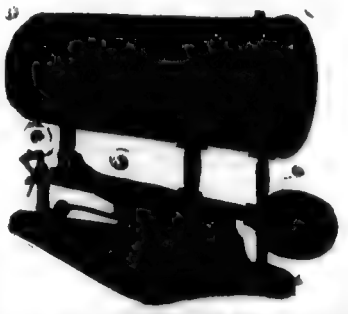
To heat a house 20x75 feet, with two feet of glass in each of the side walls, to a temperature of 55 degrees in central Massachusetts, will require about 650 square feet of radiating surface, but it will give the highest economy in heating if a heater rated for 950 to 1,000 square feet of radiation is used. Sectional heaters give good results. In the smaller sizes those with horizontal sections are generally selected, but in the present case a boiler with vertical sections could be used and might be made to answer in case another house is added later.

For radiation put in three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one on each wall and the other under the ridge. Then use for returns three coils of 2-inch pipes, placing three on each wall and four under the center bench. One 3-inch main flow pipe will answer. By having the highest point in the system directly over the boiler and connecting the expansion tank there, it will be possible, by giving all of the pipes a slight fall, say one inch in ten feet, to dispense entirely with air-valves. There should, however, be a gate valve upon each of the 2½-inch flow pipes.



MAKING ONE HOUSE OF TWO.

I have two parallel houses, each about fifteen feet wide and from ten to eleven feet high at the ridge. The houses are three-quarter span and the rafters measure twelve feet and six feet. I propose to make one house out of these two, by roofing over the space between the two ridges. That is, I would remove the present gutter between the two houses, with the rafters that rest there, and would extend the other rafters upward and inward to a meeting point which would constitute the ridge of the new house. This ridge would be fourteen and a half feet high. I would thus have one three-quarter span house, thirty feet wide.

Could the new house be heated just as easily as the two old ones? M. R.

In severe weather it would be a little

The Market.

Both wholesale and retail florists report trade as quiet during the last week. Weather conditions have changed and the week has been one of sunshine. The market is will stocked with seasonable blooms. Carnations are plentiful. Roses, sweet peas and peonies are also coming in freely. Some excellent valley was brought in on Friday. Stock in general seems to be fully up to the standard in quality, and the quantity offered is sufficient for all demands.

Various Notes.

The meeting of the Florists' Association last Monday evening was well attended, and everyone was enthusiastic over the plans outlined by the various committees for entertaining the members of the S. A. F. Valuable prizes have been offered in the bowling and shooting contests. The Ladies' Auxiliary has not been forgotten and Charles Ogsten, chairman of the local committee, has in preparation some enjoyable features for the ladies, in the way of visits to the parks, the lake resorts, etc.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Business has not been at a standstill by any means, but last week we experienced the biggest glut in many years. It was simply impossible for the wholesale houses to dispose of all the stock which arrived, try as they would. Fakers, cheap sales in some of the Woodward avenue stores, and most reasonable prices in every other store failed to relieve the situation.

The weather has been exceedingly warm, driving many of the society people out of the city ahead of time.

The quality of flowers is good, considering the heat, carnations being especially fine.

Various Notes.

Thursday evening, June 23, Walter Taepke is to be married to Miss Grace Price, of this city. Only the near relatives and friends of the young couple will be in attendance at the ceremony, nevertheless they have the best wishes of all their many florist friends.

Albert Stahelin, of Redford, recently purchased a nearly new automobile, and after learning all the ins and outs of driving a car, he sold it at a neat little profit, using the whole sum toward building his future home.

For many years the greenhouses of Robert Watson have yielded him good crops, but their time has come; they must make way for three new modern houses. The new houses will be 16x100 feet each, and the ridges will be seven feet high. The whole heating system will also be changed from steam to hot water.

Thomas Browne will hereafter be seen gliding about in a new Warren-Detroit auto. H. S.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual rose and strawberry exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in the Young Men's Lyceum on Tuesday afternoon and evening, June 14.

The exhibition was the finest the society has ever held. On account of the unusual amount of wet weather, there was available a remarkably fine lot of roses, fruits and vegetables. Frau Karl Druschki rose was in elegant shape.

F. R. Pierson Co. made an excellent exhibit, consisting of palms, peonies, climbing roses and sprays of mountain laurel. Scott Bros. had a fine exhibit of peonies and roses. Miss Blanche Potter and Mrs. J. B. Trevor had fine exhibits of sweet peas.

A cultural certificate was awarded Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Howard Nichols gardener, for a plate of Sharpless strawberries. A certificate of merit was also awarded Mrs. Trevor for a new seedling climbing rose, Glen View. A certificate of merit was awarded the Park Department of White Plains for a collection of rugosa roses. A certificate of merit was awarded H. Darlington for the chrysanthemum Pride of Seven Oaks. A variegated rose exhibited by Miss Blanche Potter attracted considerable attention. Ferdinand Hermann received honorable mention for an exhibit of flowers of Magnolia macrophylla, roses, etc. Joseph Eastman received honorable mention for an exhibit of campanulas, and Richard Livingston for a plate of cherries.

The principal exhibitors and prize winners were: George Wittlinger, gardener for Miss Blanche Potter; Frank Milne, gardener for E. H. Weatherbee; Robert Angus, gardener for Joseph Eastman; Richard Livingston; John Woodcock, gardener for E. A. McAlpin; William Grierson, gardener for Mrs. Hicks Arnold; Mrs. J. B. The Market.

Trade is still lively here, and there is still a good deal of bedding being done. The call for geraniums is heavy even now, and the growers that had some good late stock are using it to good advantage.

We had no growing weather up to the last few days, and then we just jumped right into midsummer weather, with the mercury around 90 degrees in the shade. Stock, no doubt, will suffer in quality as a result. Roses are showing the effects of it more than anything else, but are still good for this time of the year. Carnations are holding up finely, with the quality almost equal to that of the winter months. They have been quite plentiful, but the demand has also been heavy, as there has been a great deal doing this month, including a number of weddings, which use lots of stock. Funeral work in the latter part of last week and the early part of this week was extremely heavy, and that, combined with commencement flowers, has given everybody a good deal of business. The O. S. U. promenade called for a big lot of Beauties, roses, valley and sweet peas.

Sweet peas are coming in from outdoors now and are extra fine, both in stem and color, which cannot be said of the house-grown sorts, and they will have to take a back seat now. The Augusta gladioli have proven to be good sellers, and quite a few are in the market. Peonies are still to be had in quantity, but the demand for them is rather light at present.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens reports a heavy business in all lines of work, but the bulk of the bedding is over now.

E. Metzmaier has had a busy season, and reports things pretty well cleaned up.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had an unusual run on funeral work last week, which used up a pile of stock.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports heavy business in wedding and commencement flowers.

Walter Marion, of Ashville, O., was in town last week looking up some material for his new place.

William Graff got home from Chicago safe and sound and reports having a fine time. J. M.

OUR TWO COLUMN 60 FT. IRON FRAME HOUSE

Here is a safe house because it is made a safe way. A few years ago our first 40-foot Iron Frame House having only two small columns was much the talk. Some of the old gray beards shook their heads and "had their doubts if such a house, 700 feet long, would stand the wind and snow strain."

Since then we have built many "40 footers." During the last year we did a lot of hard thinking about how an equally safe house, half as wide again, could be made with the same number of columns. We knew that it was not safe engineering practice to put the strain of that immense roof on the side posts and fittings at the ridge, which was bound to be the case if supported by trusses alone.

We also realized that a series of trusses that were brought in place "by a nut and thread tension plan" were dangerous, as any sudden, unexpected strain might strip the threads, and should this occur on several of the trusses, the roof would be in great danger of collapse. It was evident that to keep watch of these innumerable tension truss rods was out of the question.

Knowing these things, we have gone slow—slow but sure, and now here is a house 60 feet wide, that is stiffened between the two columns, spaced 29 feet apart, by an angle iron compression truss which is formed by bolting the angle irons directly to the fish plates, and the column and ridge fittings. No trussing between the iron rafters is necessary.

You get nine 4 feet 6-inch benches; two 24-inch side walks and eight 22-inch walks.

In our next Adv. we will show you a section of a house 72 feet wide.

If you want more particulars of this week's house, or can't wait for our next Adv., write us. Better yet, call at any of our five offices.

How to Save Money

No. 1

TO begin with, buy all your greenhouse material of one firm. You then become a good customer of that concern and they will be sure to treat you fair and square. You will be able to command best prices on account of the size of your order. You will need to deal with only one party, get one shipment and pay one bill. If anything is wrong there is only one to deal with. Then, too, you can many times save freight and cartage by purchasing in one place.

Think this over. We can furnish you the complete greenhouse. If you prefer we will sell any part of it from a pound of nails up.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

IS THIS THE RECORD?

How many weddings did you ever "furnish" in one day? Did the number exceed seventeen?

That's the record to date.

H. H. Kuhlmann, of Houston, Tex., does not claim to hold the record—only that his record of one day's work exceeds the best so far published. Here is what he says: "I read in one of the recent issues of The Review about a retail florist who had made 'a record' for the number of weddings for which he had furnished decorations or bouquets in any one day; the number was eight or nine. I think that I can beat that badly, as on Wednesday, June 8, I had seventeen weddings to furnish bride and bridesmaid bouquets for, some of them being shipped out of town, but most of them were used in town. For about ten of them we furnished palms and ferns, etc., as well as the bouquets. I think that was going some." So does The Review, and will be glad to tell about it if anyone went some more on any one day this June.

PANDANUS UTILIS.

The late Peter Henderson, whose memory is revered by all good gardeners, and whose judgment was of the highest order, in passing a plant of Pandanus utilis in the hall of his residence once remarked to William Scott: "The best house plant I know of." All dealers in palms and decorative plants find it among the most popular of the foliage plants used in dwellings. "They are especially suited for fern pans and table decoration," according to Wilhelm Miller, who was Prof. Bailey's right-hand man in compiling the Cyclopedia of American Horticulture, and who took for that monumental publication an account of pandanus written by W. H. Taplin for the REVIEW, in which Mr. Taplin said: "The specific name of this pandanus, utilis, which signifies useful, seems to be especially applicable to the plant. As a florist's plant it is most useful in small sizes, for example, in pots of 4-inch to 8-inch sizes, there being but a limited demand for plants larger than these."

The accompanying illustration gives the idea of a specimen of large size, but such was not the case. Receptacle, plant and all stood not more than twenty-four inches high, the plant itself being in an ordinary flower pot, which was slipped within the miniature garden vase, the pot and soil being concealed by green sphagnum moss. One of the principal merits of the plant is its ability to endure neglect in the matter of watering. Indeed, under average dwelling-house conditions it appears to do fully as well when kept fairly dry as when given frequent waterings. Under greenhouse glass it requires warm, moist treatment and makes rapid growth and gives little trouble, unless spot develops. This spot is caused by the boring of a minute insect in the leaf, and its progress seems to be favored by overwatering. Propagation is generally by seeds, which are a regular commodity with all seed houses catering to the florists, and which germinate well if planted in light soil and placed in a warm house. The seed should preferably set with the bottom end up, this being the end from which the germs emerge. The seeds are a little peculiar, being closely set in a more or less globular mass that hangs down on a stout stem, while the individual seeds, or rather fruits, are compound and often contain eight or ten germs, the latter being enclosed in cells of a tough, horny substance within the fruit. Some growers soak the seeds before planting them, but others have found no gain in the time of germination through this practice. P. utilis is a native of some of the South Sea islands, where it reaches a height sometimes as great as sixty feet.

Pandanus Utilis.

DISCOVERED IN TIME.

Even the state in which this happened shall be nameless!

He was a raw hand and in the busy cut flower season he was pressed into service. The order called for carnations and asparagus. He was tying up the box wherewith to delight a hospital patient. It was an easy, "straight" order, but the cut flower man casually inquired:

"You gave them plumosus?"

The youngster gaped.

"Plumosus," reiterated the packer. "Like this," he continued, pointing to a string of the popular fern.

"I gave them asparagus," stoutly asserted the novice.

"Let me see." The box was opened, and there, snugly resting upon some Enchantress, were two prim bunches of parsley!

What the recipient, on his bed of sickness, would have said had the carnations been served with "dressing," may be variously conjectured.

THE BRIDE'S BOUQUET.

The wedding season is on the wane, for June is preëminently the bride's own month, but interest in the subject of bride's bouquets is perennial—the retail florist is called on to make fewer of them in the hot months, but that there will be weddings is nearly as certain as death and taxes.

As an example of a popular bouquet, the accompanying illustration is worth study. It is one that can be made at a lower price than those that combine orchids and valley, or even those made of valley alone. Made of Bride roses and valley, with a shower, it is, next to the valley bunch, probably carried by more brides than have any other style of bouquet; but by simply using pink or yellow roses and finishing without the shower, it is adapted for the bridesmaids.

This is one of the bouquets made by R. Irving Gresham, of the C. A. Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga., whose work recently has attracted much attention. It should be noted that on this, as on practically all of Mr. Gresham's bouquets, Farleyense is used for green. There is nothing finer for the purpose, and in wholesale centers the increasing call reflects its increased use for fine work instead of the more common adiantum.

A WORD FOR THE COLUMBINE.

It is pleasing at any time to discover something in our work that is unusual, and especially refreshing in the hot, dull season now here. The rose and carnation are on the wane for a spell, but there are other bewitching beauties galore. Aquilegia or columbine is a delightful possibility, dainty of form and of varied shades of pink, lavender, mauve, yellow and combinations of these that are truly inspiring. They last well in water, and for funeral work can be stemmed to picks and worked into a handful or two of damp moss, backed by a little foil and wired to some fairly strong foliage, as Sprengeri or shrub branches, for support.

A spray of ferns, especially if long, is finished most beautifully with these flowers as a cluster. If ribbons are used, care must be taken in choosing the color and weave. Heavy silks or satins are out of place; narrow ribbon and chiffons would be best. For table decoration the foliage of the columbine itself is good and is plentiful, too. Other fern may be substituted or the leaves of the centaurea, dusty miller.

I do not know how the columbine will ship, but for those who have a garden it is a splendid flower. The doubles are very well in the garden, but it is the single columbines that take my fancy as a cut flower.

Violet Sylvester.

PANSIES.

Will you inform me when pansy seed should be sown and the plants transplanted and how far apart, so as to have the flowers in the early spring? Is it necessary to cover them up for the winter, in Maryland, the same as single violets? What varieties sell best?

E. A. P.

In your state pansy seed should not be sown before the first week in August. You can either winter them in coldframes or outdoors. In your latitude they will be fully as well outdoors. Transplant them when of suitable size, four inches apart in the rows. You can either plant them in beds four feet wide, running the rows in the beds quite closely and cultivating them by hand, or, as some big growers prefer, planting sufficiently wide apart to allow of using horse or hand cultivators. A light covering of straw, hay, leaves or pine needles is better applied, but not until the ground is frozen hard. Trimardeau is probably the best all-around pansy to grow. Several American specialists have strains which are good.

C. W.

CYANIDE IN SUMMER.

Should potassium cyanide be used for fumigation at this season of the year, when the temperature is high? We were under the impression that it should not be used in a temperature above 60 degrees. J. F. W.

Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas in summer is likely to cause injury to tender growths, unless a cold night is selected for the operation and only a short exposure given. If you have facilities for opening the ventilators from outdoors, we should not be afraid to use it, especially on a cool night. We would syringe the plants well in the fumigated houses early the following morning, to reduce the chances of injury.

Bride's Bouquet of Roses and Valley.

Many growers make a practice of using cyanide all the time, and will not use any other fumigant. It is a simple and inexpensive method and certainly no other plan will clear out such pests as mealy bug and white fly, to say nothing of aphis, thrips and scale, as this does.

Some of the plants most easily injured are orchids, on which we would never use it, antirrhinums, tomatoes and cucumbers, but there are always cool nights, even in summer, when its use is safe, provided a weak dose is given and the houses are not left closed all night. C. W.

LEGAL RESPONSIBILITY.

In The Review of recent date an eastern wholesale commission florist reported a case of the repudiation of an order that he thought might interest others who have had similar experiences. A retail florist up state ordered $50 worth of carnations to be sent on a specified train on a Saturday and sent his check for the goods. The express company failed to get them to the customer before Monday. The florist refused the goods and stopped payment on the check. The wholesaler had already deposited it and protest charges were added. He shipped the goods at the exact time specified by the retail florist, making special effort and incurring extra expense to do so. The question was asked: "Who is responsible, and can the wholesaler collect by law?"

Will you kindly give me some information on the growing of snapdragons for winter flowering? I now have plants in 2¼-inch pots. Will they be right if kept cut back, or would later plants be better? When should they be benched? How far apart should they be planted? How long is the profitable blooming season? Do they require stakes? Any other information on this plant will be greatly appreciated. G. S. R.

The plants you now have in 2¼-inch pots will be all right. Do not allow them to become too much potbound before shifting them into a size larger pots. Keep them pinched back. Allow the shoots to run up and show flower buds before doing this, as they will then break stronger. Keep the plants outdoors; a coldframe bed with sashes removed will be a suitable place. Probably it will be necessary to give the plants a second shift before you can plant them out. If you do not care to go to the trouble of potting on the plants, you can plant them outdoors and, if they are lifted carefully at benching time, little check will be suffered.

For a winter crop you should bench early in September. Allow the plants twelve inches each way. To secure strong spikes, limit the number of shoots to four or five to a plant. Rub the side growths from the flowering stems, as you would from chrysanthemums. When the first crop is cut, the plants will soon break again and give a second crop, but we would prefer to pull them out and plant another batch of later seedlings. The plants will require staking; if once the stems become bent and twisted, they are of no value whatever.

Such soil as you would use for chrysanthemums will answer for snapdragons, and a winter night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees should not be exceeded. These plants are easily injured by fumigation, hydrocyanic acid gas being especially damaging to the ends of the growing shoots. We should say a blooming season of eight to ten weeks is as long as would be profitable. C.

SCHIZANTHUS WISETONENSIS.

One of the best annuals for cut flowers in winter, or for use as a pot plant for house decoration, is Schizanthus Wisetonensis. If wanted at Christmas, the seed should be sown during the first week in August, in pans or flats, in a mixture of loam, leafmold and sand. As soon as the seedlings can be handled, put them in 2½-inch pots. Keep them potted on and flower them in 6-inch pots. When the pots are filled with roots, manure water should be given twice a week until the plants show color.

If large plants are wanted, they can be shifted into 9-inch pots, and, if grown cool, they will make plants measuring two feet or more through. We find, however, that the 6-inch size is the most convenient to handle.

A later batch can be sown in September, to flower in February and March. These can be grown in pots or planted out on a light bench, ten inches apart, in a sandy loam. They should have the same culture as stocks, with a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. They need plenty of water when established. If allowed to dry out badly, red spider will attack the plants. After the flowers are cut, there is ample time to follow with stocks for Memorial day.

Nicely flowered plants of this annual should sell on sight at Easter. If florists would but give these a thorough trial, I am sure they would grow more of them. Wm. Swan.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

Germany has lost a well-known and stalwart representative horticulturist by the death of Heinrich August Koenemann, Rheingau, Niederwalluf, of the firm of Goos & Koenemann, who are in the front rank as raisers and introducers of new dahlias, irises and hardy flowers. Mr. Koenemann was in the prime of life and held in the highest respect. At one time he was in the habit of making business trips to the United States, but latterly relinquished American journeys on account of increasing pressure of work in the management of the nurseries.

England imports tons of asparagus from France every year in the early part of the season, but the markets are now fully stocked with fine home-grown bundles of this table delicacy. Evesham is the center of asparagus culture in England and an asparagus show is held annually, prizes being given for the best bundles of 120 heads. At the close of the show the bundles are sold by auction. The best sample this year came from George Knight, who was awarded the championship cup. His bundle weighed nineteen pounds six ounces. The highest bid for it was $25, the highest price ever given for the championship bundle. There was a heavier bundle, twenty pounds six ounces, from C. Falkner, but the quality was not equal to G. Knight's.

John Waterer & Sons, Bagshot, are now holding their annual show of rhododendrons in a huge tent at the Royal Botanic Gardens, London, England; 2,000 plants are on view, with approximately 100,000 flower-trusses of every known shade, size and character.

To demonstrate the utility of carnations as bedding plants, the English Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society is again conducting a trial of carnations at the Royal Botanic Gardens. The National Dahlia Society and the National Chrysanthemum Society are each conducting trials of their respective flowers and, still greater than the three mentioned, the National Sweet Pea Society's trials are in full swing.

The great annual show at York, one of the largest in England, was opened June 15 and on that day there were 11,280 visitors. There were 145 exhibitors. Bee.

there will be weddings is nearly as certain as death and taxes.

As an example of a popular bouquet, the accompanying illustration is worth study. It is one that can be made at a lower price than those that combine orchids and valley, or even those made of valley alone. Made of Bride roses and valley, with a shower, it is, next to the valley bunch, probably carried by more brides than have any other style of bouquet; but by simply using pink or yellow roses and finishing without the shower, it is adapted for the bridesmaids.

This is one of the bouquets made by R. Irving Gresham, of the C. A. Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga., whose work recently has attracted much attention. It should be noted that on this, as on practically all of Mr. Gresham's bouquets, Farleyense is used for green. There is nothing finer for the purpose, and in wholesale centers the increasing call reflects its increased use for fine work instead of the more common adiantum.

A WORD FOR THE COLUMBINE.

It is pleasing at any time to discover something in our work that is unusual, and especially refreshing in the hot, dull season now here. The rose and carnation are on the wane for a spell, but there are other bewitching beauties galore. Aquilegia or columbine is a delightful possibility, dainty of form and of varied shades of pink, lavender, mauve, yellow and combinations of these that are truly inspiring. They last well in water, and for funeral work can be stemmed to picks and worked into a handful or two of damp moss, backed by a little foil and wired to some fairly strong foliage, as Sprengeri or shrub branches, for support.

A spray of ferns, especially if long, is finished most beautifully with these flowers as a cluster. If ribbons are used, care must be taken in choosing the color and weave. Heavy silks or satins are out of place; narrow ribbon and chiffons would be best. For table decoration the foliage of the columbine itself is good and is plentiful, too. Other fern may be substituted or the leaves of the centaurea, dusty miller.

I do not know how the columbine will ship, but for those who have a garden it is a splendid flower. The doubles are very well in the garden, but it is the single columbines that take my fancy as a cut flower.

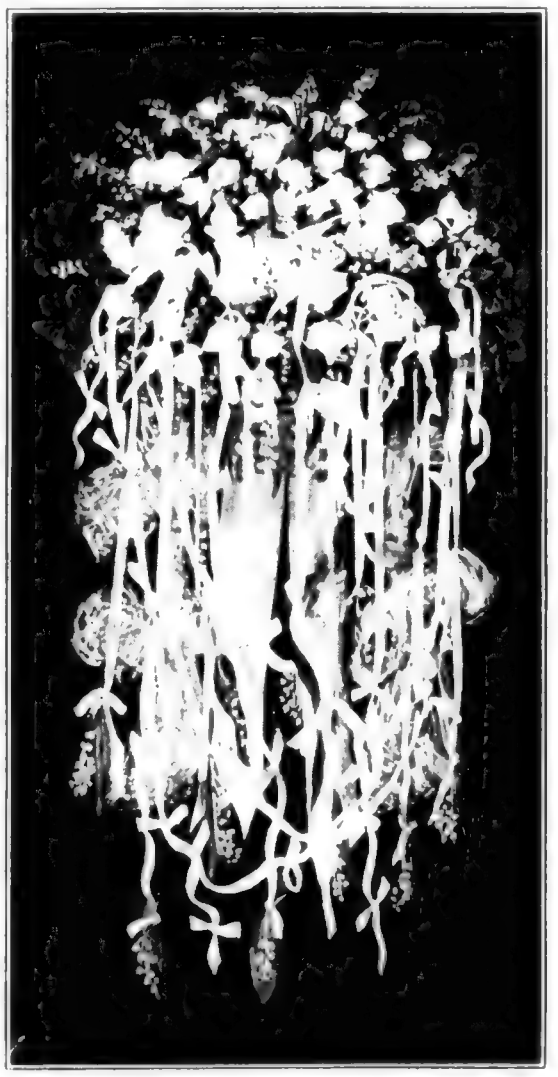
PANSIES.

Will you inform me when pansy seed should be sown and the plants transplanted and how far apart, so as to have the flowers in the early spring? Is it necessary to cover them up for the winter, in Maryland, the same as single violets? What varieties sell best?

E. A. P.



In your state pansy seed should not be sown before the first week in August. You can either winter them in coldframes or outdoors. In your latitude they will be fully as well outdoors. Transplant them when of suitable size, four inches apart in the rows. You can either plant them in beds four feet wide, running the rows in the beds quite closely and cultivating them by hand, or, as some big growers prefer, planting sufficiently wide apart to allow of using horse or hand cultivators. A light covering of straw, hay, leaves or pine needles is better applied, but not until the ground is frozen hard. Trimardeau is probably the best all-around pansy to grow. Several American specialists have strains which are good.

CYANIDE IN SUMMER.

Should potassium cyanide be used for fumigation at this season of the year, when the temperature is high? We were under the impression that it should not be used in a temperature above 60 degrees. J. F. W.

Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas in summer is likely to cause injury to tender growths, unless a cold night is selected for the operation and only a short exposure given. If you have facilities for opening the ventilators from outdoors, we should not be afraid to use it, especially on a cool night. We would syringe the plants well in the fumigated houses early the following morning, to reduce the chances of injury.

Many growers make a practice of using cyanide all the time, and will not use any other fumigant. It is a simple and inexpensive method and certainly no other plan will clear out such pests as mealy bug and white fly, to say nothing of aphis, thrips and scale, as this does.

Some of the plants most easily injured are orchids, on which we would never use it, antirrhinums, tomatoes and cucumbers, but there are always cool nights, even in summer, when its use is safe, provided a weak dose is given and the houses are not left closed all night. C. W.

LEGAL RESPONSIBILITY.

In The Review of recent date an eastern wholesale commission florist reported a case of the repudiation of an order that he thought might interest others who have had similar experiences. A retail florist up state ordered $50 worth of carnations to be sent on a specified train on a Saturday and sent his check for the goods. The express company failed to get them to the customer before Monday. The florist refused the goods and stopped payment on the check. The wholesaler had already deposited it and protest charges were added. He shipped the goods at the exact time specified by the retail florist, making special effort and incurring extra expense to do so. The question was asked: "Who is responsible, and can the wholesaler collect by law?"

The general rule of law is that as soon as the wholesaler has delivered the shipment of stock as ordered to the express company, on the train and time designated, he delivered them to the purchaser and can collect by process of law from the consignee, no matter what the fate of the stock in the hands of the transportation company, which is the buyer's agent and not the agent of the shipper. If the other's breach of the contract directly causes any damages or expense I think he can collect those also. The other party would then have to look to the express company, if it were negligent, for his remedy. But before the wholesaler jumps into any litigation I would advise him to consider carefully whether the amount he might recover in a lawsuit would justify the attorney fees and time spent in court in collecting his money. ROSES TO CARRY OVER.

What roses are best to carry over for another year, own root or grafted? Can American Beauties be carried over a second year? Which rose is the better for greenhouse culture, Bride or Kaiserin? Will it be too late to plant roses in August and have good flowers in December? C. L.

Roses, either on their own roots or grafted stock, can be carried over successfully and profitably if given careful and skillful treatment. Beauties also can be carried over, but it is not a usual practice; the inference therefore is that it is not a profitable method. Kaiserin is simply a good summer rose. Brides are more suitable for winter blooming. August is rather late to secure full crops in December, but still, with good treatment, a fair cut can be obtained. Ribes.

MILDEW ON HELEN GOULD.

I enclose some leaves from a Helen Gould (Balduin) rose that are in a sorry plight, although the bushes have been blooming profusely and other varieties in the same bed are little affected. Please name the trouble and remedy. J. R. D.

The leaves were in a bad condition when they reached me, too much dried up to see what the trouble is. They are, however, affected with mildew, and the remedy for this is sulphur. Choose a bright day and close the ventilators (if the plants are under glass) and give a liberal dusting. This should be done twice a week.

If the plants are outside, choose the early morning, while the foliage is moist with dew, and apply the sulphur or Slugshot. Ribes.

ROSE PRINCETON.

Referring to Rose Princeton, illustrated in The Review of June 23, Stockton & Howe, with whom it originated, say:

"Princeton is a seedling, its parents being Ulrich Brunner and Safrano. The color is rose pink, as near as we can describe it, but it is a quite unusual color, being a true pink, and all blooms being of the same shade winter and summer. The bud is long and graceful and opens into a large flower, which does not fade or fall; it is a remarkably good keeper. Its growth is strong, vigorous and fast, and free, every shoot producing a bud. The stems are long, straight and stiff. We are devoting one large house to this rose, and believe it to be different from any rose grown, and of great promise."

THRIPS.

I should esteem it a great favor if you would advise me how to get rid of thrips on roses and carnations. I have tried fumigating, but to no purpose. The pests get into the buds of both carnations and roses, and disfigure the petals to such an extent that many of them are quite worthless. The foliage, to all appearance, is free from thrips. They seem to work only on the blooms. G. W. R.

Thrips at this season are difficult to destroy or even to hold in check, especially when they have such a foothold. Burnink Cayenne pepper in the houses will, if persisted in, certainly lessen their number. This can be done when fumigating the houses, or at any other time during the afternoon or evening of a cloudy day. For each 1,000 cubic feet of space use one-quarter of a pound of fresh Cayenne and keep the house closed tightly till morning. Repeat twice a week. Keep the walks and underneath the benches clear of weeds and, if possible, burn all the herbage in proximity to the houses. Ribes.

GLADIOLI FOR CHRISTMAS.

When should gladioli be planted to be in bloom at Christmas? I want May and Augusta and others of that class. B. B. C.

Christmas is too early for blooming any gladioli. Such varieties as May and Augusta cannot be bloomed satisfactorily before March. The bulbs of these are not procurable until November and, even if benched at once, it is impossible, of course, to flower them befor late winter. They can be planted in benches and do well in a carnation temperature.

The small flowering gladioli, such as Colvillei The Bride, Peach Blossom, Blushing Bride, Mathilde and others of the nanus type, are procurable two months earlier than May, Augusta and other large flowered sorts and can be profitably grown in flats containing four inches of soil. They will not bloom for Christmas, however; none of the gladioli will tolerate much forcing. It only weakens the stems and spoils them. C. W.

SEASONABLE ORCHID NOTES.

Miltonia Vexillaria.

Miltonia vexillaria is one of the most valuable of summer-flowering orchids. Some orchid collections practically ignore this beautiful orchid, from a mistaken idea that it is hard to grow. Miltonia vexillaria is much easier to grow than such odontoglossums as crispum and Pescatorei. It will stand more heat and shows no ill effects from even our hottest waves, when we can see odontoglossums simply pining away. At this season miltonias are better in a north house, where blinds can be drawn down as shade, and these also help greatly to reduce the temperature in the house. Plenty of air should, however, be given. Closing up the house and constant soakings of the floor may make the house cooler, but it is a bad atmosphere for either man or plant. Now the real summer weather is here and thrips must be guarded against.

Keep the plants only moderately damp at the root while in flower. Any repotting should not be done until the flowering season ends. There is no better potting medium than pure osmunda fern fiber, and pots seem to grow the plants better than pans and baskets. The cool end of the cattleya house, with a minimum temperature of 52 to 55 degrees, suits M. vexillaria in winter. There was a beautiful display of this grand orchid at the late Boston show, and it was noted that many of the critical visitors admired them much more than the larger, showier, but stiffer-looking cattleyas.

Cattleya Harrisoniæ.

With the passing of C. Mossiæ and Mendellii, there is something of a scarcity of summer cattleyas. It is true there are C. gigas and C. Gaskelliana, but too many growers overlook C. Harrisoniæ, sometimes classed as a form of C. Loddigesii, an old orchid but a useful one. The flowers, it is true, lack the size of many of the other cattleyas, but, as from four to a dozen are carried on a sheath and the plant is a vigorous grower and free bloomer, they pay well at half the price of those of the labiata section. The flowers are usually produced during June and July, sometimes as late as August, and are of a pale, pinkish lilac color, the lip being tinged with yellow. Strong bulbs attain a height of twenty-four inches.

The cool end of the cattleya house suits this variety well and it grows equally well in either pots or baskets. One large grower succeeds remarkably well with it by hanging his baskets near the ridge of a long house, where they are close to the light and air and not too heavily shaded, even in summer. For many purposes this cattleya is much superior to the larger flowered ones, and it is worthy the attention of all who have a call for summer cattleyas.

Masdevallias.

Masdevallias are but little seen nowadays, the craze for the big and fancy varieties causing these and other interesting genera to be neglected. While they will never become popular as commercial orchids, they contain some charming subjects, which, when nicely flowered, interest and please all who love orchids. At the present time the various forms of M. Harryana, with their rich colorings, are particularly attractive in the cool orchid house and the flowers have excellent lasting properties, either cut or on the plant. Treatment which suits Odontoglossum crispum answers well for masdevallias. We find they do best in pots and pans, and some sphagnum moss added to the fern fiber seems to their liking, with a few pieces, also, pricked into the surface of the compost.

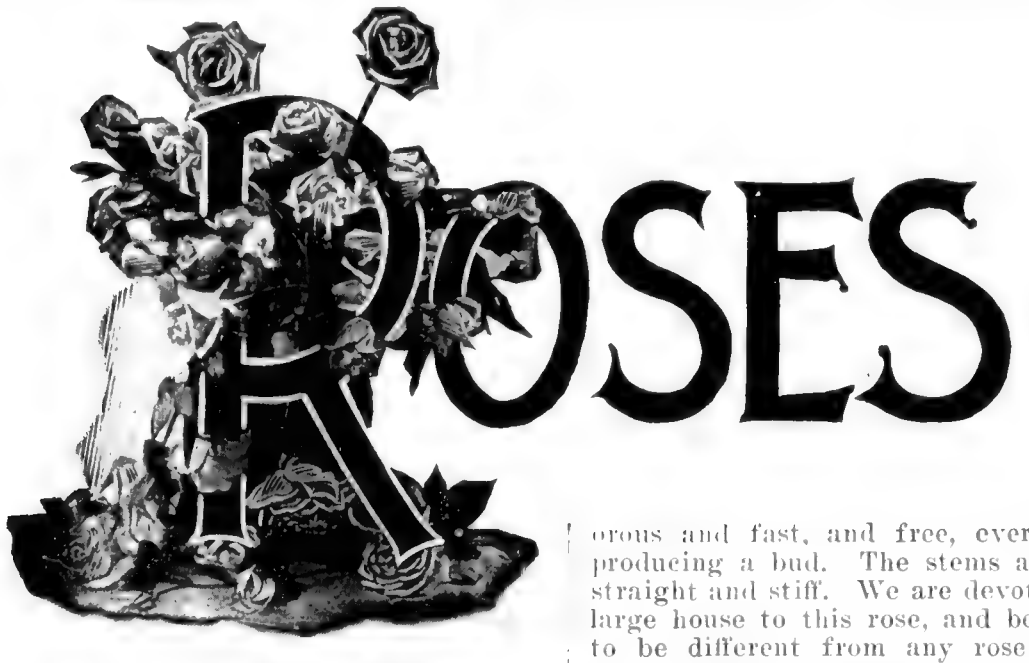
Masdevallias, growing as they do in the cold ravines of the Andes in Peru and Colombia, at elevations of 8,000 to 12,000 feet, do not take kindly to our summer hot waves. From June to September, therefore, they are better grown in a north house or sunk pit, where they can be kept cool and moist and be shaded from the sun's rays. Masdevallias, having no bulbs, are hard orchids to transport from their native habitats to either Europe or the United States, and a large part of them are usually dead on arrival. One of the prettiest table centerpieces we ever saw was a large, beautifully flowered pan of the pure white Colombian species, M. Tovarensis. This variety blooms in midwinter, which makes it useful. Masdevallias are free flowering, and where even a dozen plants are grown there is scarcely a day in the year when they are without flowers.

Dendrobium Phalænopsis.

Dendrobium Phalænopsis, a most useful fall and winter blooming dendrobe, of which the form Schrœderianum is the one most in favor, succeeds best in small pans or baskets. It is a big mistake to give it large receptacles to grow in. The finest pseudo-bulbs we ever saw were produced in 6-inch baskets. The plants are now suspended in a warm, moist house, close to the glass. In common with such sorts as formosum giganteum, nobile and many hybrids, they are freely syringed about the middle of the afternoon and the house closed to create a brisk, moist heat. These growing conditions suit most of the dendrobes, and D. Phalænopsis seems specially to revel in it. For cutting, this is by long odds the finest of all dendrobiums, its long racemose inflorescences carrying as many as fifteen to twenty-five flowers and buds.

CATTLEYA MOSSIÆ ALBA.

There are quite a number of white forms of Cattleya Mossiæ, which vary from such pure white varieties as C. Mossiæ Wagneri, without any color except the yellow of the lips, to the various Reineckianas, which have pure white sepals and petals, but have slate coloring on the lip in some cases and at other times and more frequently an orange disk and rays of violet lines and dots towards the margin. As a general rule, these white cattleyas, beautiful as they undoubtedly are, lack the vigor of the colored ones. The Reineckianas, however, possess considerable vigor and seem to thrive almost as well as the ordinary type.



In new importations of Mossiæ now arriving and purchasable at moderate rates, there is always a likelihood of one or more of these white forms appearing. In the illustration the plant at the extreme left is Wagneri; the others are Reineckianas. A beautiful plant of the latter, carrying eleven handsome flowers, secured for its owner a silver medal for the best specimen cattleya at the recent big orchid show in Boston. W. N. C.

DOUBLE CORNFLOWERS.

Will you inform me as to the best way to grow the double cornflower for early spring? Can it be sown in the fall, as the single varieties are sown outdoors? H. K.

The double cornflower can be treated precisely the same as the single varieties, either by sowing in fall or in early spring. C.

There is no better potting medium than pure osmunda fern fiber, and pots seem to grow the plants better than pans and baskets. The cool end of the cattleya house with a minimum temperature of 52 to 55 degrees, suits M. vexillaria in winter. There was a beautiful display of this grand orchid at the late Boston show, and it was noted that many of the critical visitors admired them much more than the larger, showier, but stiffer looking cattleyas.

Cattleya Harrisoniæ.

With the passing of C. Mossiæ and Mendellii, there is something of a scarcity of summer cattleyas. It is true there are C. gigas and C. Gaskelliana, but too many growers overlook C. Harrisoniæ, sometimes classed as a form of C. Loddigesii, an old orchid but a useful one. The flowers, it is true, lack the size of many of the other cattleyas but, as from four to a dozen are carried on a sheath and the plant is a vigorous grower and free bloomer, they pay well at half the price of those of the labiata section. The flowers are usually produced during June and July, sometimes as late as August, and are of a pale, pinkish lilac color, the lip being tinged with yellow. Strong bulbs attain a height of twenty-four inches.

The cool end of the cattleya house suits this variety well and it grows equally well in either pots or baskets. One large grower succeeds remarkably well with it by hanging his baskets near the ridge of a long house, where they are close to the light and air and not too heavily shaded, even in summer. For many purposes this cattleya is much superior to the larger flowered ones, and it is worthy the attention of all who have a call for summer cattleyas.

Masdevallias.

Masdevallias are but little seen nowadays, the craze for the big and fancy varieties causing these and other interesting genera to be neglected. While they will never become popular as commercial orchids, they contain some charming subjects, which, when nicely flowered, interest and please all who love orchids. At the present time the various forms of M. Harryana, with their rich colorings, are particularly attractive in the cool orchid house and the flowers have excellent lasting properties, either cut or on the plant. Treatment which suits Odontoglossum crispum answers well for masdevallias. We find they do best in pots and pans, and some sphagnum moss added to the fern fiber seems to their liking, with a few pieces, also, pricked into the surface of the compost.

Masdevallias, growing as they do in the cold ravines of the Andes in Peru and Colombia, at elevations of 8,000 to 12,000 feet, do not take kindly to our summer hot waves. From June to September, therefore, they are better grown in a north house or sunk pit, where they can be kept cool and moist and be shaded from the sun's rays. Masdevallias, having no bulbs, are hard orchids to transport from their native habitats to either Europe or the United States, and a large part of them are usually dead on arrival. One of the prettiest table centerpieces we ever saw was a large, beautifully flowered pan of the pure white Colombian species, M. Tovarensis. This variety blooms in midwinter, which makes it useful. Masdevallias are free flowering, and where even a dozen plants are grown there is scarcely a day in the year when they are without flowers.

Dendrobium Phalænopsis.

Dendrobium Phalænopsis, a most useful fall and winter blooming dendrobe, of which the form Schroederianum is the one most in favor, succeeds best in small pans or baskets. It is a big mistake to give it large receptacles to grow in. The finest pseudo-bulbs we ever saw were produced in 6-inch baskets. The plants are now suspended in a warm, moist house, close to the glass. In common with such sorts as formosum giganteum, nobile and many hybrids, they are freely syringed about the middle of the afternoon and the house closed to create a brisk, moist heat. These growing conditions suit most of the dendrobes, and D. Phalænopsis seems specially to revel in it. For cutting, this is by long odds the finest of all dendrobiums, its long racemose inflorescences carrying as many as fifteen to twenty-five flowers and buds.

CATTLEYA MOSSIÆ ALBA.

There are quite a number of white forms of Cattleya Mossiæ, which vary from such pure white varieties as C. Mossiæ Wagneri, without any color except the yellow of the lips, to the various Reineckianas, which have pure white sepals and petals, but have slate coloring on the lip in some cases and at other times and more frequently an orange disk and rays of violet lines and dots towards the margin. As a general rule, these white cattleyas, beautiful as they undoubtedly are, lack the vigor of the colored ones. The Reineckianas, however, possess considerable vigor and seem to thrive almost as well as the ordinary type.

In new importations of Mossiæ now arriving and purchasable at moderate rates, there is always a likelihood of one or more of these white forms appearing. In the illustration the plant at the extreme left is Wagneri; the others are Reineckianas. A beautiful plant of the latter, carrying eleven handsome flowers, secured for its owner a silver medal for the best specimen cattleya at the recent big orchid show in Boston. W. N. C.

DOUBLE CORNFLOWERS.

Will you inform me as to the best way to grow the double cornflower for early spring? Can it be sown in the fall, as the single varieties are sown outdoors? H. K.

The double cornflower can be treated precisely the same as the single varieties, either by sowing in fall or in early spring. C.

Spirit Lake, Ia.—Judson Klein is erecting a good sized greenhouse on his father's farm, east of town.

THE PEOPLE'S FLOWER.

Its Popularity Increases.

Peonies continue to grow in favor each year and there are many reasons why this is so. They are among the hardiest of all herbaceous perennials; once planted, they are good for a number of years, improve in value yearly and rarely fail to give an abundance of flowers; they are comparatively free from the insects and blights that affect nearly every plant grown, whether hardy or tender, and all these qualities make them easily cared for. Given generous ground and a liberal top-dressing each fall, they will yield an abundance of high-grade flowers. Over a large section of the country the peony crop was this year unusually good, thanks to generous rainfalls. Here and there some damage was done to flower buds by late, severe spring frosts. The loss, however, from this cause has not been serious.

Every florist who grows for his own retail trade should grow some peonies; not only the flowers, but the roots can be disposed of. Even today stock of really first-class commercial varieties is none too abundant. No effort should be made to grow a lot of varieties; one or two of each color is far better. The cheapest are in many cases the poorest, and in buying peonies it is far better to pay 50 cents per root for really good sorts, in colors which will sell on sight, rather than roots at a fourth this price, of varieties which may grow luxuriantly, but which no one will want to buy.

Some Good Whites.

Pure white and pink are the two popular selling colors. Rose sells fairly well, and for dark red there is a moderate call only. The purplish shades no one wants at any price. No white variety as yet rivals Festiva maxima in popularity; it has a larger sale than any other peony. The variety Festiva, of dwarfer habit and with smaller flowers, should not be overlooked. Couronne d'Or, with pure white globular flowers and yellow stamens, is a charming variety. The inner petals are not infrequently tipped with crimson. The flowers have a fine odor. Calot's variety of Duchesse de Nemours is one of the finest sulphury whites for commercial use. The flowers are sweet scented. Marie Lemoine, once tried, will always be grown. Its big, pure white flowers are of perfect form. A fine variety is Mme. de Verneville, with the inner petals sometimes flaked with carmine.

Eugene Verdier is one of the grandest of whites of globular form, which no one will make any mistake in buying. Queen Victoria is an inexpensive and deservedly popular sort. The broad guard petals open blush, but change to pure white. This peony ships well and is an excellent commercial variety. Mme. Calot is another lovely pure white, with large guard petals. Mme. Crousse is a good white; the central petals are edged with bright carmine. Mme. de Vatry, pure white, with beautiful blush guard petals; Duke of Wellington, sulphur white, sweet scented, and La Tulipe, snow white, slightly laced with crimson and rose-scented, are all excellent in their color.

Some Fine Pinks.

In soft pinks, which in hot weather will turn almost white if left too long on the plant, Marguerite Gerard has a large, handsome flower, carried on extra strong stems, of a beautiful soft pink shade; Jeanne d'Arc is not a clear pink, being shaded with sulphur yellow and prettily marked with carmine, an excellent and robust growing variety; Mme. Breon is of an exquisite peach blossom color and blooms freely; Mme. Ducel, a beautiful, full flesh flower, with silvery shading, is one of the finest globular pinks in commerce; Albert Crousse, soft, clear blush pink, is extra fine; the old Pottsii alba is really more of a pink than a white, the guard petals being pink and the center blush.

Among the deeper pinks and roses, Bastien Lepage, bright pink, tipped silver, is among the best; Duc de Cazes, blooming in clusters, is of a deep pink shade, the center being salmon; Mme. Lebon has a full, double flower of a clear rose color; the old Humei is a useful late sort, of a brilliant rose color; Duchesse de Nemours (Guerin's variety) is a large petaled deep rose variety, while in Mme. Furtado the deep rose guard petals make a pleasing contrast to the salmon-colored center.

Red peonies do not meet with a heavy sale and should not be grown to any considerable extent. Francois Ortegat, purplish crimson; Marechal Vaillant, deep crimson, and Louis van Houtte, rich purple crimson, are good and inexpensive varieties.

This list does not include some of the newer and higher priced sorts, but all are good, useful market varieties. It is a good plan, while peonies are in bloom, to mark undesirable ones and make a note of good kinds which ought to be bought. Planting is much better done in late summer or early fall than in spring; August 1 to October 1 is a suitable time. Where it is intended to leave the plants growing for a few years, the rows should not be nearer than four feet apart.

HARDY ROADSIDE FERNS.

We have inquiries from time to time for ferns to plant outside that are hardy, such as are found in the roads in this part of Indiana. Can these be obtained from the growers of ferns or can the plants be obtained at all? If so, by what name are they known, as we should be pleased to have something along this line?

M. S. W. C.

Some of the large dealers in ferns also carry various hardy species in stock, and it is highly probable that such stock may be located by writing to some of the growers who advertise in The Review.

Among the many fine, hardy ferns, the following species are particularly attractive: Adiantum pedatum; Aspidium Felix Mas, A, acrostichoides and A. aculeatum; Osmunda regalis and O. Claytoniana; Dicksonia punctilobula, Onoclea sensibilis, some of the aspleniums, and Camptosorus rhizophyllus. The last mentioned is the plant the Indians named the Walking Leaf, from its habit of forming young plants at the tip of its fronds. W. H. T.

ONE-YEAR-OLD TABLE FERNS.

What is the best use to make of one-year-old table ferns during summer? If they are planted in a frame under lath shade and the fronds are cut for design work, could the plants be divided in fall and used to fill fern dishes during the winter?

H. L. V. T.

If the ferns are planted out in a frame for the summer and the fronds are cut for design work, as suggested in this query, the plants will be of no value for filling ferneries the following winter, for divided stock of such species does not make the same compact and shapely growth that is found on seedling plants.

It would probably pay better to pot on the ferns into 4-inch pots and keep them in the frame for the summer, covered with a lath shade, as such stock is found useful by many florists during the winter, either for retailing or in various forms of decoration.

NEPHROLEPIS IN SUMMER.

Where planted in benches, nephrolepis are now making an abundance of nice runners. Give the beds a light surface dressing of well decayed cow manure. It improves the plants wonderfully. Let anyone who labors under the delusion that ferns do not require or appreciate manure try this and be convinced. Nephrolepis should not be heavily shaded. Of course, they want some shade on the glass, but just enough to break the sun's rays, without making the house appear dark on cloudy days.

If you have no spare bench to plant out your nephrolepis in and would still like to do so, try them under coldframe sashes, either plunged or planted out. Many other ferns will also make far better growth there than in the greenhouses. Where adiantums are grown in frames, snails are occasionally troublesome and it is best to scatter some air-slaked lime over the ground and then scratch it over with a fine rake before placing the ferns in it.

NEPHROLEPIS NEUBERTI.

At the spring flower show, which took place at Paris, France, from May 24 to 31, the firm of E. Neubert, Wandsbek, Germany, exhibited for the first time its new introduction of ferns, Nephrolepis Neuberti, a sport from the Nephrolepis Whitmani. This new variety is described as having the same good qualities as Nephrolepis Whitmani, but as being much finer in foliage and as carrying its fronds quite upright. This variety has been tested by E. Neubert for some years and was grown side by side with the most prominent of recent nephrolepis, such as N. magnifica, Amerpohlii, Lycopodoides, Todeaoides, etc., and has proved itself in many respects superior to all these and possessing the best qualities as a commercial fern. It has found the unanimous approval of French gardeners and amateurs and was decorated with a silver medal.

TULIPS NOT FLOWERING.

Under separate cover I am sending you a tulip. Can you tell me why it did not flower? I notice in taking them up that those that did not flower started from the center of the bulb and produced only one large leaf, like the one enclosed. I notice that the flowering bulbs start from the root of the bulb. They were planted in the fall of 1908 and flowered finely last year. This year about twenty per cent flowered.

J. E.

You do not state the variety of tulip which flowered unsatisfactorily. As a general rule, the early flowering section, generally classed as bedding tulips, do poorly if left in the ground a second year. These should always be lifted shortly after flowering, heeled in the ground in a partially shaded spot and later lifted and stored in flats when the tops have matured. If treated thus, a much larger proportion will flower the following season than if left in the ground. Early tulips rarely are as good the second year as the first.

On the other hand, a large proportion of the late flowering Cottage, Darwin and other tulips succeed finely for several years undisturbed, if given a good mulch of rotted manure each fall. These, when lifted, also give much more satisfactory returns than the early sorts a second season. It is difficult to give the precise cause for your bulbs not flowering, but your case is not at all an unusual one.

Julius Roehrs.

JULIUS ROEHRS, SR.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., founder of the firm of Julius Roehrs Co., at Rutherford, N. J., was born in Hamburg, Germany, in 1844. He served three years in the botanical gardens at Kiel, Holstein, and went from that city to Erfurt and Dresden.

In 1865 he came to America, having been appointed head gardener for Mr. Lienan, of Jersey City, who at that time was beginning to form a collection of orchids. In 1868 Mr. Lienan returned to Germany, and his whole collection of orchids and stove plants was sold.

Mr. Roehrs then took over Mr. Lienan's greenhouses and started business as a general florist. He also built some greenhouses on Prospect street, Jersey City Heights, where he grew roses and carnations for his retail trade. He did not remain in the retail business, however, for more than five years. When the Lienan greenhouses were torn down Mr. Roehrs moved entirely to Jersey City Heights, where he made a specialty of growing hybrid perpetual roses under glass. With these he was remarkably successful.

When again compelled to look for a new site, he bought a large tract of land in Rutherford, N. J., and removed his complete establishment to that place, where it is now located. He continued to give his chief attention to the growing of hybrid perpetual roses until the profits in that line were curtailed by the appearance of the American Beauty, which forced the older varieties to take a back seat. At this juncture he began the handling of palms, stove and greenhouse plants, and to his many other varieties of stock he also gradually added orchids.

At present he justly prides himself in having one of the finest and most complete commercial collections of orchids on this continent, occupying a range of fourteen houses.

He married, in 1877, a German lady—Miss Schroeder. He has seven children, five boys and two girls. The two eldest sons, Julius and Edouard, are now associated with him in business.

TO DESTROY MOLES.

We should like to know what is the best poison to kill moles. We are not successful with traps.

E. N.

I have not been successful in destroying moles by poison. I have great faith in the Reddick mole trap. None of the little rodents can pass through this and live. No other mole trap I ever tried at all equals this one. Perhaps some other readers, who are in the habit of fighting these little animals, have had better success in the use of poison and their experiences would be welcome.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cyclamen.

Cyclamen should now get careful attention, for in the coming three months they will either make good plants or be failures. Be certain that they are not allowed to become potbound, or chances of their doing well are much lessened. If, perchance, they do become a little matted, loosen the roots a trifle with a pointed stick before potting them on.

There can be no better place for cylamens between now and the end of September than coldframes, where the plants are close to the light, the glass clear and shade provided by lath coverings, which also keep the plants cooler. Keep the sashes open, both top and bottom, all the time. This is easily arranged by making a temporary wooden framework a few inches above the present level of the sashes and standing the latter on this. This allows a current of fresh air to strike the plants all the time. Keep thrips down by spraying with some nicotine extract once a week. This is better than fumigating.

On cool, cloudy days remove the sashes altogether, also at night, when there is no likelihood of heavy rains. Remember that the plants enjoy light sprayings overhead. This can be done thrice a day during hot weather with advantage.

Palms.

Possibly rains may have washed off considerable of the shading applied to the glass some time ago. Where this has happened, it will be necessary to use some more whitening on the roof, as some palms are quite easily scorched. The stronger the light, the paler colored will be the foliage, and it is the dark green plants which people want. As growth is now tolerably rapid, it assists plants, which have the pots or tubs well filled with roots, if they receive some weak cow manure water once a week. Soot water is also good, both for palms and ferns, making the leaves and fronds a rich green color.

Air freely, now that the days are so warm, and keep plenty of moisture in the atmosphere. A couple of hosings overhead on clear days should also be given. Let these be given with a carefully directed pressure, which will not only help to keep the foliage clear of dirt, but also will assist materially in preventing the spread of scale. Where the latter is troublesome we find an excellent insecticide to be Aphine at the rate of one part to fifteen parts of water. This loosens up the scale so that it will come off when a good pressure from the hose is applied the following day.

Probably you may have your palm house overcrowded, and, rather than let the plants spoil one another, select some of the larger and tougher leaved kinds and stand outdoors well under the shade of trees. Here they will grow well; better, in fact, than under glass. All they need is water, shade and free syringings overhead. They should not be placed where the sun can reach them. Latanias, phœnix and kentias will all do well outdoors treated in this way, and, in addition to palms, many other foliage plants, especially those of large size, are much benefited by being kept outdoors for three months.

Rambler Roses for Forcing.

Rambler roses should now be carrying some long, strong canes if kept in pots under glass, which is the best place for them yet a while. Keep the shoots securely tied up and, in the case of Dorothy Perkins, Hiawatha and other varieties, which send up numerous shoots from the ground, it will be necessary to disbud some of these and restrict the number left on each plant to four or five. Use the hose freely on the plants, so that no red spider can get any foothold, and at the same time do not stand them where drafts will cause mildew to attack them. A month hence these ramblers can be plunged outdoors and their canes securely tied to some light, temporary fence. They are far better adapted for forcing than the plants customarily potted up in the fall.

Bouvardias.

Look over the bouvardia plants in the field. They will now be growing quite rapidly. Keep the shoots well pinched back to give them a bushier habit. On the variety Humboldtii, quite a little flower appears even thus early, and it is a useful subject for bouquet work. It is easy timing this plant so as to have blooms on it outdoors from early in June until October by pinching some plants and allowing others to bloom. These latter soon break again and give a good late summer crop.

Digitalis.

Never were digitalis finer than during the present month, it being no unusual thing to see spikes standing six to seven feet high. If you have not yet sown your seed, lose no time in doing so. This is one of the best hardy plants for perennial borders and shrubberies, also for naturalizing in shady woodlands, and there are many customers who, if they could see a good bed or clump in flower, would want to order plants for another season. The seed is small. Sow thinly and cover lightly. Shade until the seeds appear, which is usually in about a week's time. Then afford full light.

Do not allow the seedlings to become too large or crowded before transplanting them. This latter operation should, of course, be done when the ground is moist and the day overcast. Allow the seedlings nine inches in the rows, as they make remarkable growth in late summer. Digitalis winters out all right if covered with some thin material, just sufficient to exclude light, but not heavy enough when wet to weigh down and rot the plants.

Geraniums

WINTER GERANIUMS.

With pressure of other duties, winter geraniums are liable to be neglected. They should never be allowed to get into a potbound condition until they are in their blooming pots. It is then a benefit to have them well matted, as this checks too luxuriant growth, hardens up the wood and makes them bloom much more profusely than the overpotted ones. Keep all flower trusses picked off. Pinch the tops out of the strongest plants. Do not give them any shade. Spread them out from time to time and let them have all the air possible. Winter geraniums can be grown outdoors during the summer months, but are more under control and do much better in a cool, light, airy greenhouse. Try both plans and be convinced.

NAMES OF GERANIUMS.

I am enclosing a floret of geranium blossoms. The plant is a nice, stocky grower. The color of the bloom seems to be lighter red than S. A. Nutt, and the florets resemble half open roses and the trusses are large and full. Can you tell me the name of this geranium and where I can obtain stock of it? Is there a darker red geranium than this which has florets resembling miniature roses? Also is there a good darker red geranium than S. A. Nutt? L. S.

The flowers forwarded were too much faded for correct identification, but most nearly resemble Alphonse Ricard, which is a bright vermilion scarlet, of ideal habit and a splendid sort either for bedding or pot culture. E. H. Trego is another fine bright scarlet. Colossus is somewhat darker than S. A. Nutt, which, however, remains the most popular dark red today. Colossus is well worthy of a trial. It is of a rich, dark crimson color, trusses big and individual florets of exceptional size. The plants also possess great vigor. Any of the varieties can be procured from geranium specialists advertising in the columns of The Review. C. W.

OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

While the indoor crop of sweet peas is now getting poorer and full of spider, the outdoor plants are yielding an abundance of splendid flowers. As both roses and carnations are now rapidly deteriorating in quality, it behooves us to take good care of the sweet peas, as they are the most generally useful and popular of summer cut flowers. A generous mulch between the rows is of immense benefit, now that we are getting hot, dry weather. Note the color of foliage, height of vines, length of flower stems and general vigor of mulched over unmulched rows. Keep the flowers closely picked and remove seed pods carefully. If these latter are allowed to develop, the vines will speedily decline in vigor.

Sweet peas love moisture at the root. They also enjoy syringings overhead on the evenings of hot days. We prefer to pick the flowers as soon as the dew has gone in the morning. If picked damp on a hot day and placed in a cold room, the chances are that many will spot. If you cannot afford time to mulch your rows, do the next best thing and keep the soil constantly cultivated. Do not be afraid of stirring the soil too much; the more frequently it is done, the better they will grow.

WINTER SWEET PEAS.

Could sweet peas be grown for the winter at a profit in a house 20x100, for out-of-town shipment? If so, what varieties would be best for the market?
A. R.

The most successful greenhouse cultivators of sweet peas find that there is more money in sweet peas coming into bloom from March to July than in such as bloom from October to February. Some growers, however, make them pay as a winter crop. Suitable varieties to grow are: Mont Blanc, Florence Denzer and Watchung, all pure white; Christmas Pink, extra early Blanche Ferry, pink and white; Mrs. Alex. Wallace, lavender. In order to have sweet peas early in November it will be necessary to sow seeds not later than the middle of July. C. W.

ASPARAGUS WITH SWEET PEAS.

Can asparagus be successfully grown in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees, in the same house with sweet peas?
F. D. S.

I presume you refer to the common garden vegetable and not to A. plumosus or A. Sprengeri. A sweet pea house is hardly adapted to asparagus culture. Of course, in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees it will grow, but slowly; 60 to 65 degrees at night would suit it much better. We assume you want to force this asparagus for winter use and would, therefore, advise you to give it a warmer house. Single violets do well with sweet peas. They can be planted between the pea rows and pulled out when the latter shade them too much. C. W.

WEAK GROWTH OF CALLAS.

How long will calla lily bulbs be reliable for winter blooming if thoroughly rested from the beginning of June until the beginning of August? What causes the dried, burnt-like parts of the foliage? My callas this year grew tall and the stems were weak. They are from the same bulbs as I have used for two years previously, but they did not formerly develop such weak stems, flowers and foliage. They bloomed freely, gave fine blooms and seemed thrifty, but during the last month or so they have developed this weakness. They were grown in the same solid bed every year and under the same conditions. They always show the dryness on the edges and other portions of the leaves to a greater or less extent. I fertilized heavily with a barnyard fertlizer, usually well decomposed cattle manure. Are the bulbs useless for further greenhouse use? Shall I secure fresh bulbs? C. D. D.

I have grown calla bulbs for eight to ten years with excellent success. I plan usually to select a number of the strong offsets and grow several of these in 6-inch and 8-inch pots. I plant them outdoors in rich ground in early June, instead of drying them off. They make splendid bulbs outdoors and, if carefully lifted and potted, will flower capitally the following winter. We like to pot, rather than plant directly into the beds or benches. They do better when partially established in pots first.

The reason for the diseased condition of your foliage is hard to tell without any cultural data to judge from. They succeed well in a compost of well decayed cow manure and turfy loam, such as would grow good violets, chrysanthemums or carnations. A common error is to dry them off too suddenly when the flowering season ends. Do this gradually and you will find the tubers are much better.

If your stock is all unsatisfactory, it would be better to make a clean start with new roots. Callas, when well established, like an abundant water supply and liquid manure is beneficial. In using the latter, however, care is necessary. This is powerful and burning in its nature, unless well diluted. The safest plan is to fill a bag with the manure and sink it in a barrel of water. Then apply the liquid, but in a diluted form. C. W.

PLANTS RUNNING TO BUD.

I am writing to you to ask for a little information in regard to my chrysanthemums. I have had them benched a little over a week. They are about eight inches high. All of them, whether early, midseason or late, are throwing buds. I cut them back two eyes and still the buds come. I have never had this trouble before. I am growing the same kind of plants this year as I did last. I have also added five or six of the new mums to my collection, and they are doing the same. There are some kinds that always throw an early bud, but usually, when they are pinched back as I have done, they start off all right. A. D. H.

The trouble spoken of by A. D. H. is a common one at this season of the year. It is caused frequently by the plants having been neglected in the early stages and becoming considerably potbound. This, when the plants are not getting an adequate supply of water, causes the wood to become hard and the consequence is that the plants run into bud, instead of pushing right along as they would have done had they been grown without any check of any kind. Any variety will do this, if abused in the manner described, but some varieties are prone to do it, even under the best of conditions and care.

A. D. H. would have done better if, in place of cutting them back to two eyes, he had simply kept the buds closely pinched off, and in this case the plants would, after a time, have begun to grow. Now that the plants are cut back, he will have to wait for a sucker to appear for his future plants.

Every spring we get crops of complaints of just this character, and a good deal of it is due to climatic conditions, because the weather in the spring is somewhat similar to that in the fall; that is, there is a low temperature at night, sometimes running to freezing, with clear, bright days.

I have had the theory advanced to me that this trouble only comes on Australian varieties, showing that the plants have not yet become acclimated in America, and want to flower in the spring, that being the natural flowering period, the months of April and May, in Australia. This is an untenable theory, because our native American seedlings will do just the same thing, in practically the same way.

All A. D. H. can do is to keep the plants liberally sprayed, not getting the benches too wet, and take up the first shoot that shows any intention of pushing ahead. C. H. Totty.

OUTDOOR DOUBLE VIOLETS.

Are Marie Louise violets hardy in central New York? If not, what double blue violet should I get to give me an outdoor bed that will live from year to year in that latitude? H. D. W.

Marie Louise violets would not winter out in central New York, nor do we know of any other double variety which will do so. Some fifteen or twenty years ago we grew a dark blue, strongly scented violet under the name of double Russian, which proved hardy and gave a heavy crop of flowers in spring. The stems were rather short, but the odor was delicious. We have lost sight of this violet for quite a number of years. Perhaps, however, some other readers may know what it is and where procurable. C. W.

TRIMMING HEDGES.

Hedges of California privet (Ligustrum ovalifolium) or any of the other ligustrums, such as Amurense, Ibota or Regelianum, should now have their first trimming if a good, dense hedge is desired. The first named privet retains its popularity in many states, being handsome of foliage and rapid growing. In the colder states, however, it is not worth planting. It may live out one or two winters, then a cold wave will cut it to the ground. Where minimum temperatures of 10 degrees below zero or lower are recorded, it is a pure waste of time planting this privet, but where zero is the absolute minimum there is no better or more beautiful hedge plant. A pair of common hand shears is all right for trimming and the young growths should be headed in tolerably hard, especially where the hedges have reached the desired height.

Berberis Thunbergii loses much of its beauty when sheared closely. It is better to use a pair of secateurs and merely shorten the longer shoots, unless a stiff, formal hedge is desired. Grown naturally, this is the most beautiful deciduous hedge plant we have. The cratægus or hawthorns will also be better with a trimming now. It helps to thicken them up wonderfully. All these hedges should have a further trimming early in August.

Evergreen hedges, such as hemlock spruce, Norway spruce, American arborvitæ and retinospora, should not be trimmed for some time yet; the end of July is a suitable period.

WHEN IN DOUBT—

Ask The Review.

The Review is glad to answer any questions that pertain to trade affairs.

Q.—I can pick an average of 500 sweet peas a day; my local market does not take them all and I would be glad to know of a reliable firm I could ship them to from Tennessee. Ans.—All winter and in early spring there was a first-class sale for the best sweet peas in most of the wholesale centers, but peas are difficult to ship any distance in shape to compete with local flowers, especially in warm weather. If your local trade will not take them we do not know of any other that will.

Q.—Some time ago we saw an ad that offered goldfish and globes; whose was it? Ans.—Probably the Auburndale Goldfish Co., 920 Randolph street, Chicago, or Henry Bishop, 12 N. Front street, Baltimore. In writing, mention The Review.

Q.—Would it be profitable to grow asters, sweet peas, Shasta daisies, etc., here in Texas for the Chicago market? Ans.—No.

Q.—I saw an ad in The Review of a reducing valve for steam heating, but cannot find it now; please supply address. Ans.—Probably the Hughson Steam Specialty Co., 5021 South State street, Chicago, although less recently the Foster Engineering Co., Newark, N. J., advertised such a valve. In writing, mention The Review.

OBITUARY.

Bernard G. Schramm.

Bernard G. Schramm, junior member of the firm of Schramm Bros., Toledo, O., passed away Friday, June 24, at 3 p. m., after an illness of fifteen hours. Some years ago he resided in Chicago, where he was employed by Wieter Bros. and George Reinberg. For four years he was with Boehringer Bros., of Bay City, Mich., and for the last three years he was a member of the firm which bore his name.

He was born in 1878. He was married two and one-half years ago to a young lady of Bay City. He leaves a wife and two small children. The funeral was held Monday morning, June 27, at St. Mary's church, in Toledo.

J. W. Smith.

J. W. Smith, proprietor of the Marietta Greenhouses, at Marietta, O., died June 12, of tuberculosis, at the age of 35 years. He was cheerful and hopeful till the last and was much esteemed by all who knew him. There was a large attendance at the funeral. The Modern Woodmen, the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias attended in a body, and also presented handsome floral emblems. The services at the grave were conducted by the Odd Fellows. The business will be continued by F. E. Thompson, the present superintendent.

W. J. Nutting.

William James Nutting, senior member of the firm of Nutting & Sons, Ltd., the wholesale seedsmen of Southwark street, London, England, died at Bromley, Kent, June 12, in his eighty-third year.

The firm was founded in 1882 by the father of the deceased, who formed it into a private company in 1909. Mr. Nutting was well known in the English colonies, having traveled for his firm for a considerable number of years. He was formely a member of the fruit and vegetable committee of the Royal Horticultural Society. Until eight years ago he was also a member of the committee of the Gardeners' Royal Benevolent Institution. On retiring from this committee, his place was filled by the election of his nephew, H. W. W. Nutting.

The principal members of the firm are now Whitpaine Nutting, at present a member of the executive committee of the Royal Gardeners' Orphan Fund, and two nephews of the deceased.

Mr. Nutting was always a liberal supporter of benevolent institutions, especially of those connected with horticulture, and he possessed a kindly disposition, that endeared him to all his acquaintances.

Henry Cannell, Jr.

Henry Cannell, Jr., eldest son of Henry Cannell, of the firm of H. Cannell & Sons, at Swanley and Eynesford, Kent, England, died June 12, as the result of blood poisoning caused by a kick from a pony. The young man had sole charge of the clerical work connected with the business, including general office work, the compiling of catalogues and the descriptions of new plants. His wife died seven years ago, leaving one son and one daughter.

Henry Cannell, Sr., has the sincere sympathy of the trade in this affliction. His youngest son, Ernest, died in 1907, and Robert Cannell, of Eynesford, is the only son now surviving.

Greenfield, Mass.—E. A. Richards has no kick coming. He intends branching out to meet the increasing demand.

Lake City, Minn.—The Jewell Nursery Co. has purchased an auto for the use of its representative at the Twin Cities.

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Woodstock, Vt.—F. S. Mackenzie and his greenhouse man, John Morris, attended the great orchid show at Boston.

Southington, Conn.—Olson & Lunden have sold their Buckland street greenhouses to William Fischer.

Fulton, Ill.—The greenhouses now conducted here by Hills Bros. & Kirman are among the largest in this vicinity.

Dows, Ia.—Shaffer & Larson, who have been handling plants and nursery stock for some years, are now building a greenhouse.

North Abington, Mass.—Wm. H. Records, foreman at the Bay State Nurseries, and Miss Rosalie Hastings were married recently at the home of the bride, in Berlin, Md.

North Adams, Mass.—August Schmutz is a specialist on standard grown geraniums, fuchsias, heliotropes and lantanas. Many specimens find their way to the fine Lenox gardens, at from $3.50 to $5 each.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—William Wilson and D. E. Law, who for some months have been the owners and managers of the Salt Lake Floral Co., at 1950 State street, have dissolved partnership. The business will be continued by Mr. Wilson.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Much good work was done by Baur & Smith and by E. A. Nelson in preparing the grounds for this season's opening of the Summer Mission for Sick Children. Numerous flower boxes were placed and filled and the grounds were completely transformed. Both firms contributed their services and the plants used.

Missoula, Mont.—Chas. F. Dallman, of the Missoula Nursery Co., is erecting greenhouses which will double his area of glass. The additions include a rose house. New boilers have been installed and the work of construction is of a most substantial nature, including concrete benches. Mr. Dallman expresses the hope that these enlarged facilities will enable him to meet the increasing demand.

Great Neck, N. Y.—Warren H. Manning, Boston landscape gardener, has been engaged by G. L. Stone, also of that city, to lay out Mr. Stone's newly acquired estate out here. Mr. Stone is a banker and broker, and a member of the firm of Hayden & Stone. His plans for the improvement of the Great Neck property are magnificent in their scope. H. C. Flint has been appointed superintendent of the estate and charged with the responsibility of carrying out Mr. Manning's plans.

South Braintree, Mass.—Edward T. Newcomb has had first-class business so far this season.

Allentown, Pa.—John H. Sykes, at Tenth and Wyoming streets, is planning to build another greenhouse.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—F. L. Tornquist has had an excellent spring season and is figuring on adding to his glass during the summer.

Rome, N. Y.—Mothers' day was quite generally observed in this city, and there was a large increase in the sale of flowers, especially white carnations.

Dubuque, Ia.—W. A. Harkett, at Ninth and Main streets, has one of the best arranged and furnished stores to be found in cities of equal size and has had a fine spring business. June has been especially good.

Wallingford, Conn.—The Rowden & Mitchell Co. has invested in a horseless machine and claims that, as an advertisement alone, it has already paid for itself. They are spreading out, but do not expect to put up more glass this season.

Petersburg, Va.—The Arrowfield Nursery Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $2,500 to $25,000, for the purpose of carrying on a florists' business. W. N. Roper is president; Edith M. Hutt, vice-president; W. N. Hutt, secretary and treasurer.

Orange, N. J.—The New Jersey Floricultural Society has issued the premium list for its fifth annual dahlia show, to be held at Lindsley ham, on Main street, in this city, October 1. The officers of the society are: President, Albert F. Larson; vice-president, Dietrich Kindsgral; secretary, Wm. Reid, 363 Center street, Orange, N. J.; treasurer, Walter Gray.

Albion, Mich.—H. F. Dew has developed and placed on the market a strawberry which he believes to be the largest, most luscious, and in every way the nearest to perfection in the whole strawberry list, and he has appropriately named it the Dewdrop. In his efforts to evolve this ideal product his first encouraging result, he says, was a fruit which had the desirable size but lacked the requisite fragrance and flavor. In order to obtain these qualities, he found a wild berry which undoubtedly possessed them, and with this wild fruit he fertilized the old stock. Then, after a series of careful annual selections during a period of seven years, his experiments culminated in the Dewdrop, concerning which, it is said, he has just reason to be enthusiastic.

Seattle, Wash.—Sam Graff is visiting at his former home in Chicago.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—W. J. & M. S. Vesey are planning to go rather extensively into the growing of orchids for cutting.

Chicopee Falls, Mass.—Frank Burfitt has put in a busy time planting by day and making design work at night. His side partner is a clever artist.

Tyrone, Pa.—Wm. H. Brause is building another greenhouse this summer. He had a heavy spring trade, which cleaned out all available stock.

Kensington, P. E. I.—A. W. Gardiner, formerly in business as a grower and importer at Springfield, Mass., has removed to this place.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Buffalo Cement Co. will add one iron-frame house, 30x120 feet, to its present range at Main and Amherst streets. The King Construction Co. will furnish the material.

Rochester, N. Y.—Ellwanger & Barry invited the public to inspect their grounds during the peony season and again while the roses were in bloom, with the result that they had large numbers of visitors and received a fine write-up in one of the local papers.

Hartford, Conn.—John Coombs says the demand for bedding stock was phenomenal this season. S. A. Nutt is the most popular geranium; everyone wanted red. His stock looks fine. That $10,000 carnation house has paid a big interest, although the first crop was ruined by gas. Aphine will be used in its place.

Melrose, Mass.—The annual rose show of the Melrose Horticultural and Improvement Society, which was held June 19 in Hawthorne hall, proved so great a success that it was decided to continue it on the following day and to throw the doors open to the public. This was done and the attendance surpassed anything in the history of the organization. All of the exhibitors were amateurs.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Salt Lake Floral Co. has been sending in unusually heavy cuts of roses, carnations and peonies and the quality has been fine. Judging from the number of houses now being built and projected here, it seems quite likely that this city will soon be shipping roses to Denver and even to more distant markets. The demand for flowers here and in neighboring towns, for school graduations and other purposes, has been heavy and the retailers are well satisfied with results.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE president of the French republic has conferred upon M. Auguste Nonin the cross of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his services to French horticulture. M. Nonin is known throughout the world as the raiser of many good chrysanthemums.

GREENHOUSE property is much easier to sell now than it will be later, when the price must include the value of the summer's work and the stock planted for next season's crops. The Want Ad department of The Review brings buyers and sellers together.

IT is the custom of many firms in the trade to print their terms of sale on the top, bottom, or even on the back of letter-heads, but it has been well established in law that no part of that which may be on a letter-head is a part of a contract of sale except that part which appears between the date line and the signature, unless it be specially referred to in the body of the letter and thus brought practically within the letter itself.

PETER BARR MEMORIAL FUND.

As chronicled in The Review some months ago, the members of the narcissus and floral committee of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, formed themselves into a general committee for the purpose of raising a fund to perpetuate the name of Peter Barr, and for the purpose of suitable recognition of his life work. Several men well known in the trade, not only in England but around the world, are members of the committee, but it transpires that, to quote from a letter from one of them, "the appeal has not been so well responded to as the promoters of this scheme could wish." Personal appeals for contributions from America have now been sent out and several who have received such have interested themselves to the extent of sending out letters to the press, among these being David Fairchild and Peter Bisset, of the division of seed and plant introduction, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The treasurer of the Peter Barr Memorial Fund is H. B. May, Stanmore, Chingford, England. The committee as constituted has, of course, no American members, but those who wish to assist the fund, unless they wish to address the treasurer direct, doubtless will find either Mr. Fairchild or Mr. Bisset glad to receive and forward contributions.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the rose, Red Killarney, by A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., becomes complete.

H. B. Dorner, Sec'y.

June 23, 1910.

WARNING!

Don't Pay Money to Strangers.

The latest subscription swindler is reported from Toledo, O., where he took subscriptions for The Review at cut rates. Of course such subscriptions never are turned in to the publishers—and would not be accepted if they were—positively no one is authorized to offer The Review at less than the regular subscription price.

Don't be duped by these petty swindlers. Never pay money to strangers for The Review or on any other account. Review representatives all are well known members of the trade in their respective localities.

THE GLASS MARKET.

Glass factories are now pretty much shut down for the usual period of summer inactivity, and stocks on hand, particularly of greenhouse sizes, are extremely low. There is, however, little fear of any considerable rise in prices between now and the resumption of production, partly because the larger requirements are by now pretty well filled, but also because prices are already about all that the traffic will bear. Within the last week 16x18 d. s. a. has sold at Chicago in 100-box lots at $4.15, and 16x24 at $4.55, or rather more than double the low prices of two years ago. And yet, with glass 7 to 9 cents per square foot, more of it has been sold for greenhouse use than in any previous season.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The glut has passed. The principal difficulties wholesalers now experience arise from so great a proportion of the stock being below the grade required for shipping orders.

Quite in keeping with the experience of other years, no great length of time was required for the extreme heat and low prices to set the growers busily at work throwing out old stock and preparing for the new season. For this reason the receipts of roses are greatly reduced, and the same may be said of carnations. There continue to be adequate supplies of roses, in spite of the reduction in quantity, but it is characteristic summer stock and it is by no means easy to fill orders. An immense amount of sorting is required, and even then the wholesalers find themselves under the necessity of doing a good deal of running around the market to fill their orders. The result is that anything which can be classed as good stock has a real value. All roses are bringing better prices than in the last few weeks. A large proportion of the stock is from young plants. Killarney and Kaiserin are the best varieties. Kaiserin never was finer.

A good many growers have ceased cutting carnations, at least from a part of their places, and are beginning the work of clearing the houses for replanting. It is said that plants in the field have generally made excellent growth, and early replanting is in order to get a good start for fall. The carnations now coming in are as good as could be expected at this date and in such warm weather. The demand is not extensive.

Sweet peas also are of the summer type. Indoor flowers still are seen, but the majority now come from outside. Neither quality, demand nor price is what it was a week or so ago.

Arrivals of peonies have ceased. It is said that the quantity in storage is less than it usually is at this date. There is great variation in the quality of stock. Some exceptionally fine peonies are coming out of storage, selling readily at 75 cents to $1 per bunch, but there are others that are extremely slow sale at 35 cents per bunch.

The demand for the wedding flowers has subsided and valley once more is accumulating on wholesalers' hands. Gladioli are abundant, many of them of excellent quality, and meeting with fair sale. A few outdoor asters are coming in. Candidums from Michigan have glutted the market the last few days. Easter lilies are abundant, but slow sale. Coreopsis and gaillardia are plentiful. Water lilies figure in the retailers' windows.

Last week was dull and grew duller as the week progressed, until Friday and Saturday, when receipts were sharply cut down and demand took a spurt. Many wholesalers say they were more closely cleaned up Saturday night than at any time in the last three weeks. They now are looking for a steady run of summer business. Shipping orders are fairly numerous, but not large.

Out-of-town buyers should recall that beginning July 1 all the wholesale houses will aim to close promptly at 5 p. m. It is a simple measure of safety to send orders early.

Various Notes.

The market has lost another of its oldest frequenters and well known characters—"Darby" is dead. As far back as the oldest remember, he was a frequenter of the wholesale houses, doing odd jobs for wholesalers or retailers as opportunity presented. Of late he had made his headquarters with Weiland & Risch, assisting them as they needed his services. Taking his money Saturday night, he started for the lodging house at which he lived. Crossing the street at Wabash avenue and Harrison street, he was struck by an electric car and died within a few moments. H. W. Rogers, of Weiland & Risch, was one of those who identified the remains. There was some difficulty in ascertaining his real name, which appears to have been George R. Wheeldon. He is supposed to have a brother somewhere in Texas, whom the police are trying to notify. Once before Darby was hit by a street car; that time he spent several months in the County hospital.

Wietor Bros. completed replanting their Beauty range early this week and are nearly through replanting the roses.

C. W. McKellar, Mrs. McKellar and guests spent the week-end motoring to Lake Geneva, returning June 28.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he believes this will be one of the summers when good flowers will be scarce and in active demand.

A. L. Randall was on his Michigan farm from Saturday to Wednesday.

C. L. Washburn advocates closing all the wholesale houses on Sunday during July and August. He says replanting carnations will begin at Bassett & Washburn's July 5.

C. M. Dickinson is one of the committee which is preparing an old-time Fourth of July celebration at Park Ridge.

Kyle & Foerster say there is a fine sale for the best peonies, but that hardly anyone wants the low grades.

J. H. McNeilly is doing a fine business at his new store on Sixty-third street.

P. F. Scarry died at the home of his daughter, 1143 South Home avenue, Oak Park, Ill., after a long illness with tuberculosis. He had been confined to his bed for two years. For more than twenty years Mr. Scarry had been a gardener in the employ of the west parks system in Chicago.

The E. F. Winterson Co. received several hundreds of outdoor asters June 27, probably the first to reach this market. They came from southern Illinois.

Harold Burling is calling on greenhouse owners in the interest of the Martin Grate Co. He is the son of W. S. Burling, president of the grate concern.

W. H. Hilton, after his long illness and recuperative trip to Alabama, looks well and says he feels as strong as ever.

Emil Buettner is putting in this season two new return tube steam boilers, which are being manufactured for him by Kroeschell Bros. Co. He uses the Martin rocking grate.

C. A. Samuelson has had an exceptionally good June, an unusual number of wedding jobs having come to him. His largest for the season, and probably the largest in Chicago this month, was the Harris wedding at Lake Geneva last week. Mr. Samuelson and three men went out in an automobile.

Charles Klehm is spending his time in the market these days, giving personal attention to the peonies which Klehm's Nursery has in storage. The quantity is not as large as usual, because of the frost injury in April. They did not cut and store anything but the best, and Mr. Klehm says he considers the prospect excellent for a good clean-up on really first-class peonies.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. has been trying the Garland cement benches since last September, at which time they planted 6,000 White Enchantress and 2,000 White Perfection. They found that the plants in the cement benches gave better and larger blooms and in considerably larger numbers than the plants on wooden benches. They say that the results greatly exceeded their expectations; that better drainage was obtained and that the cement benches were absolutely free from the bugs and insects that infest old wooden benches. Eventually the Des Plaines Floral Co. expects to put the Garland cement benches throughout the entire range.

Tim Matchen made a trip through the Peter Reinberg home range one evening this week. All the roses are Vaughan & Sperry say business still is better than at the same date last year.

Henry Van Gelder reports that the Percy Jones business practically doubled in the latter half of the year just ending.

Louis Bauscher, of the Freeport Floral Co., Freeport, Ill., was in town this week, buying greenhouse material.

Samuel Murray, of Kansas City, has secured larger quarters at 913 Grand avenue and has been in Chicago the last few days purchasing suitable store fixtures, ice-boxes, etc. Mr. Murray reports a splendid trade in cut flowers and bedding plants this spring.

F. L. Tornquist and wife, Benton Harbor, Mich., were in town last week, getting prices on greenhouse material.

P. M. Obertin, of Kenosha, Wis., was in town June 27. He reports an excellent season in bedding plants, both wholesale and retail.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is dull. The wholesale houses have an oversupply of all kinds of stock. As a consequence, prices are still low. Nothing in the immediate future is apparent to help clean up the market.

Roses, owing to drying down and rehousing, are not as plentiful as before and the quality is not what it was. My Maryland and Beauties are the exception. They are holding up well. The demand last week inclined toward pink. The carnations are in large oversupply and some are somewhat off in color. The longiflorums, valley and Shasta daisies offered are exceptional in quality. Owing to the extremely hot, dry weather of the last fortnight, the stems on the sweet peas, though still long enough to work up easily, are not nearly what they were. Feverfews are also overabundant. Queen of the Market and Comet asters are offered. The supply of decorative greens is sufficient to meet all demands.

Florists' Outing.

The outing committee of the Florists' Society held a meeting at William Murphy's June 27. The following tentative plan was agreed upon: The outing will be held at the Country Club, Carthage, O., July 21. This place is very accessible, for there is car service on the Lockland and Glendale cars about every eight minutes to the grounds.

The program is as follows: 10 a. m., boys' ball game; 11 a. m. to 12 m., boys' foot races (classes whose age limits are 12 or under, 12 to 15 and 15 to 19), and girls' foot race; 1:30 to 3 p. m., fat men's race, tug of war for ladies, sack race for boys, fat ladies' race, men's foot race (open to all), tug of war for men, egg race for ladies; 3 p. m., ball game, throwing baseball for distance, diving, swimming, shooting and contest for most graceful couple in waltz. The shooting contest will close at 4 p. m. and the best scores in any round of twelve shots will count. No limit is placed to the number of rounds anyone may shoot.

The members of the committee will personally take charge or the following: Baseball, Frank Dellar; shooting, William Murphy; field sports, C. E. Critchell; aquatic events, Gus Adrian; dancing, Max Rudolph.

E. G. Gillett and Ben George were judges, June 28, to view the lawns in Hyde Park, to decide which ones are entitled to the prizes offered by the Hyde Park Business Men's Club for the best kept lawns. Each lawn is given a percentage, and those having the highest average, after subsequent inspections in July and August, receive the prizes.

J. A. Peterson and Clarence Peterson have left on business trips. Mr. Peterson will cover the territory from Detroit west to Minnesota, while his son will take in the cities from here to Chicago and then the lower Great Lakes region. The Market.

People in this vicinity, from the first part of June till this week, were crying about the cold and rain. Now they are crying for a shower and cooler weather, as the thermometer has been registering in the nineties for a week. Business, however, has stood the test pretty well and there is not much to complain of, unless the grower thinks he has a kick coming because all of the stock which is being forced in is not sold. But it cannot be sold, for the reason that the quantities of stock coming in are so great that without street fakers there could be no possible outlet for it, and our city will not stand street hawking. All of the men who have street stands must stay inside of the property line and pay a rent for the stands which is out of all reason in comparison with other stores.

Plantsmen report this to have been one of the best seasons for several years. Most of them are cleaned up on everything. However, from their own reports, there has been considerable cutting of prices.

Notwithstanding the great heat, there are some fine roses, such as Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, still coming in, and Kaiserins are getting better every day.

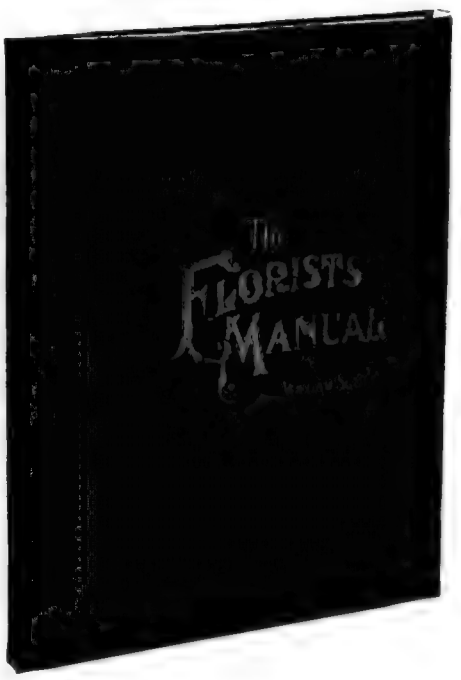
We did not have the usual number of large June weddings this year, and this would make one wonder why the cut flower business was greater than for several years. Possibly the fact that stock was so much better than usual had something to do with it.

Quantities of sweet peas that came into this market last week were undoubtedly fine when shipped, but were literally cooked when they came into the market.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. C. Ludwig, who has been in the hospital for some weeks, was able to be taken home last Friday and, although she has not entirely recovered, her many friends among the trade will be pleased to know that her speedy recovery is anticipated.

Monday, June 27, was official outing day for the Florists' Club and quite a number participated. They visited the Elliott Nurseries, at Cheswick, Pa.



Gus A. Geng, of Youngstown, O., has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade on account of the loss of his wife, Mrs. Geng, who died Monday, June 20, and was buried Thursday.

Mr. Kent, of Kent Bros., Newark, O., was a visitor last week. Mr. Kent, while not a boy by any means, is quite a baseball fan and took in the Pittsburg-Chicago game while here. Such things help some of the old fellows to keep young.

The new electric line, which will come into Pittsburg over the Wabash tracks, will reach some of the florists, and will undoubtedly increase the value of the farms of Godwin & Sons, Bridgeville; M. C. Dunlevy & Sons and Chas. K. Hoffmeyer, Carnegie, Pa. This property will all be within a few minutes' ride of the downtown portion of the city.

By way of correction: The statement was made in this column that the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. had a bursted ammonia tank; this should have read "the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange."

Mrs. E. A. Williams had several fine decorations at the horse show at Sewickley last week. Hoo-Hoo.

The Market.

Last week's business was fairly good with some of the larger establishments, as there were several big funerals which used up a good deal of stock, and there was surely enough of it in the market for almost any size of order, with prices low, even on first grade stock. The lower grades are nearly all being dumped. The great glut of carnations and sweet peas all of last week kept the market in a deplorable condition. All roses are coming in bad, as the hot weather had a telling effect on them. Gladioli clean up well. There is hardly any sale for outdoor stock; only the few asters that come in sell well. There is plenty of all kinds of greens in the market.

Various Notes.

J. H. Dayton, of the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., and Thomas Meehan, of Thomas Meehan & Sons, Philadelphia, Pa., spent a day in the city while returning from Denver, where they attended the nurserymen's convention. While here they were taken in hand by Frank Weber and made comfortable until train time. Both expressed much pleasure in being able to come to St. Louis next June for the nurserymen's convention.

wood, says that they are putting the finishing touches on their four new houses. The entire output of this plant will be handled by C. A. Kuehn.

Charles Beyer is contemplating a change of front on his salesroom, facing Grand avenue; also other needed alterations. Carl Beyer reports that if the work shapes itself so as to get away, he and Mrs. Beyer will attend the S. A. F. convention at Rochester.

The De Wever bulletin committee of the Florists' Club met at J. F. Ammann's place in Edwardsville Thursday, June 22, to prepare a report for the next club meeting. Those who attended the meeting were: C. De Wever, G. B. Windler, W. C. Smith, J. F. Ammann and E. W. Guy. Mr. Connon and J. J. Beneke, of this committee, were unable to make the trip, owing to previous business engagements. After the meeting Mr. Ammann entertained his guests with an automobile ride through the city. The issuing of the bulletin now will depend on the vote of the members at the July meeting of the club.

W. P. Stark, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, has appointed Frank Weber chairman of the entertainment committee and J. W. Schuette chairman of the committee on exhibits for next year's convention. Both Mr. Weber and Mr. Schuette have returned from the convention, and say they had a great time and were finely entertained by the Denver florists, headed by Ex-President Valentine, of the S. A. F. Messrs. Weber and Schuette will have the assistance of the members of the local Florists' Club in entertaining the nurserymen at next year's convention.

It has been rumored about town that a new wholesale supply house on a cooperative plan, with profits divided pro rata, will be organized. If the plan goes through the new concern will open early in the fall.

Ernest Hentschel, of Webster Groves, left Saturday, June 25, for New York city. He will sail next week for a trip to Germany. He says he will return early in September.

Kalisch Bros. will this summer put their place in shape to grow only orchids for the local trade. Their first attempt last year was successful. They say they will double their amount of plants for the coming season.

The Diemer Floral Co., at South Broadway, made a large floral bridge, eight feet long, last week for the bridgeworkers' union, who lost a fellow member. The design was neatly executed by Mrs. Diemer.

There were great quantities of sweet peas consigned to this market from Kirkwood last week. It was estimated that the growers combined sent in from 50,000 to 100,000 daily. The wholesalers say that a great many of them went to waste for want of demand; not that the price was high, as the best long-stemmed ones sold as low as $5 for 5,000 and short-stemmed ones lower than that.

The trustees of the Florists' Club are hard at work preparing for the picnic at Ramona park. An effort will be made to close all the retail stores for that day. The wholesalers always do. The trustees wish it understood that all florists, with their families, employees and those connected with the trade, are invited to attend. The Florists' Club manages the affair and pays all expenses. The date is Thursday, July 21.

The sympathy of the trade was extended to August Eggert, of East St. Louis, his sister, who recently came from Germany, having died last week. Sympathy was also extended to Robert Grebe, of Clayton, whose wife died last week. Both funerals took place Sunday, June 26.

James Arata and Walter Young, of C. Young & Sons Co., are off for a week's fishing trip. As both are great fishermen, the employees expect a fish-fry on their return.

A. W. Schisler, F. S. Plant and Adolph Corneli, the local delegation of seedsmen who attended the meeting of the American Seed Trade Association held at Atlantic City last week, have returned home much pleased and say they had a great time.

The Florists' Club will hold an important meeting Thursday afternoon, July 14, at 2 o'clock. The most important matters are the nomination of officers, the final vote on the bulletin and the report for the picnic. A feature will be a paper by Luther Armstrong on "What the Club Was Organized For." Mr. Armstrong was the club's first secretary twenty-three years ago. A large attendance is looked for at this meeting. J. J. B.

What to Buy

In certain lines we can offer you some very good stock, and it is advisable to recommend to your trade that which will give satisfaction. The effects of the warm weather are already noticeable on stock in general, but there is always something to be had, which in spite of unfavorable conditions will make a good showing. We can recommend to you for this week:

LILIES

$12.50 per 100.

Extra fine long stem stock, clean foliage, two to four flowers to a stem, nearly all open flowers. Here is an article that will give satisfaction.

VALLEY

$3.00 and $4.00 per 100.

At the price as good as any Valley coming to this market. We will have it just in the proper condition for shipping. You could hardly improve on our method of packing it.

ROSES

We still have some Beauties of fairly good quality. In pink we can offer you very fine Maryland, none better to be had here. Richmond has held up well for so late in the season. In white roses we can furnish fine Kaiserins and good Brides. We have a splendid supply of roses, and we can please you in that direction.

CATTLEYAS,

WINSOR CARNATION CUTTINGS.

3-inch pots, $35.00 per 1000.

Nice strong plants, with several breaks. Ready for planting now on your benches. This variety should be grown inside. Planted now, will give splendid results.

ROSE PLANTS

Ready for Delivery.

BRIDES, 3-inch pots, $6.00 per 100

MAIDS, 3½-inch pots, $7.00 per 100

RICHMONDS, 3-inch pots, $6.00 per 100

We guarantee satisfaction.

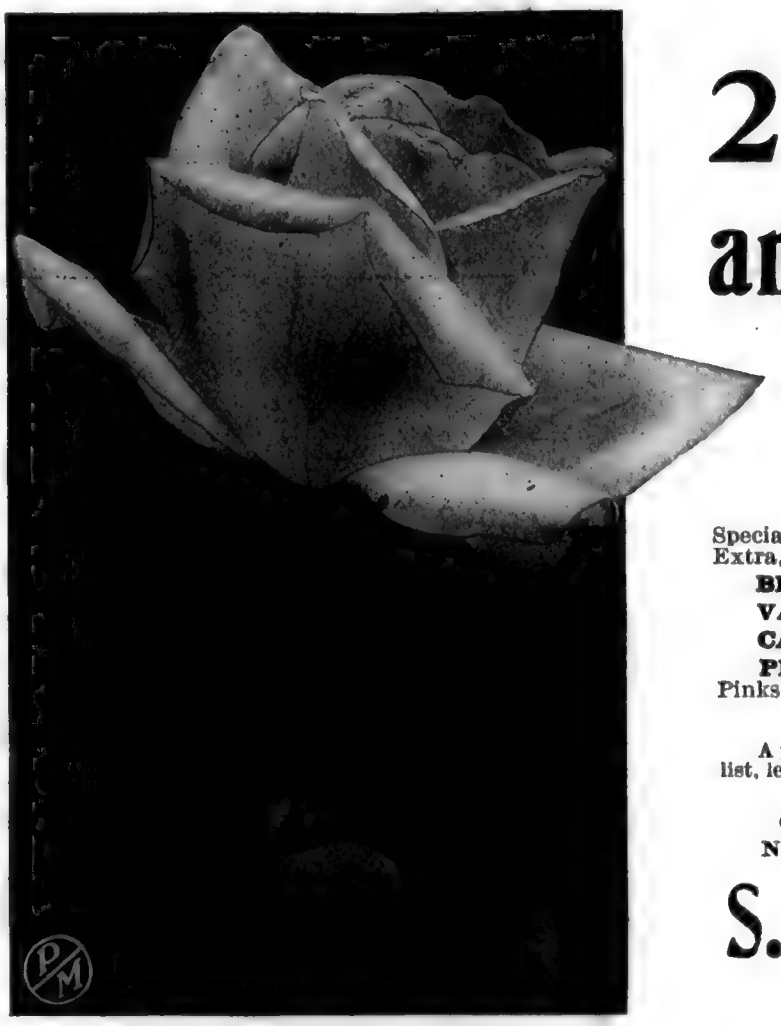
PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The last days of June have brought a falling off in business, indicative of summer quiet. There are still some special festive affairs requiring flowers, but the regular flower buyers are away and transient demand is light. There is a moderate amount of shipping, both of the finer flowers and of those used in decorative work, but the volume of business is unmistakably smaller than a week ago.



An expert judge of the market estimates that about three times as many roses are arriving as in the end of June a year ago, due, it may be, to the cool weather that preceded last week's torrid wave. They are falling off rapidly now, but not so rapidly as carnations. The divine flower stands heat poorly. Only the finest stock is now fit for shipping. Valley has been in better demand than almost anything else. Experience has taught the growers to reduce their output at this season. Sweet peas are at their height, the stock is getting better and the prices poorer. Easter lilies are a trifle less plentiful, demand only moderate. There are some nice gladioli, notably America, and Iris Kæmpferi, prized for decorative effects. Centaurea imperialis has reinforced this group, with its showy flowers of canary yellow, white and lavender. There are quite a lot of outdoor flowers in the minor key, so to speak, usable chiefly in design work; the normal condition of this group, composed of candytuft, feverfew, achillea and double petunias is that of moderate popularity, part selling at low prices. Greens are in fair demand; when there is business quality tells now as always.

The Waretown R. and G. C.

Commodore John Westcott opened the season at Waretown, on Barnegat Bay, Friday, June 24, and following days. The Commodore's guests were George Anderson, H. B. Beatty, Oil City, Pa.; John Burton, J. William Colflesh, George Craig, Robert Craig, James Dean, Long Island, N. Y.; D. C. Donohue, C. F. Eimerman, John K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston; Robert Kift, Dr. Lane, John N. May, Summit, N. J.; David Rust, W. J. Stewart, Boston, and G. C. Watson. Twelve of the visitors went down by train, three, Messrs. G. Craig, Donohue and Watson, with Mr. Burton in his car, arriving a few minutes after the larger party. The Commodore extended a hearty welcome, making the visit delightful for everyone. There was a great entertainment on Saturday evening, when Mr. Beatty's gift was discussed and with it the subject of irrigation. Robert Craig presented the host with a cellaret on behalf of those present; Mr. Stewart made one of his happy speeches. Mr. Farquhar extended a hearty invitation to come to Boston in 1911 for the national show. Mr. Westcott said that was all right, but they must first go to Rochester in August, then to Boston. The party had a fine sail down the bay, but the fish had a wireless they were coming and skipped, but that didn't matter, as it was good fun anyway. Later there was another sail up the bay to Harvey Cedars. Mr. Burton brought the Bostonians back in his car. The others came up at different times, each man staying just as long as he could, and all voting the opening a great success.

The Florists' Club.

5. Mr. Manda's subject will be "Should We Consider Our Calling a Trade or a Profession?" The essay committee hopes that you will come and help settle this once for all. It is a difficult question; the authorities are evenly divided. Charles E. Meehan positively states that it is a trade. W. E. McKissick concurs. It is rumored that H. H. Battles feels that this is but a limited view of the situation, while David Feurstenberg, Adolph Farenwald and Phil have all come out strongly on the other side. Be sure to come and give your views.

Mr. Edmunds' Remarks.

Henry R. Edmunds, president of the board of education, made some remarks from the stage of the Academy of Music during the commencement exercises that stirred quite a little breeze. Mr. Edmunds is reported to have said that he was told the florists had formed a flower trust in order to charge the girls excessive prices for their flowers, some of them having even paid, Mr. Edmunds said, $2 apiece for the Beauty roses. He concluded by assuring his hearers that this would be investigated. A reporter for the evening paper that published this statement then called at the Sign of the Rose, where he interviewed a representative of Charles Henry Fox; also at the office of Pennock Bros., where he saw a member of the firm, and at Robert Kift's. At all three places the idea of a flower trust was ridiculed. The figures, too, were contradicted, Pennock Bros. asserting that $2 apiece was a Christmas price only for the finest Beauties, while all agreed that $5 to $7.50 a dozen was the price for the best Beauties, with many selling at $1.50 to $3 a dozen.

The absurdity of the report is far more apparent to the initiated than to the general public, who are, alas, too apt to believe that flowers are expensive when they want them.

The selection of the regal American Beauty rose by the graduating class of the high school is really responsible for the commotion. Had they chosen the modest daisy and gathered the flowers in the fields with their own fair hands, Mr. Edmunds would have had no occasion to criticise us. It was their ambition for the best, and the singleness of purpose with which they and their friends carried out this ambition, that made a flutter in the American Beauty market such as we rarely see except at Christmas and in the pre-Lenten rush.

The members of the American Seed Trade Association and their friends, returning from the Atlantic City convention, were royally entertained by W. Atlee Burpee, at Fordhook, June 24. A special train of seven cars left the Reading terminal at 10:50 a. m., carrying the party to the siding at the foot of Mr. Burpee's place, just beyond Farm School Station. They were received by Mr. Burpee and Mr. Earl, who left nothing undone that could add to their pleasure. The day was perfect, one of those glorious, sunshiny, breezy summer days, contrasting delightfully with the tropical heat of the four days preceding.

The farm at Fordhook consists of 200 acres, devoted to trial grounds and to the growing of flower and vegetable seed crops. The farm is beautifully laid out. A well-made road winds through the fields, affording many picturesque views over hill and valley. The grounds were in excellent condition, clean, well cultivated; the crops were thrifty and planted in a systematic way that made examination and comparison easy. Something over one-half of the farm is in flower seed; a large proportion of the balance is in tomatoes.

The central point of interest to many of the visitors naturally lay in the sweet pea patch, where were growing side by side the finest varieties of the day and, it may be, the finest varieties of the morrow. The average standard of excellence was higher than I have ever seen before. The colors were simply superb, the flowers large and borne on heavy stems. To see a flower that was not worth careful scanning was a rarity; to see a stem that had not four flowers was also rare.

There were many things of interest, including a fine field of wheat and an even finer kennel of Scotch collies, that barked their cheery welcome.

The day was one of great pleasure, the visit an inspiration, showing the result of genius, work and energy.

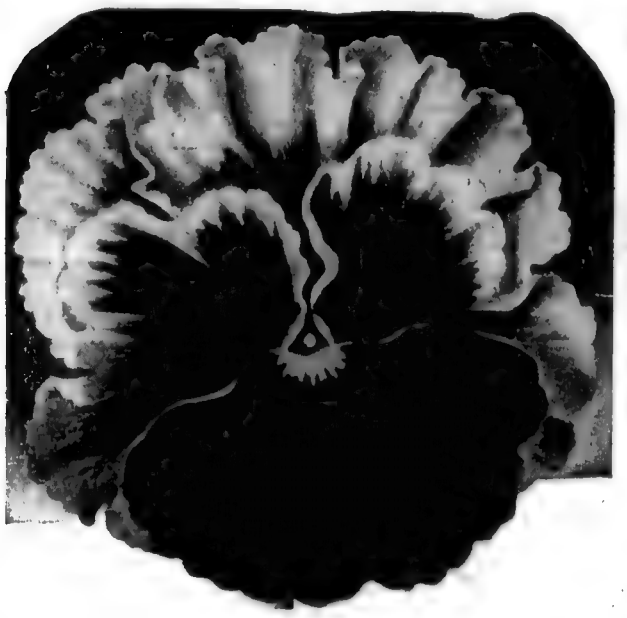
NEW YORK.



The Market.

The market is hardly worthy of the name. The summer heat and the advancing season together have left it without life or foundation. If there be any changes in values, the tendency is downward. Much of the rose stock arriving is mildewed, open and unsalable. At times last week the temperature hugged 100 degrees in the shade.

The present week opens with excessive humidity and nothing of importance is occurring to give it extra life, except the steamer and funeral work, which seems to be the only relief to the congested market. Some of the retailers say the orders for steamer flowers from out of town are numerous. All the outgoing steamers are crowded. Society has departed to the summer resorts and Newport is already doing a large business through the New York branches of the city's leading stores.

Apart from the best Beauties and other roses, no prices can be quoted. Beauties, when selected, bring good figures, but the quantity is so small the large stores contract for them before arrival. Killarney is still abundant and is demonstrating its worth as an all-the-year-around rose to the satisfaction of the growers. Asters are here from many sources, the first arrivals reaching the New York market Saturday, June 25.

Carnations seldom sell above $1 per hundred, and great quantities are disposed of by the street merchants at less than that figure retail. The best flowers have not exceeded $2 per hundred since the middle of June. Gardenias and orchids are abundant; prices and demand have fallen, and apart from the few weddings booked there is nothing to increase their value. Valley is down to $2 per hundred and lilies can be bought for 3 cents. There is again a great abundance of outdoor flowers, for much of which there is no sale. The shipments of ramblers are enormous. For the Roosevelt wedding great quantities of pink ramblers came from Wyncote, Pa.

The Club Outing.

The club outing to Witzel's Point grove June 28 was a great success. The weather was perfect, although a rain in the morning kept the attendance down. The committee had worked indefatigably. Several hundreds of dollars had been raised by contributions of prizes and a further sum had resulted from the publication of the 64-page souvenir program. Breakfast was served on arrival at the grounds, and dinner just before sailing for home. President A. L. Miller, in addition, treated 200 women and children to ice cream. The games and races were full of interest. The results were:

Baseball game, between the Benedicts and Bachelors, was won by the Benedicts.

Three-legged race—Messrs. Manda and Handel first, Messrs. Rigo and Jacobs second.

Sack race, boys only—Harvey Manda first.

Seedsmen's race—Al. Rickards first, Mr. Catt second.

The largest family at the outing was that of Mr. and Mrs. Einsman, consisting of ten members.

The outing committee consisted of Harry A. Bunyard, Louis Schmutz, John Birnie, Chas. Schenck, R. G. Wilson, Jos. Manda, J. K. Allen, W. G. Badgley, J. A. Rassbach, H. Weston and Phil Kessler. They did their work exceptionally well and so pleased were those who participated in the excursion that they made up a purse of nearly $100 for presentation to Harry Bunyard as an evidence of appreciation of his efforts.

Various Notes.

inspectors have delayed the completion of the new stores of M. C. Ford and George Cotsonas, so that it will be July before the finishing touches are put on. The contractors begin their rebuilding of the Saltford store at once.

Kessler Bros. will have their summer office at 52 West Twenty-eighth street until September. Their new fern, Dreyerii, a half interest in which they have sold to the Dreyer estate of Elmhurst, will not be on the market for another year. The Dreyer estate sold the property to a syndicate, reserving residence and greenhouses for five years. The property, which six years ago cost $14,000, was sold for $120,000.

Charles Millang has at Bay Shore, L. I., two acres for which he asks $50,000. Every florist on Long Island within a radius of fifteen miles of the New York market has a fortune in his land. Over in Jersey since the tunnels opened values have risen rapidly. One seedsman, who paid $1,100 for a lot 37x100 four years ago, can now get $3,000 for it. The population of New York now totals over five millions.

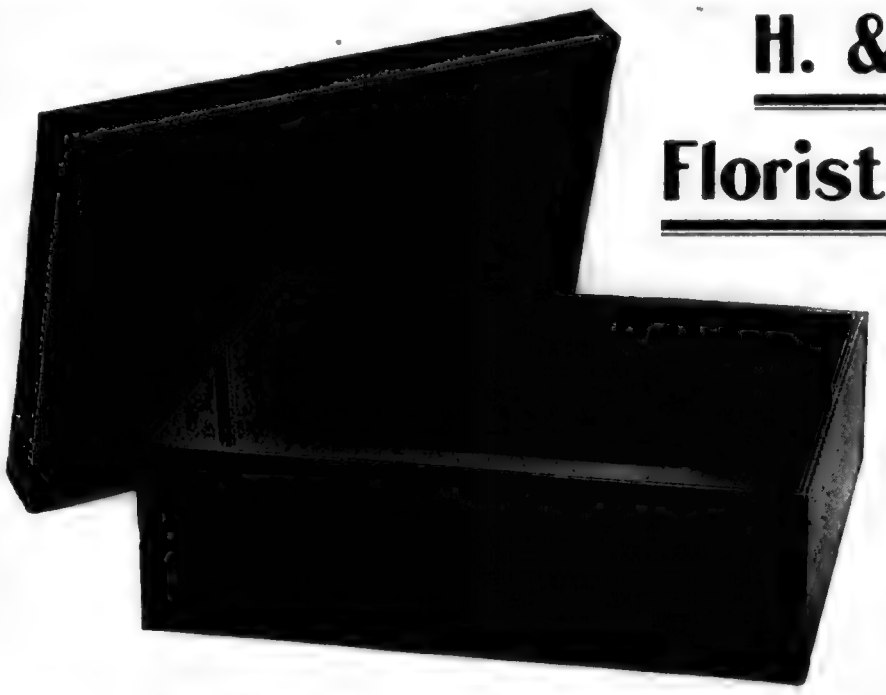
Mr. Miller, brother of A. L. Miller, is now associated with August Millang, at 41 West Twenty-eighth street.

The Dressel auction Monday, June 27, was well attended, Julius Roehrs, Anton Schultheis, Herman Schoelzel, Louis Schmutz, J. H. Fiesser, Mr. Schmidt, H. C. Steinhoff and several of the New York retailers being among the buyers. The stock was perfect and ferns, dracænas, palms and ficus brought good prices.

Henry Schmidt, of Union Hill, N. J., says he has 30,000 perfect plants of his specialty, Primula obconica, this season, for which there is a wide demand.

Julius B. Arndt has opened a retail store at Williamsbridge, Two Hundred and Twenty-fourth street, in the Bronx.

C. McTaggart, who ventured upon the seedsman's sea this spring, is now on the force of salesmen of W. E. Marshall & Co.



Both W. C. and Al. Rickards have, during June, canvassed their old territory and report unusual success and a splendid outlook for fall deliveries.

E. W. Wiles, Brooklyn, has removed to a commodious store at 39 Willoughby street.

A. Moltz & Co. find business growing fast since they enlarged their store and added all varieties of cut flowers to their rose specialties.

Andrew Wilson, of Summit, N. J., is traveling for the Wilson-Hoyt Co.

A. T. Bunyard has his share of weddings and steamer work and has built up rapidly a prosperous business.

The Market.

Last week was a somewhat trying one; but for the intense heat, however, business would have been quite good, owing to the numerous school and college graduations and commencements, in addition to a considerable number of weddings. The heat ruined many flowers and prices slumped all around, indoor roses being particular sufferers in this respect, it being almost impossible to cut and keep them in the bud state. Good Carnot, Kaiserin and Killarney made fair prices and nice outdoor hybrids were eagerly bought. Good Beauties sold well, but these were not abundant. Other roses were rather neglected. Peonies were a hard proposition, dropping badly even when cut partially open. The present week will see the end of these.

Carnations are rapidly nearing the end and such as are now arriving are of poor quality, with few exceptions. Fair prices are being made by good flowers. Other grades sell low. Sweet peas from outdoors are in abundant supply and now selling much lower. The present weather being cooler, these are now of good quality, the Spencer varieties still being the most popular. Lilies are ample for all demands. For valley demand has been good during the present month. Gypsophila sells fairly well. Stocks, candytuft, gladioli and a good variety of other flowers are seen. Some water lilies, asters and Cattleya Harrisoniæ are among other flowers noted. Demand for adiantum and asparagus has dropped off considerably, and the market will probably lapse into a state of midsummer dullness for some time.

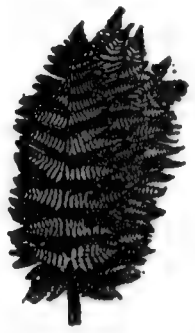
Various Notes.

John F. Flood, of Dedham, who recently bought the Mrs. David Fisher estate in Woburn, moves there to take possession this week. Mr. Flood will grow Asparagus Sprengeri, adiantums, carnations and bedding stock as specialties and will be a welcome addition to the ranks of Boston's trade growers.

Charles J. Harvey, of Needham Heights, who has had a seven weeks' siege of whooping cough, is once more to be seen in his customary place in the wholesale market.

Samuel Hudson, of the Harvard Botanic Gardens, leaves this week to enter the employ of W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., who are planning to grow orchids in the near future, in addition to their present lines.

Henry W. Vose, of Hyde Park, is sending in some of the finest outdoor candytuft we have seen this season.



William W. Edgar Co., of Waverly, is busy finishing the benching of chrysanthemums. The genial manager, Herman H. Bartsch, is hoping to attend the coming Rochester convention of the S. A. F.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, is starting to cut a fine lot of Cattleya Harrisoniæ. He is still cutting some of the earlier large flowering cattleyas.

E. O. Orpet, since June 21, has been visiting many friends in this vicinity before leaving to assume charge of his new place at Lake Forest, Ill., July 1.

James Wheeler has the work of glazing on his big new greenhouse well advanced. He hopes the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will decide to hold its picnic on his grounds another year and promises to extend all possible courtesies if they will do so.

Mrs. E. M. Gill was elected an honorary life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at the last meeting of the trustees.

The Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association, formed June 21, as exclusively announced in last week's issue of The Review, has succeeded in modifying the legislation of certain states against the importation of nursery stock from this state on account of the fear of introducing brown tail and gypsy moth pests.

Spanish and English iris have done wonderfully well outdoors everywhere here this season. Some shown at the late club meeting by Duncan Finlayson carried 24-inch to 30-inch stems, with blooms nearly as large as Japanese iris. The bulbs of these irises are so cheap, and do so well from year to year, that it is a wonder more are not grown. One well known gardener uses them in grass land, with excellent results.

Welch Bros. have done a fine June business and consider the season now closing to have been a most satisfactory one. P. Welch hopes to find time to attend the Rochester convention and say a good word for the Boston 1911 show.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Elliott held a reception at their beautiful new home at 120 Crescent avenue, Brighton, June 29, which a number of the trade attended. The same thoroughness is to be noted in his home as in his rose and asparagus enterprises, everything being thoroughly up-to-date in every respect and in most excellent taste.

June 28 brought a large attendance of gardeners and florists, in addition to many other friends, to Mrs. E. M. Gill's home, Ashland street, Medford, the occasion being the celebration of this estimable lady's eightieth birthday. Mrs. Gill preserves her years remarkaoly well and we hope she may still be spared for many years. She received many remembrances, including one of $80 in gold from a number of her friends in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. She is probably the oldest active lady florist in the United States and is thoroughly up-to-date, as her successes at the Boston exhibition testify.

We are pleased to note so enthusiastic a sentiment here in favor of the Rochester S. A. F. convention, and it will be some years since so large a delegation has left Boston. E. Allan Peirce is going to put time, energy and money into the securing of a thoroughly representative delegation, one which will be reminiscent of the old days, and all who have any idea of going should send their names to him without delay.

J. H. Shelton, secretary of the Northern Indiana Florists' Association, is engaged in mailing notices to the members and all florists of the northern part of the state to attend the regular annual meeting, which will be held at Winona Lake, Warsaw, Ind., Wednesday, July 20. At this meeting will occur the election of officers.

Mr. Shelton says this association is in the field to stay, having adopted new by-laws and constitution and taken out articles of incorporation under the laws of the State of Indiana.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Canterbury Bells.

Canterbury bells can still be sown if the seed has been overlooked. It will be better, however, if they are large enough for transplanting now. They want much the same treatment as digitalis. If sown in early spring, they get too big, producing huge plants which often decay badly in the fall. Not only are these Canterbury bells magnificent border plants, but their value in pots is not half appreciated. Grown in pots, they are vastly superior to outdoor stock, and will last a month in good condition in an ordinary dwelling house. The double varieties are too heavy, but the single and hose-in-hose (calycanthema) sorts are beautiful, especially the pure white, light pink and lavender shades. Potted up in late October, they can easily be forced for Easter, or better still grown cold and held for Memorial day, when well grown pots will sell on sight.

Brief Reminders.

Pick off any flowers which may appear on the azaleas planted outdoors; also pinch back any strong shoots.

As the hybrid perpetual roses pass out of bloom, cut off all faded flowers and seed pods and remove any Manetti or briar stocks.

The hybrid tea roses enjoy plenty of water during the summer months and a mulch of old decayed manure, now applied, will soon show beneficial effects.

Do not forget the young plants of stevia. Keep them potted along and grow outdoors. Pot grown stock is to be preferred to such as are planted in the ground.

Give the genistas a good shearing every two or three weeks to keep them thick and bushy.

Poinsettia cuttings will now root freely in a coldframe if shaded and kept moderately close. Flats of sharp sand should be used and when rooted they should be at once potted.

Look over the flats of freesias carried over. Pick out the bulbs in two sizes, the largest for flowering. The small bulblets can be sown thickly and will make fine flowering bulbs another season.

Use a good pressure of water through a spray nozzle on the gardenias to keep bugs in check. Avoid keeping the soil too damp, or the plants will soon show yellow foliage.

Look over the pot chrysanthemums thrice a week and pinch them. The single stems will want close attention also, and disbudding will soon call for considerable time. Select a bench at a time and do the work thoroughly.

Plant out any left-over geraniums or other bedding stock not now likely to sell. Do not forget to adorn the entrance to your own establishment, as too many do.

FOR SALE—Our greenhouse; 15,000 feet of glass, and one acre of ground in the city limits; street paved and sewer in and 10-room dwelling house; street cars run right by the door; a good place for a hustler. Mrs. King & Co., Ottawa, Ill.

FOR SALE—Greenhouses, 6000 feet of glass, well stocked; a good business; dwelling, one acre of land, hotbeds, sash; all in good condition and will be sold on easy terms. Address No. 243, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

FOR SALE—The George S. Shimer double greenhouses, located on Turbot avenue, in Shimer's addition, Milton, Pa., consisting of: One greenhouse of modern design and superior construction—38 feet wide by 190 feet long—15 feet high at center; one greenhouse 30 feet wide by 196 feet long—15 feet high at center; glass 12 in. by 12 in. and 16 in. by 18 in., all first quality and double thickness. Both greenhouses are equipped throughout with the celebrated Burnham steam heating system - patent ventilators and latest design sprinkling apparatus. Each of the two No. 840 Burnham boilers is of sufficient capacity to heat both greenhouses. The office and packing room is a building 21 feet wide by 21 feet long—with two stories and basement—has sleeping room with bathroom for attendant; is also equipped with steam heat and water, has excellent iron tubs for washing vegetables for market and extra water tank of boiler plate, 5 feet deep by 5 feet wide by 8 feet long. Mr. Shimer has simply taken account of the boilers, pipes, fittings, wrought iron castings, glass, etc., and placed on them prices away below those obtainable by any ordinary purchaser, ignoring such important items as costs of designs, specifications and the bulk of the lumber, as well as a vast amount of pattern, foundry, machine and smith work and skilled labor, which was done in his manufacturing establishment at a very great cost to him to bring the equipment of these greenhouses up to their present state of perfection. Upon application photographs of interior and exterior of entire plant will be forwarded out of town parties, who may be interested in buying—as stated in previous advertisement. I have a Milton purchaser for one greenhouse and its entire equipment, but no sale will be made unless both greenhouses are sold. These greenhouses are to be sold promptly, in order to permit the opening up of Fairview Avenue in Shimer's addition, and for this reason only are they offered at a great bargain to an immediate purchaser. For prices and terms apply to James Dickson, 410 South Front St., Milton, Pa.

FOR SALE—An excellent upright steam boiler, able to heat 5000 feet glass. E. Fryer, Johnstown, Pa.

FOR SALE—4 Kroeschell hot water boilers in pretty good condition, can be bought cheap. Address Weiland & Olinger, New Castle, Ind.

FOR SALE—Firebox boiler, hot water; shaking grates, used one season; complete and in good condition; F. O. B. on cars Evanston, $125.00. Gloede, Evanston, Ill.

FOR SALE—At a bargain, greenhouse, store, dwelling and stock complete; located on a main street of fast-growing Chicago suburb; best offer takes it; might consider renting. Address Owner, 731 Barry Ave., 1st flat, Chicago.

FOR SALE—Have 100 boxes glass, 16x24, double thick, A quality, for sale. What is it worth to you, subject to sight draft on delivery; spot cash? What's your offer? Intended to build but decided otherwise; all new glass. A. J. Boothman, Adams, Mass.

FOR SALE—10,000 ft. of glass on leased land on which the lease has 7 years yet to run; located near three cemeteries and have good trade; will sell all or take partner. Address Jacob Russler, 114th St. and Avon Ave., Morgan Park, Ill.

FOR SALE—Several miles of 2-inch and larger second-hand pipe in good condition, and at a bargain; advise us what you can use and we will quote you; will sell any quantity. Baur Gas Co., Eaton, Ind.

FOR SALE—Two second-hand water boilers in first-class condition, one for 6000 and one for 6500 lineal ft. of 4-in. pipe. Superior Machine & Boiler Wks., 840-850 W. Superior St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—Greenhouse establishment, in good condition, 22,000 ft. of glass; will sell with ground or will sell greenhouses and lease ground. For particulars address Fluegge Bros., 4840 N. Leavitt St., Chicago.

FOR SALE—We are changing our heating system from hot water to steam and offer for sale 3500 feet of 4-in. cast iron pipe, taken apart mostly in 20-ft. lengths, in good condition, at 7c per foot. Kring Bros., Fairbury, Ill.

FOR SALE—Or lease, in northwestern Ohio, greenhouse property between 10,000 and 12,000 ft. of glass, in good repair, in county seat town of about 7000 population; six-room cottage; plenty of water for the pumping; good retail trade with store in central location; 3½ acres of land; $7500; reasons for selling, other business takes all the time. Address No. 181, care Florists' Review Chicago.

FOR SALE—Floral and landscape business near large city in Wisconsin; good soil and water supply; buildings and greenhouse all new; including all stock growing, sash, horses, machinery, wagons, etc.; everything up-to-date; will sell on the most reasonable terms, cash for stock and personal property, balance as if you pay rent; write or investigate. Address No. 238, care Florists' Review, Chicago.

FOR SALE—I have about 12,000 feet of glass in Greenville, O., in two separate blocks of about 6,000 feet each; will sell one block or both; doing a fine retail business; will hold place for sale until August 1st, after that will sell or lease; reasons for selling, age and desire to travel; one of the blocks is devoted to vegetables, so will not interfere; this is a good chance for some one. James Frost, Greenville, Ohio.

FALL RIVER, MASS.

A largely attended meeting of the florists of the city was held recently in the store of Chatterton Warburton, on North Main street. There were about twenty-five present and it was voted to organize a society for the protection of local florists engaged in the business for the purpose of making a livelihood. They claim that there are others who have been selling and taking business away from them, who are not regular florists, and mentioned the park commissioners in particular. The new organization will be known as the Fall River Florists' Association.

The following officers were elected: President, Chatterton Warburton; vice-president, Edmund Lawton; secretary, John R. Pee; treasurer, John Cross. Meetings of the association will be held weekly.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

"One thing is certain. Providence is rapidly growing as a flower city. It is remarkable the difference that has come about in the last few years," said one of the oldest florists of this city a day or two ago. "I never expected to live to see such a volume of business in a single season as has been experienced here this spring; it has not been confined to any single dealer, but has been general. After an unusually busy winter season, we had what was undoubtedly the busiest Easter ever. Then came an equally big Decoration day trade and this last week the graduations. I think I am safe in saying the graduation business was fully double that of any other similar season in our history."

everybody. The graduations of all the public, parochial and private schools, not only in this city but in practically all the surrounding towns, were held during the week, with the result that more than 3,000 bouquets and baskets, ranging in price from $2 to $6, with a number of fancy baskets at $6 to $15, were required to meet the demand. Funeral work continues good, which, with receptions and private functions, made the week one to round out the season to big advantage.

Various Notes.

Robert Hunnick has accepted a position with one of the Maxwell brothers in Connecticut. He was head gardener for more than twenty years for Frederick W. Vanderbilt, at Rough Point, Newport.

John Cross, of J. & C. Cross, of Fall River, was in the city June 20 and reports the formation there, June 17, of the Fall River Florists' Association, with Chatterton W. Warburton, president; Edward Lawton, vice-president; John R. Pee, secretary, and John C. Cross, treasurer.

Charles Hunt estimates his damage by the hail storm of June 18 at upwards of $1,000. More than 600 lights of his glass were broken and much damage was done to his crops, both in the bench and in the field.

Swan Peterson has been quite busy with funeral and graduation work.

James Crawshaw, 403 Plainfield street, has sold his plant and business

Walter S. Nichols, Hampton Meadows, had thirty large bouquets for the Hampton Meadows fire company for the Firemen's Memorial day. He has been busy cutting sweet peas.

J. H. Cushing is taking orders for field grown carnation plants. He has about five acres under cultivation, over an acre being in Enchantress.

C. W. Morey, proprietor of the Woonsocket Hill Nursery, has been appointed by State Inspector Stene to represent the state in the spraying of trees in the town of North Smithfield.

Gardening and bedding out is about done for this season and there has been an unusual amount of it this year. Dahlias are about all out. Carnations in the field look good, the cloudy and rainy spell giving them a good start. Mums are starting well. W. H. M.

Seed Trade News

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THIS is the critical time for the peas; they are getting the other extreme from the weather that prevailed at planting.

WORD from the Lima bean district of California is of considerable damage to plants now in bloom by ravages of worms.

CHAS. MCTAGGART, who started in the seed business last winter at 123 Warren street, New York, has joined the forces of W. E. Marshall & Co., New York.

AFTER the Atlantic City convention, President J. C. Robinson, with Mrs. Robinson and their son, went to Granville, N. Y., for a visit with relatives.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of William James Nutting, senior member of the firm of Nutting & Sons, the wholesale seedsmen of London, England.

A. MILLER, formerly with Vaughan's Seed Store, is traveling now for the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago. W. W. Barnard, president, is on a tour of inspection through the pea country in northern Wisconsin.

REICHARDT & SCHULTE CO., Houston, Tex., are erecting a new building at their former location for ten years, 206-8 Milam street. During the rebuilding they occupy temporary quarters next door. L. B. Schulte, president and moving spirit of the company, is a member of the Houston Freight Bureau.

THE death of Seth Monroe Pease occurred at his home at Avon, N. Y., June 27, 1910, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Pease was born at Hamlin, N. Y., in 1841. As a young man he was in the employ of Briggs Bros., and later Hiram Sibley & Co., seedsmen, in Rochester, N. Y., but for the last twenty-seven years he had been identified with The Cleveland Seed Co., formerly of New York City and Cape Vincent, N. Y., but since 1904 of Avon, N. Y.

MERGER AT BOSTON.

An important consolidation of interests is said to be about to take place at Boston, where probably three seed houses will be merged into one large concern. It is reported that the merger will include the houses of W. W. Rawson & Co., H. E. Fiske Seed Co. and Schlegel & Fottler Co. and that it will become effective July 1. The merger is the principal topic of discussion in the trade at Boston. It is stated that Frank Murray, with Schlegel & Fottler Co., will go with R. & J. Farquhar & Co.

ATLANTIC CITY CONVENTION.

One of the Best.

The general opinion of the Atlantic City convention was that it was one of the best in the whole history of the American Seed Trade Association. While the discussions were meager, the sessions were full of interest. The real work always is done by officers and committees, and not in convention, and this meeting served, perhaps more than any other, to show how heavy and effective has been the work performed by the association's representatives in the interest of the whole seed trade. There has been a steady growth in accomplishment, especially in the last few years. As President-elect Page said on assuming the chair: "I am impressed, and I think you are, that for the last few years in particular this association has been growing, not so much in numbers as in its work, in its quality, and in its achievements. I believe that it stands for more today than it ever did before, and I see no reason why in the years to come it cannot stand for yet more and more."

According to custom, a straw vote was taken on place of holding the next convention for the information of the executive committee when it determines the place next January. W. Atlee Burpee suggested by wire Roycroft Inn, East Aurora, N. Y. "Am sure our

Assistant Secretary—L. H. Vaughan, Chicago.

Executive Committee—J. C. Robinson, of J. C. Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Neb.; S. F. Willard, of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, Pa.; Charles N. Page, of Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia.; S. F. Leonard, of Leonard Seed Co., Chicago; Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit.

Membership Committee—Albert McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati; Frank C. Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn.; S. A. Wilson, of L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis.

Endorses National Seed Bill.

At the closing session the subject of seed legislation again came up through the presentation of reports by Charles N. Page, of the committee on conference with the National Association of Seed Analysts, and of the committee on state seed laws. In the discussion Secretary Kendel said that his experience has shown that legislators are desirous of being informed on seed matters before enacting laws bearing on the subject, and he had received the thanks of the legislative committee in the Ohio general assembly for showing them a copy of the proposed bill and giving other information that was wanted. He was inclined to think that if the seedsmen will marshal their forces and go before the legislative committees and enlighten them as to what is needed, they will give a respectful hearing to the seedsmen. He had found them willing to listen in the Ohio legislature, and to do whatever they reasonably could. All that is necessary is to show them that we are straight and honest in our demands or requests, and that it is our desire to have such legislation as is enacted such that it can be cheerfully and fully complied with by business men.

Mr. Bolgiano stated that a bill had been introduced in the Maryland legislature which would have worked a hardship, inasmuch as it required a guaranfee, and when the seedsmen appeared before the legislative committee they found that they were, as was naturally to be expected, quite unfamiliar with conditions in the seed trade and the practical handling of seeds, and the result was that the bill passed was a most unsatisfactory one, but after explaining the matter fully to the governor he remedied matters by vetoing the bill. But it took a great deal of hard work on the part of the seedsmen to make the matter plain.

Mr. Hastings thought that while it was not wise to go around hunting for trouble in the way of legislation, yet as it is quite certain that the tendency of the times is to enact seed laws, it should be the part of the seedsmen who are the best informed on the conditions of supply and the practical methods of handling seed commercially to see that proper bills are drafted, and when satisfied that a proposed bill is a good one they should give their hearty support to it.

At the request of Mr. May, the bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. Mann, by request, February 8, 1910, and numbered H. R. 20,373, entitled "A Bill to Prohibit the Importation into the United States of Adulterated Seed and Seed Unfit for Planting," was read by Secretary Kendel, and on motion of Mr. May, the convention voted that the American Seed Trade Association endorse said bill.

To Carry on the Work.

C. H. Breck, for the committee on president's address, presented the following report:

We commend most heartily the excellence of the president's address and its completeness of detail, and we recommend especially for your consideration and action the following items, viz.:

First: That the committee to confer with the National Seed Analysts be continued, and we suggest that this committee be instructed while representing this association to act as harmoniously as may be possible with the seed analysts, in order that the best interests of seed growers, seed dealers and the public be conserved. We also suggest that this committee confer on important matters with similar committees or the officers of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association, in order that all seedsmen may be represented and the committee have the benefit of the wisdom and experience of the whole trade. And we further recommend that the treasurer be authorized to reimburse the several members of this committee for necessary expenses incurred by them in connection with their duties in meeting or otherwise treating with the seed analysts.

Second: That the same attorney be retained as counsel of the association for another year, until July 1, 1911, as was employed by it last year.

Third: That the president appoint in his discretion a member of this association in each state and the District of Columbia or in a neighboring state when we have no member in a state, who shall be called state correspondent, with whom our counsel may correspond and whose duties shall be to confer with other seedsmen of the state or neighboring states. He shall report to our counsel all legislative or legal matters of interest to seedsmen occurring in his district. The names and addresses of these state chairmen shall be printed in a distinct manner in the annual report of the association.

Fourth: In regard to the recommendations of the president concerning the division of the expenses and per diem of counsel incurred in connection with a call of a state correspondent to his district, we have to say that while we approve of the principle involved we do not at this time recommend action by the association further than that the president be authorized to order payment by the treasurer of one-half of such expenses when in his judgment the matter involved was of sufficient interest to seedsmen in general to warrant such expenditure.

Fifth: That the president be authorized to order payment by the treasurer of the necessary expenses of any committee incurred while on the business of the association, and not otherwise provided for, and for expenses and services of counsel in attendance on any committee or at the request of the president.

The recommendations were acted on separately and approved.

were called for, and N. B. Keeney, S. F. Leonard, J. C. Robinson, F. M. Clark and others responded with the latest news of seed crops in their respective parts of the country. This feature of the proceedings was so well liked that it was decided to make more of it at future conventions.

Leonard Vaughan presented the report of the committee on postal laws, referring especially to the matter of transparent packets for seeds that must be sealed. To the mail-order seedsmen this is exceedingly important and there was a lively discussion, participated in by Messrs. Burpee, Allen, Maule, Ford, Robinson, Page, Bolgiano and others, but no way out was offered except to comply exactly with the regulations, even if at considerable expense.

Presentation.

At the close of the convention everybody gathered in the hotel parlors to witness the presentation of a silver table service, suitably inscribed, to President Robinson. F. C. Woodruff made the speech. He said in part:

"This has been a strenuous year for the association, and it was fortunate, indeed, that it secured a man who has done as much for the association as you have done. I learned today what I did not know last evening, that many of the things which we enjoyed so much at the banquet last evening were due to your personal purse, and we owe to you an additional debt of gratitude on that account. We cannot attempt to discharge it by this gift, which amounts to nothing from a financial standpoint at all, but, sir, it comes from the hearts of this association's members, and we hope that in time to come, when you use it, it will bring to mind your many friends in this association, all of whom will bear with them the pleasantest recollections of your administration and of yourself."

Grass Seed Officers.

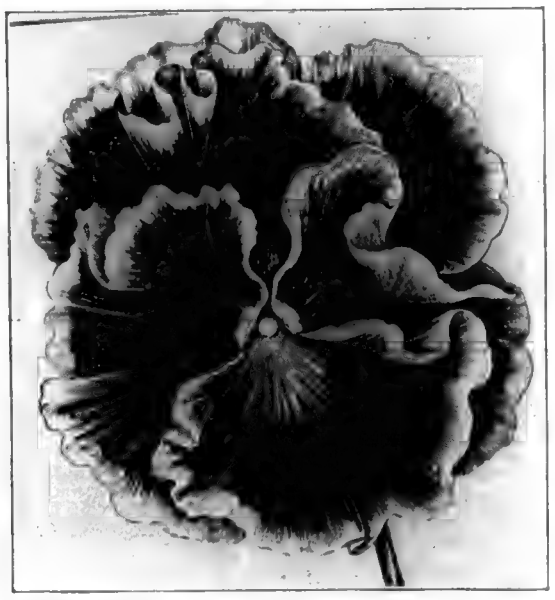
At a meeting of the directors of the Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association held at Atlantic City June 23 the following officers were elected:

President—Albert McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati.

Vice-president—Charles Boyles, of Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago.

Secretary-treasurer—J. G. Peppard, Kansas City.

The Visit to Fordhook.



Nearly 250 persons were in the party that visited Fordhook June 24 as the guests of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. Most of those who had been at the Atlantic City convention went over, but there were in addition a number of seedsmen from New York and other places and a considerable sprinkling of other guests, including many representatives of the agricultural press. The party went to Fordhook by special train from Philadelphia, provided by Burpee & Co. Anyone who knows the Burpee method of doing things knows the brand of hospitality that marked the day. On arrival at Fordhook the first thing was a reception on the lawn, where, among those who assisted Mr. and Mrs. Burpee, were Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Scott.

In the trial grounds a large part of the Burpee staff were at hand to explain the details. The grounds occupy some fourteen acres and this year contain some 6,000 trials, of which over 400 are sweet peas. It was stated that if placed end to end the sweet peas would make a row over three miles in length. Harry A. Bunyard, secretary of the Sweet Pea Society, was one of those who found this part of the grounds specially interesting, but aside from the trials, probably the most extensive in America, there was much else of interest to see, including the kennels, and the afternoon was far too short. The ladies were taken about the farm in wagons.

With appetites sharpened by the tour, luncheon, informal but bountiful, was served on the lawn, after which a return to the trial grounds was made to see the Skinner system of mechanical irrigation in operation.

As the hour of departure for the special train drew near, the guests gathered at the farmhouse, where in a neat speech J. C. Robinson expressed to Mr. and Mrs. Burpee the unanimous appreciation of the hospitalities of a most pleasant day. Mr. Burpee's reply was an invitation to come again.

VALLEY PIPS.

Writing from Wandsbek, Germany, in mid-June, E. Neubert had this to say of the prospects for the crop of lily of the valley pips in the Hamburg district:

"Last season's crop of valley pips was much below the average with regard to the quantity of pips. In some districts the crop was so very short that only one-third of the expected quantity of forcing pips could be harvested. This was a serious blow, not only to growers and dealers in this country, who could not procure enough to fill their orders, but also to American importers, who had difficulty in getting the necessary stock. In consequence of this experience, orders are going in very early this season from importers.

"As the outlook for the present crop is a good one, I expect a very fine crop, and also abundant in quantity. I believe that all orders can be filled. As, however, first selected crowns are the most demanded from all countries, the prices are at least the same as last season, and even higher for extra selected crowns, which are always quickly sold."

Mr. Neubert is said to be the largest individual valley grower in Germany.

THE ROCKY FORD DISTRICT.

"The Rocky Ford district of the Arkansas valley of Colorado is fast becoming the most important vine seed producing center in the United States," says H. D. Garwood, who is now associated with the Ebbert Seed Co. as secretary and treasurer.

"Rocky Ford long has been famous for the production of cantaloupes and cantaloupe seed, and is rapidly becoming famous for the production of all other vine seed crops, particularly for cucumber seed. The soil seems naturally adapted to the growth of these crops and, with irrigation to supply the water to the growing crops as needed, continuous sunshine and ideal harvesting weather, this district produces vine seeds of superior quality.

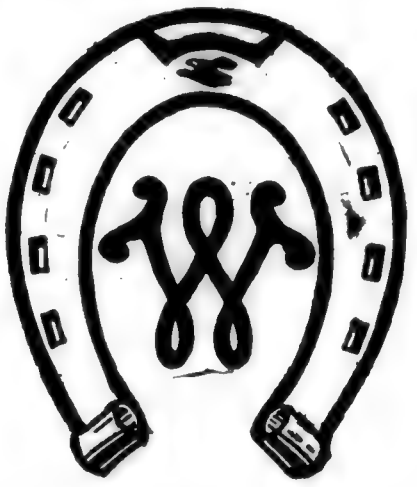
"That the trade realizes and appreciates the superiority of the vine seeds produced in this district is shown by the new orders coming in this season, and by the greatly increased orders of those who have been obtaining their supply from this district in the past; also by firms that have been growing vine seeds where they have had to depend on rainfall having placed contracts for every acre they could have grown here this season. As a consequence there are several thousands of acres planted to vine seeds this season, and the business is yet in its infancy. I predict that within a very few years the Arkansas valley of Colorado will be the greatest vine seed producing section in the entire country."

DISAPPOINTED.

W. Bay, florist at Titusville, Pa., sends one of the well-known government seed packets, purporting to have contained White Flat Strap-leaved turnip, and makes the following comment:

"It may interest you to learn the result I got from the congressional seeds. From the inclosed seed envelope I got in twenty-one days from planting a good crop of Rawson's Crimson Giant radish. The radish was good, but when you plant turnips it is somewhat a disappointment to get radishes."

SUCH IS FAME!



It is with interest that we read in a Los Angeles paper for June 9 that:

"M. Atler Burpee, one of the largest wholesale seed merchants in the United States, is a guest at the Van Nuys, registering from Philadelphia."

POLLENIZING CUCUMBERS.

I have been reading in The Review of June 16, page 46, the article under the head of "Cucumbers Do Not Mature," in which Z. & G. tell about the failure of their cucumber crop and are advised by The Review to keep a swarm of bees in the cucumber house. Now, I have had the same trouble as Z. & G., and evidently for the same reason, the lack of bees to pollenize the cucumbers.

I have about three-quarters of an acre in cukes, on land which I want to plant with carnations later, and I can not get a single cuke off the whole plat. So I have lately resorted to artificial pollenization, but what will that amount to, on so large a plat? Practically nothing. I am about five miles from the center of San Antonio, Tex., and have not seen half a dozen bees, and not one bumblebee yet. I think, however, that hereafter I will not have the ventilators in the house protected with netting, to keep the bees off the flowers in pots, for several reasons. One of my neighbors has just plowed about one and one-half acres of cukes under, for the reason that he could not get a half dozen cukes from the whole one and one-half acres.

St. Paul, Minn.—A. G. Ruggles, assistant state entomologist, says that cutworms are creating this spring more havoc than ever before, reports of damage reaching his office from all parts of the state. The best course is to plow infested land as late as possible in the autumn, in which case exposure to the rigors of winter destroys the cutworms.

Kills Weeds. Makes Grass Grow.

Has been used in almost every state in the Union with satisfactory results. Second and third orders now coming in rapidly from first buyers.

ORDER SOME AT ONCE FOR YOUR TRADE. WE GUARANTEE SATISFACTION OR YOU PAY US NOTHING. Send references.

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns it kills flat-leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours, and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich, green growth of lawn grasses, which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 square feet; 25 lbs. to 1000 square feet (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

The Market.

Last week opened with plenty of good stock, but closed with a noticeable scarcity of roses, excepting red. The quality of carnations has been keeping up fairly well for June. Our cool nights and mornings are a help to the carnations. Good snapdragons, Bride gladioli, candidum lilies, foxgloves and sweet peas are seen daily. Valley is scarce.

Palms are traveling around these days, on wedding and commercial business. Store and hotel openings were the order last week.

Various Notes.

Hoyt's gloxinias are still the attraction in lower Riverside. One basket of violet gloxinias and Bride gladioli, and one of the gladioli and garden heliotrope with Boston ferns, were features of a hotel opening. This firm has a fine lot of pansies for summer cut flowers. W. S. Hoyt is a pansy fancier. In connection with Mr. Burt, the landscape gardener, Hoyt Bros. have been clearing out the remainder of their bedding stock. Asters were scarce before the demand stopped.

High school graduates appeared this year in white shirt waists and were allowed to carry only one red rose. Beauties and Richmonds were the only ones used.

The Spokane Florist Co. had a pretty church wedding. A post was erected at the end of every fifth pew. A cluster of carnations crowned each one and garlands of green were draped to pillars at the side aisles. The chancel rail was decorated by a series of plaques of white foxglove, candytuft and daisies, connected by draperies of Asparagus plumosus. The altar was banked with candidum lilies. The reception room was decorated in Lady Gay ramblers.

The annual local rose fair was judged this year by S. Younkin, Miss Minnie Schaffer and Dr. H. L. Moorehouse. The first prize was for the best single specimen rose and Frau Carl Druschki won; Jacqueminot won second prize. For the best collection of white roses, Frau Carl Druschki won again; Chatenay for pink and Jacqueminot for red. The largest collection from one garden was shown from the Coeur d'Alene park beds. The first prize on the best arrangement was awarded to a table decoration which represented a span of the new Monroe street bridge. The span was of Jacqueminot roses, with a roadway and car tracks. The water was represented by a mirror under the span. An arch of roses over the table added to the appearance of the room. The rose fair has been relegated entirely to amateur growers.

Fred Winters and Eugene Szuchiewicz, of the Spokane Florist Co., were visitors at the Portland rose fair. They are enthusiastic over some of the decorations, the rose stock and the auto decorations which were shown in the day parade—one in wistaria with wired chiffon to match; another all in blue cornflowers, and a third in yellow, coreopsis, gaillardias and bronze maple leaves. The city decorations were in Nile green and pink. Mr. Szuchiewicz was especially pleased with the following varieties of outdoor roses: Florence Pemberton, the prize pink, a white with pink edge; Mrs. J. B. Clark, red; Mme. Rivoire, Avoca, Mrs. Peter Blair, Franz Deegen, Georgia Schwartz and Lady Roberts, all yellow; E. G. Hill, pink; also Mme. Melanie Soupert, Gloire de Guinoiseau, Wm. Shean, Mme. Wagram and Susan Moore.

We are being treated to much cooler weather than we had last week and flowers, as a consequence, are of better color and substance than they have been for some time. Roses, especially, show the results of the falling temperature and carnations are fully fifty per cent better than they have been for two months. The growers still show an inclination to keep the prices up to what they were at Memorial time, but the indications are that they will drop in price in a few days. We have had a good number of June weddings this season and the work has been well divided among the different shops, and these, with a good sprinkling of funeral orders, have kept the retailers busy. Outside stock is daily becoming more plentiful. Coreopsis, dahlias, gaillardias, gladioli, stocks and other such flowers sell well and are being used in large quantities.

Sweet peas are not as good as they have been and the stems are getting

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June 1911.

C. J. Maloy, of Ellwanger & Barry, was a visitor at Chicago June 27, on his way home to Rochester after a trip to the Pacific coast after the Denver convention.

Jac Smits, who has been in trouble with the customs authorities at New York, has been freed from the charge of presenting false consular invoices for importations of nursery stock.

C. F. Gee, eldest son of John R. Gee, a nurseryman of Bloomington, Ill., was drowned June 10 in Lake Washington, at Seattle, Wash., while boating. He had been employed by a grocery firm in Seattle since the beginning of last March.

B. E. Fields & Son, who were established at Fremont, Neb., in 1868, say the season of 1910 was one of the most peculiar in their experience. Everything in their section of the country is extremely late, but the spring season was fair, though not as good as usual. The present season is opening up well.

The business of the Pioneer Nursery, Monrovia, Cal., has been sold by R. H. Wilson to a company styled the Pioneer Nursery Co., of which A. Foster is president and Geo. H. Jackson manager. Mr. Jackson has been connected with the establishment for eight years, and during the last five years he has had charge of the ornamental and sales department. Mr. Wilson retires from active participation in the business, to devote his entire attention to the growing of deciduous fruit trees, which will be handled exclusively by the Pioneer Nursery Co. The nursery was founded by him in 1876.

RETAILERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Retail Nurserymen's Association, at its annual meeting held at Denver, June 8, reëlected the following officers: President, Charles J. Brown, Rochester; vice-president, F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; secretary and treasurer, Guy A. Bryant, Princeton, Ill.

TOO MANY VARIETIES.

[A paper by E. S. Osborne, of Rochester, N. Y., read at the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, at Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.]

The question of varieties is one that can be discussed from several points of view. The point that I wish to bring to your attention is the number of varieties that are listed by the different firms who issue catalogues. It seems to me that we are all inclined to catalogue altogether too many varieties of almost every class of stock.

Take apples, for instance. You can take a dozen different catalogues, count up the number of varieties catalogued and you will find all the way from sixty to 200. It seems to me that even sixty is altogether too many. How much better it would be for all of us if we could confine ourselves to, say, thirty or forty of the best sorts and eliminate all of the balance! It would make it a great deal easier for everyone connected with the business. It would reduce the chances for errors in both budding and grafting, as well as the errors that occur in filling the orders.

The Needs of Different Localities.

I appreciate the fact that it would be impossible to make a uniform list of apples of thirty or forty varieties that would fit every section of the country. I am also aware of the fact that our western brethren grow and sell in large quantities a number of varieties that are seldom sold in the east, while we in the east grow and sell a number that are never sold in the west. This, however, should not deter us from striving to reduce the number of varieties which we publish in our catalogues, as we can confine ourselves to the leading varieties sold for commercial purposes in the sections of our country where we do business.

I am of the opinion that this would be a step in the right direction and I hope you will consider the matter when compiling your next catalogue. In compiling our latest catalogue I kept this idea in mind and reduced the number of apples from seventy-eight to seventy varieties. I also realize that we could have cut it considerably more without injuring the value of the catalogue in any way and it is my intention, in our next issue, to cut it even further.

The same thing holds good with pears, cherries, plums, and especially peaches. On referring to a stock catalogue, I find 124 varieties of apples. We all know that it is almost impossible to get together every season such a large number of different varieties of apples, especially where a whole season's orders mean about twenty-five to fifty varieties that are sold only from one up to a dozen of these odd kinds.

Choice Lists Versus Long Lists.

I think the time has come when the people want quality, not only in the stock itself, but in the varieties that are offered for sale by the nurserymen, and there is no question in my mind but that there are large numbers of varieties that have little if any merit, that are sold every year simply because some firm catalogues them in order to have a catalogue that might lead the customer to believe that the nursery is an exceptionally large one, on account of the long list of varieties of different classes of stock. Take the grand total of trees that are sold for commercial purposes, and I think you will find that seventy-five per cent of the trees used will be confined to from fifteen to twenty varieties. I am speaking now of apples. If this be true, then the big majority of the long list of varieties that I am sure we all sell, are sold in small quantities of from one to five or six trees and in a great many instances the purchaser does not know the variety and could not tell it if he saw the fruit. The only reason he buys it is on account of the glowing description seen in some catalogue or because it is some variety his grandfather had when he was a boy. I am sure we would be doing an endless amount of good, not only for ourselves but for future generations, if we would strive to eliminate from our catalogues, and cease growing, all varieties which do not have a commerical or some distinctive value.

Lessons From the Sales Book.

I find, on referring to our spring stock book, that we sold 116 varieties of apples, not because we catalogued that many, but because our customers, from one source or another, had heard of the varieties asked for and insisted on having them. We can educate our salesmen to confine their sales almost exclusively to the varieties catalogued by us and, if we will all make an effort to reduce the number of varieties that we publish in our catalogues, the growing and handling of fruit trees in the future will be considerably easier than it is at the present time and has been in the past.

I have prepared a table showing just how the 116 varieties of apples sold by us were proportioned in the total sale of apples. I find that the seven leading varieties, which, by the way, were Baldwin, King, Northern Spy, Northwestern Greening, Stayman's Winesap, Wealthy and Yellow Transparent, represented forty-four per cent of the total number of apples sold by us. This represented six per cent of the varieties. The next eleven leading varieties represented twenty-seven per cent of the total apples sold and nine and one-half per cent of the varieties. The next thirty-three varieties, representing those that amounted to from 100 to 500 trees each, were twenty-four per cent of the stock and twenty-eight per cent of the number of varieties. The next lot, fifty to 100, represented four per cent of the stock and sixteen per cent of the varieties. The next figures taken were twenty-five to fifty of a kind and there were seventeen kinds, representing two per cent of the stock and fifteen per cent of the varieties. I find twenty-nine varieties of from one tree to twenty-five each, representing seven-tenths of one per cent of the number of trees sold and twenty-five per cent of the varieties.

A Benefit to Buyer and Seller.

I believe, from the above table, that we can easily get along with from forty to fifty varieties of apples, as you will observe that fifty varieties out of the total of 116 varieties sold represent ninety-five per cent of the stock sold, while the other sixty-six varieties represent only five per cent. I think, if you will take the trouble to figure over your own stock book, that you will find the same condition exists with you as does with us and I am sure you will find that it will be greatly to your advantage to eliminate those varieties that are sold in such small quantities. It stands to reason, that if the fruit grower who is growing stock for a profit determines upon certain leading varieties, those varieties are certainly the best and good enough for any person to plant for home consumption.

I hope you will give this matter serious consideration and see if you do not agree with me that we will be benefited if we all strive to reduce rather than increase the number of varieties catalogued by us.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

This has been a strenuous week for Indianapolis florists, as there were quite a number of prominent funerals that called for the best the market could give. Everything in the flower line was used. One of the prominent funerals was that of Mr. Test, the president of the National Automobile Co. A. Wiegand & Sons had this company's work, which was the largest seen in this city for some weeks.

Shasta daisies and gladioli are beginning to come in now and meet with ready sale. Killarney roses, Beauties, valley and orchids have been in demand for June weddings and for gifts for a number of prominent people who are going abroad this summer.

Our dry spell was broken by a rain that lasted all day Monday. It came none too soon, as the grass and flowers were beginning to feel the effects of the hot weather that we have had for the last three weeks.

Various Notes.

The Pahud Floral Co. is going to build two new greenhouses this summer. Charles Pahud reports that the newly purchased motorcycle is a success.

The committee in charge of the flower show met last week and formulated a premium list amounting to about $2,000. The list can be secured from A. F. J. Baur.

Robert Elder, foreman for Bertermann Bros., at Cumberland, is the proud father of twins.

S. S. Skidelsky spent a few days in the city this week. Mr. Skidelsky has just returned from his first trip to Colorado, which has been quite successful.

A. F. J. Baur is going to spend July 4 in Richmond, with relatives.

Fred Dorner and J. S. Stuart were in the city last week attending the flower show committee meeting.

Alfred Brandt has purchased a Maxwell runabout. Mr. Brandt is having a removable delivery body constructed and intends to use the machine both for pleasure and business. H. L. W.

WE TAKE THE LEAD!

IN WHAT?
WHAT A FOOLISH QUESTION!

Don't you know, haven't you heard of GODFREY ASCHMANN, the great importer and Philadelphia grower and shipper of this well-known everlasting green decorative plant, the Araucaria Excelsa Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca? We began 25 years ago with only 100 plants. Our 1910 importation is—

LOOK! LOOK!! 10,000 and more will be coming this fall, after I make my selection of the choicest on my trip to Belgium, the growing district of the world for ARAUCARIAS, AZALEAS, PALMS, ETC.

WELL INFORMED. It is well known by the trade that for many years past I have gone personally to Belgium to select for our customers the best of Araucarias, Azaleas, Palms, etc. What bargains can be picked up there for cash!

EMPTY HOUSES WON'T PAY.

Now is your time to fill your empty houses with something that will grow into money for you while you sleep. Araucarias will do it. Please look at our special low prices for superior stock.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings only (no seedlings), 2, 3, 4 to 5-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 12, 15, 18, 20, 25 to 30 inches high, 35c, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 6-in. pots, $1.00 to $1.25.

Seventeen Years' Experience Back of Our Methods of Palm Growing

Seventeen years and every year we have learned something new! Then it was only a small feature of our business; now we have several large houses devoted to Palms alone, in all stages from the little seedling plant to stately specimens in large tubs, such as we show here. Our men, some of whom have literally "grown up with the business," are real palm experts.

Such palms as we grow must be better than ordinary imported stuff—and they are, as any number of our customers will gladly testify. Ours are clean, vigorous, healthy, acclimated; you can depend on them to give satisfaction, to please your trade, to bring you more business. And yet, as you'll see, our prices are no higher than you'd pay for the ordinary imported stock.

Let "Heacock Quality" guide you in placing your next order—we will give you the benefit of the choicest selections from this splendid stock, and can make shipments promptly.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Last week, with its numerous commencement exercises, again proved to be a profitable one for the florists. In fact, several dealers were rushed on Wednesday and Thursday with that class of work. The extremely hot weather since June 14 has helped to reduce the quantity of good stock with most of the growers, so that by Friday it was not any too plentiful, while there was a raft of so-called junk which was at the mercy of the buyers. From present indications, even this class of stock will disappear in the near future, for replanting of roses is well under way, with carnations to follow in a fortnight. This hot wave also brought the local peonies into bloom in a bunch, as it were, and, after the unfavorable April weather, the lasting qualities were nothing to brag about.

The demand for valley was brisk and there was plenty to go around. Snapdragons did not sell as readily as they should have. Beauties, which are being grown for the summer trade, found ready sale. Green goods are becoming more plentiful from day to day.

Now that the schools are closed for the summer vacation, it will not be long before folks will go to their country homes, which means that the florists will also get a chance to have a few spare moments for recuperation.

Various Notes.

Will Kuhl, shipping clerk for the Holton & Hunkel Co., left on Monday for a week's vacation. At that firm's greenhouses, on Humboldt avenue, they were extremely busy last week potting a carload of imported palms, araucarias, aspidistras and assorted ferns.

Roy Currie, of Currie Bros., is the possessor of a new yacht, on which he intends to spend the Saturday afternoons and Sundays on Pine lake during the dull season.

The Wisconsin Floral Co., on Grand avenue, reports a decided increase of sales for last week over that of last year. As they cater mainly to transient trade, this is a good sign of prosperity.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. says it is surprising the way business has kept up. "Away ahead of expectations," is the way they put it.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. had an unusually active week, chiefly in funeral work and work for commencement exercises.

Visitors: Harry Balsley, Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. J. T. Hinchliffe, Racine, Wis.

WINTER BLOOMING STOCKS.

We intend growing some winter-flowering stocks to cut from about the first part of November and later. We intend planting them on a south bench three feet wide. The height from top of bench to plate being four feet of glass, the bench is slightly shaded by the next house. Would this be a suitable position for stocks? We would like some information as to varieties and culture. Could stevias be grown on the same bench? The temperature in winter in this house is about 50 to 55 degrees. J. S. & S.

The house should answer quite well for the stocks, but of course freedom from shade would have been better. The height to the plate allows ample headroom. Suitable indoor varieties to grow are: Beauty of Nice, delicate flesh pink, a lovely and popular sort; White Column, Crimson Column—these do not branch and can be planted close; they carry one strong spike of double flowers; Boston Florists' White, a fine variety; Empress Augusta Victoria, silvery lilac; Rose of Nice, carmine rose.

Sow the seed for the earliest batch about August 1. Pot them off singly, as they do not transplant so well from flats. Any good soil which will grow mums, violets or carnations will grow stocks. Allow the plants 12x10 inches apart, except the Column varieties, which can go 10x8. Pull out the singles as they appear. A temperature of 46 to 50 degrees is ample for stocks; 55 degrees at night is too warm. They will not stand coddling and must have plenty of sun and pure air.

Stevia could be grown on the same bench with the stocks. A colder house, 40 to 45 degrees at night, would, however, prolong its season. For a Christmas crop, however, the other temperature would be all right. C. W.

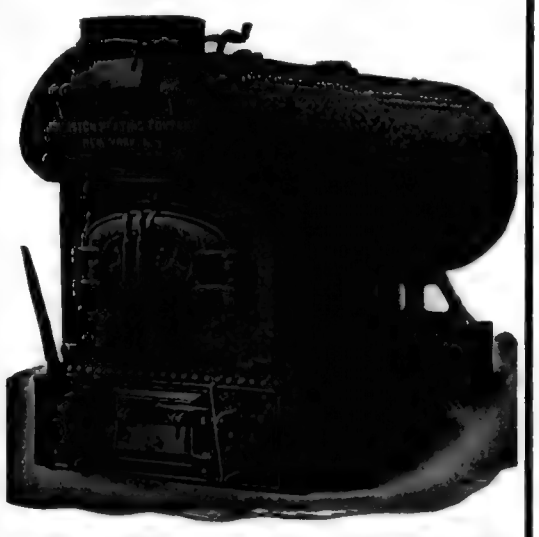
Greenhouse Heating.

HEAT FOR BEDDING PLANTS.

I am planning to build a greenhouse, 20x62 feet, and ten feet to the ridge, with 4-foot walls of concrete. I should like to know whether five 2-inch pipes would heat it in zero weather, for bedding plants. The house will run north and south. I am located in the southern part of New York state. H. F. B.

The class of bedding plants to be grown is not stated, but it is probable that a temperature of 50 degrees or more is desired. To maintain that temperature in zero weather will require at least 400 square feet of radiating surface, or six and one-half feet for each foot in length of the house. This would require at least ten 2-inch pipes, of which three or four could be flows and the others returns. A better way would be to use two or three 2½-inch flow pipes and eight or seven 2-inch returns.



DAVIS INVENTS A VALVE.

Aurora Grower Meets His Need.

At the greenhouses of W. B. Davis & Co., Aurora, Ill., there are in use over 100 valves of a style invented by Mr. Davis, made from his patterns and for which he has just been granted a patent by the United States government. It is both a globe and a check valve in one.

A large majority of the improvements in greenhouse construction and equipment have come about through the effort of some greenhouse owner to find or make an article to fill a need. Many a man in the business has become the master of several crafts through the part they play in the business of plant growing, and such is the case with Mr. Davis, whose firm has 100,000 feet of glass at Aurora. He is an expert steamfitter, and has worked out for himself a number of problems that could be solved only by one familiar with both ends of the business. His valve is shown in the accompanying drawing. Mr. Davis describes it as follows:

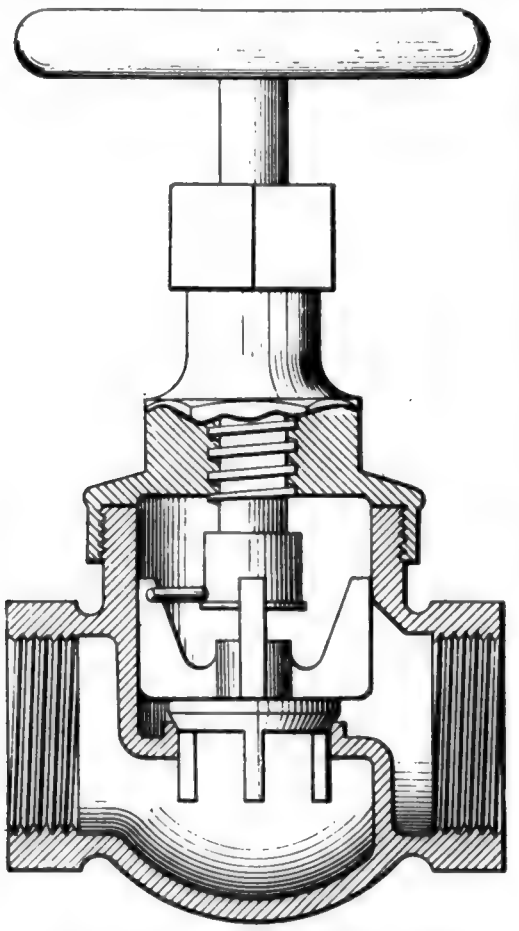
Description of the Valve.

"The valve is intended for use in steam heating pipes, to take the place of two valves, a check and a globe or a gate valve, where two such valves are now generally used together; also, wherever a check valve is used alone, such as on pipes carrying condensation from steam pipes to the return pipe, and on return pipes, or city water pipes, or pipes from traps or pumps where they lead into the boilers. In these instances and many others both a check valve and a globe valve are commonly and properly used.



"For those who are not fully posted, I will explain why both a check and a globe valve are now deemed necessary. The most important is the check valve, to keep the water from other radiators or pipes from backing up into a set which is not in use, and at the boilers on the feed pipes, to prevent water from the boilers backing up into the return pipes or into city water pipes. The globe valves are usually placed close to the check valve and between it and the return pipe or the boiler, so that in case the check valve gets out of order the globe valve can be closed and the check valve repaired, pressure being cut off from the inlet by the regular globe valve used to turn on and off that set of pipes.

"In repairing any broken pipes, or taking apart any of the pipes, a check valve is never to be depended upon, because of the possibility of the check valve not being in perfect working order and not closed tight. In such cases the unfortunate steamfitter is liable to get a bad scalding from the steam and water forced backward through the inoperative check valve, also permitting the water to drain out of the boilers suddenly, with danger of injury to the boilers. The risk is so great that a practical steamfitter will always put a globe valve between the check valve and the boilers.

"There is no kind of valve which gets out of order quicker than the regular check valves. This first nuisance, together with the extra labor and expense for putting in two valves where oftentimes there is barely room enough for one, set me to studying out something better and the result is my invention of a combination check and globe valve, two in one.

"This valve at first glance resembles the ordinary globe valve, but by referring to the drawing it can be seen that the disk or plunger is entirely free from the stem, so that when the stem is screwed upward, or open, the disk still remains on the seat of the valve, but is free to work up and down, just as an ordinary horizontal check valve, permitting steam or water to flow one way, but preventing it from flowing backwards. When the valve is left open, as it is ordinarily, it is simply a check valve, but when desired to close the valve, to prevent all passage through it either way, the stem is screwed down by turning the wheel handle, just as in closing an ordinary globe valve. When so closed the valve is then a globe valve, preventing a flow either way.

"When the stem is screwed down it strikes the disk and forces it to close down and holds it there, perfectly tight, at the same time causing it to turn with the stem, thus grinding out any dirt or scale which may have collected on the seat and making an absolutely tight shut-off. The turning of the disk is accomplished by having a stub projecting horizontally out from the side of the stem near the lower end. This projection strikes one of the guide points projecting upward from the disk and plunger and causes it to revolve whenever the stem is turned up or down. This same movement also prevents the disk from sticking shut, as the disk must turn and become loose when the stem is raised or opened up.

"The advantages this valve has over the regular old styles and methods are many. It will be cheaper, saving one valve and a nipple, also labor in each connection where it is used. It takes up less space in connecting, and heating pipes can be run a little nearer to the return pipe. It can be installed in some places where both a check and a globe valve cannot, for lack of space. It is better than a regular check valve because it can be put in working order almost instantly without taking it apart if scale or dirt collect on the seat, by simply closing down the handle and opening it again.

"Many growers now avoid using check valves on their heating pipes because they are not satisfactory. In such cases a globe valve is used, making it necessary, when turning steam into a set of pipes, to go to the other end of the pipes and open the valve to the return. In shutting off runs of pipe this valve must also be shut again, making much walking necessary.

THREE ILLINOIS HOUSES.

Will you please inform me as to the best arrangement of the piping in my three greenhouses? The houses run east and west and are 116 feet long. Two of them are each twenty-four feet wide and the north house is twelve feet wide. The outside walls are concrete. The beds are concrete and are one foot high. There is glass in the east end of the houses; the west end is protected by the office, boiler room and coal shed. I want a temperature of 60 degrees.

I have a forty horse-power Kewanee steam boiler and a Detroit steam trap.

J. R. F.

For each of the houses 24x116, use one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and ten 1¼-inch returns. The flows can be carried on the overhead brace rods and there can be three returns on each wall and two in each of the side walks, on the purlin posts. In the cool house, which is 12x116 feet, with an exposed wall of concrete, use one 2-inch flow and three 1½-inch return pipes.

boiler, carry a 3-inch pipe from the boiler, and from some convenient point 2½-inch flow pipes should lead to the wider houses and a 1½-inch pipe to the 12-foot cool house. For the return pipes from each house, 1½-inch will be amply large, and these should be connected to a 2-inch main return which should lead to the boiler.

Of course the flow pipes, as well as the returns, should be given a slight drop. Gate valves should be placed upon the flows and returns just within each house, and at least one-half of the returns in the coils should have valves at both ends. There should also be an automatic air-valve at the lower end of each coil.
